The Trundle Bed.

As I rummaged through the attic,
Listning to the falling rain
As it pattered on the shingles
And against the window pane—
Peeping over chests and boxes,
Which with dust were thickly spread,
Saw I in the farthest corner
What was once my trundle bed.

So I drew it from the recess
Where it had remained so long,
Hearing all the while the music
Of my mother's voice in song,
As she sung in sweetest accents,
What I since have often read;
"Hush, my dear, lie still and slumber,
Holy angels guard thy bed."

As I listened, recollections
That I thought had been forgot,
Came with all the gush of mem'ry,
Rushing, thronging to the spot;
And I wandered back to childhood—
To those merry days of yore,
When I knelt beside my mother,
By this bed upon the flo'r.

* * * * * *

Years have passed, and that dear mother
Long has mouldered 'neath the sod,
And I trust her sainted spirit
Revels in the home of God.
But that scene at summer twilight
Never has from mem'ry fled,
And it comes in all its freshness
When I see my trundle-bed.

Scraps.

NEW YEAR'S CAKE. One cup of butter, one of sugar, one teaspoonful of cream tartar, one-half teaspoonful of soda, and caraway seeds to the taste. Flour must be added till the dough is fit to roll—these require a quick oven.

MOLASSES COOKIES. One cup molasses, same of sugar; one cup melted butter, one tablespoonful vinegar, one of saleratus, one of ginger, one egg; flour to roll out easily.

We know of a man who fell from a bridge across a certain river, and just as he found he must go, and no help for it, he bawled out at the top of his voice: "Lord have mercy on me—and be quick, too."

It is the ordinary way of the world to keep folly at the helm, and wit under the hatches.

Miscellaneous.

The Little Idiot.

Oh, go away! go away! Take your book and put it out of my sight. You never will learn to read, and what is the use of fussing? There take your book and run away.

The speaker had begun in an angry, impatient tone; but the sorrowful look in the delicate little face caused her to soften it considerably at the close; and, as Arrah took the book and ran out of the room, she continued:

She will be glad enough, I fancy, to put the book out of her own sight. I always told poor Bella she had not intellect enough to learn to read; but mothers do hate to believe such things of their children. I had no faith that I should succeed when I began; but Herbert was so anxious to have me try.

And have you tried all you are going to?

There was a touch of rebuke in the mild tone of the questioner, and Mrs. Benton hesitated a little, and settled her widow's cap upon her head, as she replied:

Well, yes; at least at present. The housekeeper is really about as much as I can attend to, and it is as much as one person's time is worth to take care of Arrah's clothes; she is a very careless child.

That evening Mrs. Benton rather abruptly told her brother-in-law that Arrah could not be taught to read.

It is very evident, said she, that she has not intellect enough to learn; and in my opinion, it is just worrying her for nothing. She knew A and O when her mother died, and she knows them now; but as to getting any more of the letters into her head, it is just impossible.

Well, perhaps you had better let it go.

Aunt Willet, dear old lady, understood better the cause of his sudden loss of appetite, and why he gave such mal apropos replies to Mrs. Benton's remarks, as she went on complaining of servants, and discussing various household matters and items of business, with at least as much interest as she had shown in speaking of little Arrah. She noticed his taciturnity, and wondered if she had offended him; but she could not realize how much suffering her words had caused him.

The child is such a sickly little thing, she often said to herself, and so stupid, it would be a mercy if she did not live to grow up.

Aunt Willet took occasion, when Mrs. Benton had gone out to attend to some household matter, to suggest to Mr. Herbert that it would be no harm if Arrah did not learn to read right away. Mrs. Benton had not time to attend to her properly, and after two or three years he had better get a governess, who would give up her whole time to her.

The thought is a very good one, said he, and he resolved to act upon it; in the mean time, teaching Arrah a little himself. He soon gave up that attempt, however, for he was awkward at it, and Arrah appeared extremely dull; and quite against his will he found the agonizing conviction forcing itself upon him, that his only child, the namesake and living copy of a most fair and lovely mother, was indeed an imbecile.

So, like a silent spirit, Arrah, in simple white and long gleaming curls, flitted from room to roon, playing with her costly toys, and worshipping in a mute way the bright, sweet flowers in the conservatory.

Three years passed, and a person recommended as possessing every desirable qualification, was engaged at a high salary, to take charge of Arrah's education.

She is nine years old, said Mr. Herbert, and I think you will be able to teach her to read.

O certainly, certainly; I am sure she will learn very soon, said Miss Barber; and she proceeded to fit up the school room with every thing she thought necessary, frightening Arrah with a collection of blackboards, maps, globes, &c., and still more by the solemn air with which she laid down a code of laws for her future observance. Naturally enough, Arrah preferred the conservatory to the new school room, and finding this out, the governess locked the little door through which she was accustomed to go into it from what had been her mother's sitting room. Poor Arrah grieved about it for three or four weeks, and then the governess informed Mr. Herbert that she was very sorry to say that she did not think Miss Arabella could be taught to read. She had done all she could. A and O were all the letters she knew or could learn. So the school-room was locked and the conservatory door was unlocked, and Arrah returned to her old way of life; while her father, hoping against hope, reasoned, naturally enough, that if Arrah had remembered those two letters through all those years, she must be able to learn more. But, before another governess could be procured, poor little Arrah had the measles, and taking cold, was very dangerously ill. She continued so weak after her recovery, that all thoughts of getting a governess for her were abandoned for the time being.

Months passed on, and Mr. Herbert brought a new bride to cheer the home which the death of Arrah's mother had left so desolate. He had hoped that Arrah would be company and consolation for him as she grew older; but he gradually, and almost unconsciously, yielded to the opinions so often expressed by Mrs. Benton, that Arrah never would know much, and so turned to another wife for company.

Arabella is not very forward, said he hesitatingly, as he introduced her; and not long after Mrs. Herbert learned from Mrs. Benton, that, let them say as much as they pleased, she was nothing more nor less than an idiot.

Poor little thing, thought the kind-hearted step mother, I will try and make her as happy as possible.

Arrah soon learned to love the sweet smile and gentle voice of her new friend, and was always happy at her side, although she rarely said anything.

What is this, I wonder? said Mrs. Herbert, as she passed in a walk, through the conservatory. It is a very singular looking plant.

It is a Mimulus, said Arrah. Dennis says it is sometimes called Monkey-flower. Here is a small one of the same kind.

Mrs. Herbert was surprised, as she never before heard so long a sentence from Arrah's lips. She went on asking questions, and found that Arrah not only knew the names of most of the plants, but could talk quite intelligently concerning their different habits. Presently she stopped before a large box which had just been placed there. After considering for a moment, she darted out of the open door, and ran down the gravel walk to where the old Scotch gardener was at work. Seizing one of his big brown hands in both of her own, she drew him after her into the green-house. He took off his hat when he saw Mrs. Herbert, but Arrah dragged him along to the plant which had excited her curiosity.

Dennis, tell Mamma and Arrah what this is.

That is the Zebra-plant, Miss.

He spoke slow and distinctly, and made no further remark. Arrah looked attentively at the plant, and repeated the name several times. Finally, she said:

Zebra isn't a pretty name, Dennis.

He took hold of the plant, and made Arrah notice the green and white stripes on the leaves. As soon as he was sure that she fully comprehended what he was talking about, he told her that it was called Zebra-plant because it was striped like a Zebra.

What is a Zebra?

A Zebra is a little horse with a striped skin.

What! tell Arrah again.

A Zebra is a little horse.

Yes, a Zebra is a little horse. What else?

With a striped skin.

Yes, with a striped skin.

She considered for a moment, looking at the plant very attentively, and then she added:

Little Zebra-horse has striped skin. Zebra-plant has striped leaves. I expect little Zebra-horse eats Zebra-plant.

And she patted the plant with an appearance of great satisfaction.

Ye see, ma'am, she kens, said Dennis, turning in triumph to Mrs. Herbert. The bonny bairn kens vara weel; and, to my thinkin', them that ca' her fou' are like to be fous' their ainsels. She kens as much as any one.

I see she is quite intelligent about the plants. I suppose because she is interested in them, said Mrs. Herbert, seeing that Arrah was not observing them, being quite taken up with the plants.

Aye, aye, said Dennis, that she is; and had her ain mither lived to have tocht her wi' patience, she wud na ha' been ca'd an idiot then, I'm thinin'; and if ony one wad tak' a mither's interest in the puir bairn now, it wad a' be richt wi' her yet. I canna' raise choice plants, ma'am, without plenty of care, to say nothing of air and sunshine.

The broad hint of the shrewd old Scotchman was not lost upon Mrs. Herbert, and she watched prayerfully for opportunities to cultivate the germ of intellect she saw in that clouded mind. When the long-silent piano was tuned, and its rich chords echoed through the lofty rooms, Arrah's delight was unbounded. She danced up and down the parlors, keeping perfect time with the music, laughing and clapping her hands in ecstacy. Mrs. Herbert, fearful of the effect of so much excitement, would have closed the instrument, but Arrah begged to have it left open, and finally tried the keys with her own slender fingers.

Six months later, Mr. Herbert came home one evening with a cloud upon his brow. A bookseller had pressed upon his notice some delightfully attractive children's books, and his heart ached because he could not buy them.

He sat reading the newspaper, when she came, and leaning on his shoulder, looked over with him. Presently she placed her small forefinger on the page, and began to read slowly, hesitatingly, but correctly, a little story for children. He listened in delighted surprise until she had finished, and then exclaimed:

Why, my daughter, who taught you to read?

Mamma did! and I can play the piano, too, I am not an idiot any more.

My child who ever told you that you were an idiot?

Oh! I have heard Aunt Benton say so a great many times; but I am not, for I can read.

No, indeed, you are not. There is the teabell. Mamma, don't you think it is about time for this great girl to have done eating in the nursery? She is almost eleven years old.

There was an amused smile around Mrs. Herbert's mouth at this evidence of the sudden rise Arrah had made in her father's esteem, as she answered:

Yes, I have been thinking so for some time.

Accordingly, Arrah was given a seat at the table with her parents, and her father watched her movements quite akin to those he might be supposed to have if she had been suddenly restored to him, after having been lost for a long time. After she had gone to bed, Mrs. Herbert told her father all about old Dennis's opinions, as expressed in the conservatory; Arrah's delight upon hearing the piano, and her attempts to play herself.

I soon, discovered, said she, that she had a good ear for music, and I taught her to play several little tunes and sing the words. Presently she became very much interested in the sheet music, and I told her that would do her no good until she could read. She ran away and soon returned with a little book her own mother had used in teaching her. She laid it on my lap, and pointed out A and O. I thought if she had remembered these two letters so long, she could learn more. I began with the word method; and it took a whole week to teach her the relation between the two words, dog and cat, and the objects which they represent. After that I had comparatively little trouble. She learns slowly, but she never forgets anything, and in time I think she will make a good scholar. She is beginning to learn to write now.

Why did you not tell me before?

Oh, I thought you would find it out, just as you have. It would have tried your patience somewhat to have watched her progress from the first.

Mrs. Herbert was a handsome as well as an amiable lady, but had she been shrewish as Xantippe, and ugly as "Muckle Mou'd Meg," her husband would have seen nothing but perfection in her after this. His song of thanksgiving took the shape of choice and costly gifts for his wife; any quantity of pretty books for Arrah, and a large new Bible for Dennis, who was as much surprised as pleased at the gift—because, honest old man, he hardly realized himself, much less suspected that his master knew of his instrumentality in bringing little Arrah's hidden intellect to light. Nevertheless, from that day he took great delight in hearing her read the words of inspiration when his day's work was done.

Ten more years passed away, and the gem, which it had cost so much time and labor to polish, shone gloriously in a most lovely setting.

No daughter ever comprehended better any business perplexity her father might get into—and showed more accurate judgment in helping him straighten his accounts, or wrote better home letters to soothe the anxiety of her absent parent. No elder sister ever gave more patient and tender love, or wiser and more careful instruction, than did Arrah, to the little group around her mother's knee. No drawing room belle ever entertained her friends with better grace, and more sound sense, than she could. Her conversation was always pleasant, and although she never attempted any brilliant flashes of wit, there was a quiet vein of humor running through her thoughts, which pleased without wounding any one by any undue sharpness.

She had a rich and powerful voice, and great musical talent, and her playing and singing would put to the blush many a professional performer, and altogether eclipsed the best in the crowd of amateurs to be found everywhere. Her piely was not a conspicuous thing because it pervaded her whole intellectual and moral being, and was so essentially a part of herself, that no one could separate it from anything she did.

She was quiet and retiring as was consistent with her father's position and her own prospects as a considerable heiress, but she had her full share of suitors, and the eve of her twenty-first birth day was also the eve of her wedding-day.

George Osborne sat by her side, as the sun was going down, too full of happiness at the thought, that the morrow would make her wholly his own, to say much; but he fastened on her fair arm a pearl bracelet, on the clasp of which were engraven the initials of her future name.

A O, said she, as she looked at it. Is it not a little singular that I learned those two letters when I was only five years old, and I never learned another until I was nearly eleven?

Is it possible! I always supposed you were one of those little prodigies of whom parents are so proud.

Not at all. On the contrary, I was so dull that Aunt Benton always said that I was an idiot—and every one seemed to agree with her except old Dennis. He always contended that I would, in time, be as smart as anybody; and, when my step-mother came, he expressed his opinion pretty freely to her. She studied the peculiarities of my mind, and I grew, under her care, like a flower in the sunshine.

Old Dennis deserves a pension.

So he does—and I shall always associate his kindness with Mamma's careful consideration—which saved me from growing up an idiot, and made me fit for you, George.

You never was an idiot, and you was always designed for me. Your learning A and O so early, proves that.

The sun went down, and rose again in unclouded splendor, to usher in the first day of Arrah's new life; a life in which, as years passed on, Arabella, a most happy wife and mother, showed in her sensitive care for the minds of her children, the only remembrance of Arrah, the little idiot.

For the Patriot.

Rambles Abroad.

LEAVES FROM A TOURISTS' JOURNAL—NO. 2.

The bells of Birkenhead Priory were ringing their Sabbath morning chimes as we entered the harbor at Liverpool. The scenery along the Mersey is beautiful, although the water of the river is muddy—which verifies the poet's declaration that

"The quality of mercy is not strained."

The forenoon of the Sabbath was occupied in the Custom House examination—but we were able, to enjoy a six o'clock service at Great George's Chapel, where we heard the celebrated Dr. Raffles preach. After a hasty glance at the Docks—covering over two hundred acres, with a river wall of five miles.—St. George's Hall with its organ of eight thousand pipes and one hundred and eight stops, and other public edifices, we turned our course towards the English Lakes, then in their midsummer loveliness. They are, as Harriet Martineau has termed them, "The paradise of England." The first evening after our arrival, with my companion—a Boston Clerk—I enjoyed a pull on Windermere, the queen lake—largest of the seventeen. Before us, embowered in trees, was the pretty village of Bowness; further on, the former homes of Mrs. Hemans, Wordsworth and Professor Wilson; while all about us rose a grand amphitheatre of mountains clothed in a soft, hazy light, rosy with the beams of sunset.

"I had heard that humid skies did ever weep
In merry England, and a blink of joy
From their blue eyes was like a pearl of price.
Mine own are sunnier: but oft-times
There came a day so exquisitely fair,
That, with its radiance and its beauty,
It made the senses giddy.—SIGOURNEY.

Such a day was that when we took "a fly"—a small, but handy vehicle, and made an excursion in this charming neighborhood. Ten miles from our hotel are the ruins of Kendal Castle, once the residence of Catherine Parr, sixth wife of Henry VIII. As this was the first ancient ruin we had met with, we gazed upon the mouldering walls overgrown with ivy with new and strange emotions. In the court yard were grazing animals. Wild flowers grew on the spot where three centuries ago merry feet joined in the dance to the music of the viol and harp. Here, thought I, from this window where I stand, other eyes once enjoyed this charming outlook on valley, river and mountain, and through these shady walks, others rambled who are now forever gone. Soon after the cars hurried us on towards Edinburgh. At Lancaster we had a glimpse of the Castle of John of Gaunt. At Gretna Green we remembered the fugitive lovers who were wont to resort thither to the hymeneal altar in days of yore. A glimpse of the Solway reminded us that "Love flows like the Solway,

But ebbs like its tide."

At Lockerbie I seemed to hear, as it were, the click of Old Mortality's hammer and chisel, deepening the records of the Covenanters as left on their crumbling gravestones. The mode, however, of entering Scotland, and the rapidity of transit from one place to another, robs one of the vividness of impression expected. How strange to see the railway pushing its course under the battlements of castles or through ancient court-yards, and to hear the steam whistle echoing among the hills and glens where once Clan Alpine's warriors roamed! So is it everywhere in the Old World. The past and present are embodied in visible forms; the one hoary with age and full of romance, the other instinct, with life and ceaseless activity.

Anchored His End.

Mr. Bildad Jones, mate of the Connecticut schooner Sally Anne, walked aft and addressing the captain:

Captain Spuner, if you keep the skuner on this course, you'll have her hard aground on the flats.

Whereupon the captain replied:

Mr. Mate, you just go for'ard and 'tend to your part of the skuner, and I'd 'tend to mine.

Bildad went forward, let go the anchor, walked aft and reported, Captain Spuner, my part of the skuner is at anchor!

A Settler.

The Hudson Star relates the following creamy joke upon a skim-milk incident:

A young gentleman of this city, while out of town, stopped at the hotel, not a hundred miles from Clavarack, to rest and refresh his horse. He concluded he would take supper and called for a bowl of milk. It was placed before him and he commenced lifting spoonsfuls up and then pouring them back to the bowl, and making other demonstrations of dissatisfaction at his fare. Finally, calling the waiter girl to him, he asked her if the milk had been skimmed? Yes, sir; we always skim our milk before we feed it to the calves. Our city gentleman wilted. He tells the story himself, and allows that the girl is a trump.

Importance of Exercise.

For the preservation of health, exercise is of the utmost importance. Respiration, circulation, digestion, secretion, and all the bodily functions assisted by it; causing at the same time clearness of mind and cheerfulness of heart. The evil results of the want or deficiency of exercise are seen in persons of indolent life or sedentary habits. Indigestion, costiveness, congestion, and a multitude of chronic maladies are produced besides the general derangement and discomfort of the whole system under which nervous and hypochondrical patients suffer. The robust health commonly enjoyed by the working classes, compared with those engaged in sedentary pursuits, is chiefly owing to their bodily labor. In every period and occupation of life, exercise is essential to health but most of all in the young.

A Beautiful Reflection.

Bulwer eloquently says: "I can not believe that earth is man's abiding place. It can't be that our life is cast up by the ocean of eternity to float a moment upon its waves and then sink into nothingness! Else, why is it that the glorious aspirations, which leap like angels from the temple of our heart, are forever wandering about unsatisfied? Why is it that the rainbow and clouds come over with a beauty that is not of earth, and then pass off and leave us to muse upon their favored loveliness? Why is it that the stars, who hold their festival around the midnight throne, are set above the grasp of our limited faculties, forever mocking us with their unapproachable glory? And, finally, why is it that bright forms of human beauty are presented to our view, and then taken from us, leaving the thousand streams of our affection to flow back in Alpine torrents upon our hearts? We are born for a higher destiny than that of earth; there is a realm where the rainbow never fades—where the stars will be spread before us like islands that slumber on the ocean—and where the beings that pass before us like shadows will stay in our presence forever."

The Earth.

The hollow ball on which we live contains within itself the elements of its own destruction. Within the outer crust—the cool temperature of which supports animal and vegetable life, and solidifies the stone, coal and metalic ores so important to our well-being—there exists a mass of fluid igneous matter. Some of this matter occasionally escapes through the mouth of a volcano, or makes its presence felt by an earthquake. But neither the earthquake nor the volcano are necessary to prove that fire exists in the earth. At the depth of twenty-four hundred and eighty yards, water boils; lead melts at the depth of eight thousand four hundred yards. There is a red heat at the depth of seven miles—and if we adopt the temperature as calculated by Morveau's correct scale of Wedgeworth's pyrometer, we find that the earth is fluid at the depth of one hundred miles.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Jan. 17th, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

THE BALL IS IN MOTION—KEEP IT ROLLING. Our citizens generally, were much pleased with the notice of Mr. John O. Holden, of last week, which enabled them to send small parcels to their friends in the army at a moderate expense. Four large boxes and one barrel were made up on Wednesday last for Captain Spear's Company; and for the Quincy Boys in Captain Hunt's Company, there were some eighty bundles and boxes directed to different individuals. As the good work has begun, we hope it will be followed up; and that every four weeks we shall have the pleasure of recording similar results. The 14th, 18th, and 48th Regiments and our friends in other Companies, should not be forgotten—they, too, have a claim on our sympathy; here is a wide field for our charity—let us not weary in well doing.

Freightage expenses ranged from fifteen to seventy-five cents each parcel, according to weight. Much credit is due Mr. Holden for starting it.

One bundle was made up for all hands round, including the cook; it contained two quarts of parched corn from little "Georgey" Wilson.

DEATH OF YOUNG PARKER. Intelligence was received here during the week, of the death of Lorenzo D. Parker, son of Alvin Parker, of this town; he died of chronic dysentery, on his passage from New Orleans to New York, in the ship Fenlon.. He was a member of Company H, 30th Massachusetts Regiment, and was highly esteemed by his companions in arms, for his many social qualities and soldierly bearing. He was 20 years and one month old, at the time of his decease. His mourning friends have the consolation, that although removed hence, his memory is enbalmed in the hearts of his countrymen.

Letter from Company D.

CAMP AT POOLSVILLE, MARYLAND, January 6, 1863.

To Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, J. G. Brackett, Mrs. W. S. Perry and others.

Appreciating the kindness of the people of Quincy in furnishing us with a Christmas dinner, it is with pleasure that we acknowledge the receipt of the same. An unexpected change of Camp prevented our receiving the boxes, at the time designed by you; but though delayed for a while, they reached us on the last day of the old year, in a tolerable state of preservation. The articles were distributed on New Year's day, according to your directions; our Quincy brethren of the Regiment and Brigade, sharing equally with us, the offerings of your generous hearts.—Through you, ladies and gentlemen, the Committee of the people of Quincy, we, the officers and Members of Company D, of the Thirty-Ninth Regiment, beg leave to return our sincere thanks to those loving parents, wives and friends, who, with such substantial sympathy, have remembered us in our exile. Rest assured, dear friends, that though these presents make us think of home, and a wish escapes us to be with our loved ones—yet the duties we owe to our country, its preservation, its integrity, make us willing soldiers. This kindness nerves us to strike with the strong arm, the foe. God grant us victory! All that brave men, and willing hearts can do, will be done. Permit us here, however, to correct an impression, which we judge by your letter, is honestly entertained by many of our friends in Quincy, viz: that we have at any time suffered for the want of the necessaries life. 'Tis true, that at times, we have been subjected to inconveniences, unavoidable in a soldier's career. Of such trifles, no true soldier ever complained. The impression must have had its birth in the sympathetic hearts of our friends at home, too anxious for our welfare. Trusting that another New Year's day, may behold us all in the full enjoyment of the inestimable blessings of peace. Our country united—our Flag unshorn of a single Star! We beg leave to subscribe ourselves, in the behalf of the Members of Company D. Respectfully yours,

E. A. SPEAR, Captain Co. D.
WM. G. SHEEN, 1st Lieutenant.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, JANUARY 15, 1862.

The Message last week of Governor Seymour to the New York Legislature, has been extensively commented by the press. He considers the prime movers of our civil war, as belonging both to the North and South; he goes hard against the suppression of free speech or the public press, and the imprisonment of persons for political opinions. He declares that the President's Emancipation Proclamation is impolitic, unjust and unconstitutional, calculated to create many barriers to the restoration of the Union. He says:

"We must not wear out the lives of our soldiers, nor exhaust the earnings of labor by a war for uncertain ends, or to carry out vague theories. The policy of subjugation and extermination, means not only the destruction of lives and property of the South, but also the waste of the blood and treasure of the North.

"The exertion of armed power must be accompanied by a firm and conciliatory policy, to restore our Union with the least possible injury to both sections."

The Governor concludes as follows:

"At this moment the fortunes of your country are influenced by the result of battles. Our armies in the field must be supported. All constitutional demands of our General Government must be promptly responded to. Under no circumstances can the division of the Union be conceded. We will put forth every exertion of power. We will use every policy of conciliation—we will hold out every inducement to the people of the South to return to their allegiance consistent with honor; we will guarantee them every right, every consideration, demanded by the Constitution, and by that fraternal regard which must prevail in a common country, but we can never voluntarily consent to the breaking up of the union of these States, or the destruction of the Constitution.',

All classes of Union men agree with Governor Seymour that the Union should be preserved and the Constitution upheld—although they may differ as to how it is best to accomplish these ends. The Union is now trembling on the verge of dissolution, and the people should rise above political party, with one firm resolve to use all strength, power, motive and purpose to save the National integrity, the National life.

The news of our Southwestern reverses since the first of the month is most unwelcome intelligence; but not of so serious character as some would imagine. The Union defeat at Vicksburgh is conceded, but there is every prospect that the place will soon be retaken and the tables of victory turned in our favor. General Banks knows what he is about, and we shall soon hear from him in the sounds of victory. The General intends taking a look at the Mississippi as far as St. Louis, and to brush off the cobwebs in the way that obstructs the free navigation of the "Father of Waters." And he will do it. That river once more open to commerce, a great business re-action will follow.

We are told that on the night preceding the first instant three Rebel rams came down to Galveston and attacked the Union Gun boats stationed off the city. The result is tragic. Commodore Renshaw, of the Steamer Westfield, Commodore Wainwright and Lieutenant Lee of the Steamer Harriet Lane, Lieutenant Commander of the Gunboat Owasco and Lieutenant Gimmerman, are reported killed; the Westfield was blown up to prevent her falling into the hands of the enemy, and the Harriet Lane was captured. Having destroyed the fleet, the rebels attacked the town, killing and taking prisoners the entire garrison, of two hundred and fifty troops, said to be of the Forty-Second Massachusetts Regiment, lately sent there. It will be recollected that this Regiment went to New Orleans with General Banks. Colonel Isaac S. Burrill, the Commander of the Regiment, was formerly Post Master of Roxbury. The Companies under him captured at Galveston, were Company D, of Roxbury, Captain Sherive, Company G of Boston, Captain Proctor, Company I, of Dorchester, Captain Savage, and Company J. A fearful uncertainty hangs over the fate of these brave men, and many hearts are now sorrowing.

Since my last, the organization of the State Legislature has been completed. Hon. Jonathan E. Field, of Stockbridge, is President of the Senate, and Hon. A. H. Bullock, re-elected as Speaker of the House. The machinery of legislation will hardly be in running order until the announcement of the Standing Committees. Mr. Sumner will be re-elected United States Senator the present week.

The ovation to General Butler by the citizens of Boston, on Tuesday, was quite enthusiastic; but his sudden political conversion, makes many of his old friends shy of him.

Evening: All is quiet on the lines of the Potomac army.

The latest political news from Europe to January 3, is unimportant. Notwithstanding the bad aspects of the war, Boston is quite lively, and business good for winter. X

A CURIOUS FACT. It is curious to note that the vessels which have been noted for their fights in this war have been destroyed in other ways than in battle, as will be seen by the following list: Mound City, blown up; Arkansas, blown up; Monitor, floundered; Merrimac, scuttled; Cairo, exploded.

We took aboard our pilot about half past eight, this morning, and in a few moments we were steaming by the Fort, through the Narrows, out to sea. We were busy all day in packing up our things, and having a good time generally. As night came on, some complained of being a little sea-sick; the clouds began to gather, and the winds commenced blowing quite fresh. The rain soon began to fall, and we were put down in the hole between decks; and such a scene—over three hundred soldiers, shut up in a small nasty place, without any lights, and where the air was stifling. We now began to see something of a soldier's life. I managed to find my bunk, and crawled in, but could not sleep; about ten o'clock I got up and went on deck; the vessel continued to plunge and rise as if the gods had her. I began to be as bad off as my companions—my supper was given to the fishes; and, as I was coming from the side of the vessel where I had been standing, the vessel rolled, pitched, and laid on her side till the water came in over her bulwarks; I grasped a rope and clung like a good one; potatoes, barrels of meat, and every thing on deck that was not lashed, went overboard. The vessel righted, and I went below, sick enough; some were crying, thinking we were going to the bottom.

The next morning I crawled upon deck, for I could not walk. The sight that met my view was grand—the sea was running mountains high, and the wind blew like a hurricane; I got to the lee of the ship, out of the wind, and stayed there all day; night came on—I dreaded to go below, but had to or freeze. I went but did not sleep.

Sunday Morning: I was up early. I will not attempt to describe the hold, or what it was between decks, where we live; pen or pencil could not. The day passed without anything worthy of note, except we harpooned a porpoise; saw a turtle on the water beside us, and a large shark followed us some distance. All the sick were brought on deck and the hold cleaned out and aired. I saw the sun go down—it is delightful—and the moon rise, which is truly beautiful at sea. It was too pleasant to go below, but we needed sleep. We had hardly turned in before we got "sold" pretty cheap. We were on the coast of South Carolina, and the cry was, "The Alabama was in sight;" we all rushed for deck, and got pretty well humbugged.

Monday: The weather is like spring—and we go for the first time without our overcoats. This afternoon we harpooned a porpoise and got him nearly on board, when he broke the harpoon and got away. We have all got over our sea-sickness, and are a jolly set of fellows; but we do not get enough to eat, and have considerable of a time when we get our meals. It is a beautiful evening; the moon is splendid, and the water smooth.

Tuesday: Quite clear this morning. Some of the men not getting enough to eat stole some meat and turkeys from the ice chest on deck and had them cooked, which made quite a rumpus. After breakfast three of the men were arrested and put in irons. A captain took the stripes from a corporal—and the Colonel made a speech—it was almost an open mutiny; after a while it was checked, and the day passed off pleasantly. The weather is very fine.

Wednesday: It feels good to get in the shade. The Florida shore lies within a few miles of us; and the trees are covered with leaves which diffuse a rich perfume. The evening is delightful, and we are all on deck singing; if the rebels on shore were to hear us, they would be homesick.

The next morning when I went on deck the Bermuda Islands were in sight, and we kept close by them all day; in some places the water was so clear that we could see the bottom. We passed the wreck of one of our transports, but are happy to say that no lives were lost—all having been taken off in safety. We arrived at Key West about half past four this afternoon, but cannot get ashore. The Boys are all lively and hearty, and your correspondent is as gay and happy as he would be in Massachusetts. We do not know where we are going, and do not care. I have not been on land since week ago yesterday, and I do not know as we shall get ashore for another week.

DEATH OF THE WHALE. The whale at Barnum's Aquarial Gardens, whose feats in harness have amused so many youngsters during a year past, died Sunday morning.

OUR RELATIONS WITH ENGLAND. Col. John Q. Adams, received a letter from his father, Hon. Charles Francis Adams, Minister to England, from which it appears that the relations of the Embassy with the Court of St. James are more cordial and pleasant now than at any time previously since Mr. Adams went to London.

Col. J. W. Robinson, superintendent of the White Mountain Telegraph line says robins have been frequently seen by him during the past week while putting up the telegraph wire on that route. A butterfly was also seen a day or two since in Haverhill, N. H., flying about as gaily as in summer time.

Notice to Tax Payers.

AT the Annual Town Meeting of the Inhabitants of the Town of Quincy, held on March 3d, 1862,—

"VOTED—That the names of all persons whose taxes are unpaid on the First day of February, 1863, be printed with the Auditors' Report."

There is yet a large amount unpaid. Those that are assessed for Poll Tax alone have done honor to themselves. Of 648 Single Poll Taxes committed to me for collection, only 100 still remain unpaid. Let those who have delayed paying see that February does not overtake them with their Tax Bills not receipted.

Poetry.

We, too, have Autumns

We, too, have autumns, when our leaves
Drop loosely through the dampened air;
When all our good seems bound in sheaves,
And we stand reaped and bare.

Our seasons have no fixed returns,—
Without our will they come and go;
At noon our sudden summer burns,
Ere sunset all is snow.

But each day brings less summer cheer,
Crimps more our ineffectual spring,
And something earlier every year
Our singing birds take wing.

As less the olden glow abides,
And less the chiller heart aspires,
With drift-wood, beached in past spring-tides,
We light our sullen fires.

By the pinched rush-light's starving beam
We cower, and strain our wasted sight
To stitch youth's shroud up, seam by seam,
In the long arctic night.

It was not so—we once were young—
When Spring, to womanly Summer turning,
Her dew-drops on each grass-blade strung,
In the sunrise burning.

We trusted then, aspired, believed
That earth could be re-made to-morrow:
Ah, why be ever undeceived?
Why give up faith for sorrow?

O, thou, whose days are yet all spring:
Trust, blighted once, is past retrieving;
Experience is a dumb, dead thing;
The victory's in believing.

God's Blessing on Them.

BY GERALD MASSEY.

God bless the brave ones, in our dearth,
Their lives shall leave a trailing glory;
And round the poor man's homely hearth,
We'll proudly tell their suffering story.

All saviour-souls have sacrified,
With naught but noble faith for guerdon,
And e'er the world hath crown'd the Christ,
The man to death hath borne the burden!

The savage broke the glass that brought
The heavens nearer, saith the legend;
Even so the bigots welcome aught
That makes our vision starrier region'd!

They lay their corner-stones in dark,
Deep waters, who upbuild in beauty
On earth's old heart, their triumph are,
That crowns with glory lives of duty.

And meekly still the martyrs go
To keep with pain their solemn bridal!
And still they walk the fire who bow
Not down to worship Custom's idol.

Take heart! the rude dust, dark to-day,
Soars a new-lighted sphere to-morrow!
And wings of splendor burst the clay
That clasps us in death's fruitful furrow.

Stick Together.

When midst the wreck of fire and smoke,
Where cannons rend the skies asunder,
And fierce dragoons, with quickening stroke,
Upon the reeling columns thunder,
The ranks close up to sharp command,
Till helmet's feather touches feather;
Compact the furious shock they stand,
And conquer, for they stick together!

When now, 'mid clouds of woe and want,
Our comrades' wails rise fast and faster,
And charging madly on our front,
Come the black legions of disaster,
Shall we present a wavering band,
And fly like leaves before wild weather?
No, side by side, and hand in hand,
We'll stand our ground and stick together.

God gave us hands, one left, one right,
The first to help ourselves, the other—
To stretch abroad in kindly might,
To help along our faithful brother.
Then if you see a brother fall,
And bow his head before the weather,
If you be not a dastard all,
You'll help him up and stick together!

Winter Night.

It is winter night,
And the stilly earth is white
With the blowing of the lilies of the snow!
Once it was as red,
With the roses summer shed,
But the roses fled with summer long ago!

We sang a merry tune,
In the jolly days of June,
As we dance adown the garden in the light;
Now January's come,
And our hearts are dumb,
As we huddle o'er the embers here to-night.

Anecdotes.

A friend of ours has a bright little girl of four years of age, who has for a playmate a little boy of nearly the same years. He had been gone a few days, and when he came home, she ran up to him, put a hand on each cheek and exclaimed:

Sarley, I love 'ou, I love 'ou more than two tongues can tell.

Did I understand you to call me a puppy, sir?

Yes, sir, I called you a puppy.

Lucky for you! The insult is too small to notice; but had you called me a dog—an old dog—I would have knocked you down.

Ma, if you will give me an apple, I will be good.

No, my child, you must not be good for pay—you ought to be good for nothing.

Has the snow gone, down east, yet? asked a landlord of a downeaster.

About half gone, I should think.

Any bare ground?

No, but you can see the top of fences!

An honest shoemaker of Norwalk, Connecticut, says he is delighted with the President's proclamation of freedom to slaves, for now he is worth just as much as a nigger, whereas, heretofore, a good darkey was worth a thousand dollars while he wasn't worth a nickel cent.

The Patent Anklet.

THIS New and useful article is intended to be worn around the Ankle, over the top of Boots, and is a support, and also serves as a protection from the cold and wet, keeping the ancles dry and the stockings clean. But the beauty of the Anklet as an addition to the dress, is alone sufficient reason for its general use.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical Cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Emissions, Sexual Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally, Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c.—By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.
The world-renowned author, in his admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands.

PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES
— ON THE —
Physiological View of Marriage.

250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, blushings, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c, &c. It is a truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.
YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATMENT.
We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled physicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the many NEW AND EFFICACIOUS REMIDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of professional Practice, for the past twenty-five years.
FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. De Laney's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box,) though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.
Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.
TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.
THE "ELECTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.

We Shall be Happy Yet

Fear not, beloved, though clouds may lower
Whilst rainbow visions melt away,
Faith's holy star hath still a power
That may the deepest midnight sway.
Fear not! I take a prophet's tone,
Our love can neither wane nor set;
My heart grows in trust—Mine Own,
We shall be happy yet!

What! though long anxious years have past
Since this true heart was vowed to thine,
There comes for us a light at last
Whose beam upon our path doth shine.
We who have loved 'midst doubts and fears
Yet never with one hour's regret,
There comes a joy to gild our tears—
We shall be happy yet!

Ay, by the wandering birds, that find
A home beyond the mountain wave,
Though many a wave and storm combined
To bow them to an ocean grave—
By summer suns that brightly rise
Though erst in mournful tears they set,
By all Love's hopeful prophecies,
We shall be happy yet!

M. GRAY, Esq.: DEAR SIR—Two months my head was almost bald, and the little hair was all grey, and falling out very fast, an feared I should lose all. I commenced using Hair Restorative, and it immediately stopped its falling off, and soon restored the color, after using two bottles my head is completely ed with a healthy growth of hair, and of the color it was in early manhood. I take pleasure in recommending your excellent Restorative, and you also may refer any doubt erson to me.

We Shall be Happy Yet.

Fear not, beloved, though clouds may lower,
Whilst rainbow visions melt away,
Faith's holy star hath still a power
That may the deepest midnight sway.
Fear not! I take a prophet's tone,
Our love can neither wane nor set;
My heart grows in trust—Mine Own,
We shall be happy yet!

What! though long anxious years have passed,
Since this true heart was vowed to thine,
There comes for us a light at last
Whose beam upon our path doth shine,
We who have loved 'midst doubts and fears,
Yet never with one hour's regret,
There comes a joy to gild our tears—
We shall be happy yet!

Ay, by the wandering birds, that find
A home beyond the mountain wave,
Though many a wave and storm combined
To bow them to an ocean grave—
By summer suns that brightly rise
Though erst in mournful tears they set,
By all Love's hopeful prophecies,
We shall be happy yet!

Scraps.

MINCE PIE. One cracker and a half, three spoonfuls of melted butter, a cup of vinegar, one cup of molasses, raisins and spice to your taste. Melt the butter and vinegar together, then add the rest, and fill your paste. Cover as usual. This, if well made, can hardly be disunguished from a minced pie of meat and apples.

JACKSON JUMBLES. Take five cups flour, three sugar, one butter, two eggs, and a teaspoonful saleratus, dissolved in a cup of sour cream. Bake in a quick oven.

A public speaker should never lose sight of the thread of his discourse; like a busy needle, he should always have the thread in his eye.

If the world knocks you down and jostles by you in its great race, don't sit whining under people's feet, but get up, rub your elbows and begin again.

The power of pleasing is found in the wish to please. The strength of the wish is the measure of the power.

A conductor on the Norwich railroad, while taking up tickets the other day, rejected a half bill which was presented by an Irishman. "If ye won't take it," said the indignant Hibernian, "bedad ye may change that," and handed out a five dollar gold piece. The conductor swallowed the indignation until he reached the city, were he sold the coin for six dollars and a quarter.

Ingratitude is a crime so shameful, that the man was never yet found who would acknowledge himself guilty of it.

No man is "poor" who takes pains to realize that the days of our life are but "pocket money," with eternity in the bank.

Anger wishes that all mankind had only one neck; love, that it had only one heart; grief, two tear-glands; and pride, two bent knees.

An independent man can see nothing to venerate or respect in a title when it is but the nickname of a fool.

An old bachelor says he is delighted at having nearly been called "honey" by the girl he loves because she saluted him at their last meeting as "old beeswax."

The railing of a cross woman, like the railing of a garden, keeps people at a distance.

When there is love in the heart, there are rainbows in the eyes. Yes and some other kinds of beaux, adds the doctor.

Many a man who is proud to be a quartermaster, has a wife at home who is whole master.

There is a good-natured bachelor, in Quincy, so generous, that, poor fellow, he would give even his heart away if he could only find an interesting object to take it.

Some one, we cannot recall who, speaks of November and December as being rightly named, since they are indeed the embers of the dying year.

A Down East lyceum is discussing this question:—"Can a big man ache harder than a little man!"

Rambles Abroad.

LEAVES FROM A TOURISTS' JOURNAL—NO. 3.

"Mine own romantic town!" So sung Sir Walter Scott of Edinboro', the Athens of the North, and indeed, few cities in Europe have greater charms. Its situation is magnificient. Like Athens, it has Ilissus in "The Water of Leith;" a Piræus too; an Acropolis and Citadel, with the Salisbury Crags and Pentland Hills, like the rocky ramparts of Parnes and Pentelicus. From Arthur's Seat, eight hundred and twenty-two feet high, is a view unsurpassed, in the opinion of some travellers—by the Bay of Naples. The ascent is somewhat fatiguing, but the grandeur of the scene well repaid me. The variety and beauty of the objects within the range of vision make the view the most picturesque I ever beheld. Just at my feet were the Salisbury Crags, St. Anthony's Well, and the Cottage of Effie Deane; beyond, were the buildings of the old City and new; the ancient Castle, the University, St. Giles' Cathedral, the Royal Exchange and other imposing edifices. Southeasterly, were seen the famous towns of Preston Pans, Haddington and North Berwick, with "Tantallon's Towers," mentioned in Marmion. In the opposite direction, the eye ranged over valley and stream and mountain, even as far as Ben Lomond, eighty miles away among the Highlands; while to the right, extended the broad expanse of the German Ocean, here and there dotted over with the white winged messengers of commerce. A royal coronation chair, indeed, is this magnificent spot! Descending through a steep, dangerous gorge—horresco referens—I soon found myself safely at the base of the mountain, and not far from Holyrood Palace. Few localities are richer in historic memories than this ancient dwelling of royalty. It is opened at 11 A. M.—Arriving too early, one morning, we strolled into the garden of Mary, Queen of Scots; sat beside her sun-dial, richly wrought out of stone; plucked a leaf from a tree she planted, three hundred years ago; visited the Abbey founded in the year 1128, and sketched a part of it, still beautiful even in its desolation, overhung with ivy, green as in the days of "Auld Lang Syne."

The guard then allowed us to enter the Palace, and our cicerone first led the way to the picture gallery, formerly used for court balls, and still adorned with paintings by Vandyke, Lely and Holbein. Lord Darnley's private rooms and those of Charles I., next invited our attention. Here I left the crowd of sight-seers determined to gratify my curiosity alone and exercise a Yankee's right of search. Passing through a dark, narrow staircase up a secret passage, I came to Mary's Apartment. This, by far, is the most interesting room in the Palace. There stands her bed as in olden time—though guarded by police; her chair, table and mirror, with other furniture, and there the veritable stains of Rizzio's blood, which, we are gravely told cannot by any amount of scrubbing be removed! A curious spectacle, it is said, was once exhibited here, when a zealous and persevering soap vender, anxious to show the erasive qualities of his wonderful soap, attempted to remove these sacred stains. The horror which filled the heart of the old lady who then had charge of the apartment, knew no bounds! Vain however were her remonstrances at this sacrilege. The fellow was on his knees, scouring away most persistently. Her vociferations, accompanied with sundry awful threats were unheeded! Not until she had seized a broom, and begun to apply vigorous blows to his rear, was the soap peddler convinced of the perilous position in which he had so rashly placed himself, and persuaded to abandon his efforts.

Sitting Beside Katy.

A little girl lost a friend by death—her name was Katy. "I'm so sorry Katy is dead," said she to one of the members of the family, "for now I can't play with her any more. Yes I can, too," she continued, looking up with animation, "when I get to heaven, though they don't play on anything but harps there. At any rate, I'll go and sit right down by her side the first thing after I get there. Oh no, I can't;" and she lowered her voice to a regretful tone—"I shall have to sit down side of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob first."

Infancy.

The human infant is a picture of such deformity, weakness, nakedness, and helpless distress, as not to be found among the animal world. The chicken comes forth, and runs as soon as its shell is broken; the calf and the lamb go both to play as soon as the dam is delivered of them; whilst the new born babe of a woman, that is to have an upright form and worship the God who made it, lies months in gross ignorance and in weakness.

Extracts from the Journal of a Recruit.

STEAMER SAXON, KEY WEST, } Thursday, Dec. 11th, 1862. }

This is a delightful place—the cocoa-nut trees are covered with leaves, and their branches bending with fruit—grass, flowers, and everything looks beautiful. The weather is extremely hot and we are obliged to keep in the shade as much as possible.

Friday. We took coal and water aboard last night, and as my bunk was torn down, being under the port-hole where the coal came in, I slept on deck, and slept nicely—never better. Just think of it, sleeping on the deck of a vessel in the middle of December. My chum, and wife,) for we all have wives to live with,) was on guard last night and managed to get ashore and gather some cocoa-nuts and bananas, which he brought aboard. We left about sunrise this morning and have seen nothing of interest during the day.

Saturday morning. No land in sight; the weather is very pleasant. We have just passed a wreck which was completely broken to pieces.

Sunday. There was a good breeze this morning, but not enough to make any of us sick. In the afternoon the wind blew harder, and towards night some of the boys were seasick. The next morning when I went on deck, a beautiful island covered with Palmetto trees, was close to view. After breakfast Ship Island hove in sight—where we arrived this Monday morning, Dec. 15, about half past nine o'clock, after a passage of ten days from New York harbor. From what I can judge from the deck of the vessel, the island is a nasty looking place. We stopped but a few hours, took in some coal, and then started for New Orleans. I believe the Government is going to carry us round to see the country, for we no more than get at one place before we start for another. We are all in good health, and not an accident has happened to any of us, and I think we are very fortunate.

Tuesday. The weather this morning is rather cold for this part of the country. The wind blew very hard all night but we were on shoal water—about fifty feet—and the sea did not run very high. We are now at the mouth of the Mi-sissippi river, and nearly surrounded by land. It is a bad place for a vessel in a storm, I should judge. As we proceeded up the river, we passed negro huts and orange groves with their fruit hanging in bunches. Some plantations were splendid—the negro huts, the sugar fields, the factories in operation, and last, but not least, the massa's mansion. It was surrounded with orange and lemon trees, bending under the weight of their golden fruit; the front windows were open and the family sat looking out upon us—everything appeared like summer.

Wednesday. We arrived at New Orleans to day, but as yet are not permitted to land. I will give you a little idea of some of our meals, viz: Mush and sugar; sugar and hardbread; hardbread and tea made of huckleberryleaves; hardbread and molasses watered; very little meat and hardbread, &c.

Sunday, Dec. 21. We are at Camp Carrolton, about eight miles from New Orleans, and have been here since Wednesday. We have our knapsacks packed and are ready for a start. We are going to Galveston, Texas, I believe. There are only three companies of our Regiment, the 42d, here as yet. I suppose you think we have no cold weather, but it is not so; the nights are extremely cold, and ice is half an inch thick. The land is very low, and if you dig down a foot and a half you come to water. This is a very unhealthy place; there is a cemetery containing five hundred graves, within a stone's throw of us. There are from two to five buried there daily; the graves being full of water, some are obliged to hold the coffins while others cover them over.

Dec 22. We are aboard the Steamer Saxon, sailing down the river; bound for Texas We packed up our things, and were marched aboard the steamer before breakfast.

I remain yours, &c. A. H.

Toast of an Editor.

At the Printers' Festival in Boston, the vocation was thus "done brown:"

"The editor: the man that is expected to know everything, tell all he knows, and guess at the rest; to make known his own character, establish the reputation of his neighbor, and elect all candidates to office; to blow up everybody and reform the world; to live for the benefit of others, and the epitaph on his tombstone, "Here he lies at last;" in short, he is a locomotive runner on the track of public notoriety; his lever is his pen; his boiler is filled with ink; his tender is his scissors; his driving-wheel is public opinion; when he explodes, it is caused by the non-payment of subscriptions."

Why are crows the most sensible birds? Because they never complain without caws.

Letter from the 42d Regiment.

DEDHAM, JANUARY 19, 1863.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

The following letter was received by me this day. It was written as its date indicates, two days previous to the sad mishap at Galveston, and owing to that circumstance, I have thought it might not be uninteresting to the readers of your enterprising paper. If therefore, you can find room to insert it, you will confer a favor upon his many friends, and oblige your humble servant,

GEORGE NEWCOMB.

GALVESTON, TEXAS, DEC. 28, 1862.

BROTHER GEORGE: When my last was written, I think I had just arrived at New Orleans. Soon after our arrival, we received orders to proceed up the river ten miles, to a place called Carrolton, there to encamp. We arrived just at night, remained on the boat till morning, then landed and marched about half a mile, pitched our camps, and made ourselves as comfortable as possible, which consumed that day. The next day we went through the usual duties of camp life. But on the next, orders came to re-embark on board of the boat, where to go, we knew not, whether up or down the river; but soon learned it was down, and off to Texas. No one was sorry I will assure you, for of all miserable places, where we were encamped, that beat all. It was on a low, swampy piece of ground, damp and chilly enough during the night to kill a dog; no water only what came from the river—a graveyard on two sides of us, and funerals twice a day; it looked ominous, and I verily believe if we had continued there one month, one half of our men would have been in the hospital, or perhaps in those graveyards. The inhabitants were a long, lank, yellow looking set of devils, too lazy to drag one foot before the other.

We embarked and sailed the next day; a happier set of fellows you never saw; had a pleasant passage, and arrived here at five o'clock on Christmas eve. Christmas morning, landed under the protection of the gunboats; took possession of a large house on the wharf; raised the stars and stripes, and gave three rousing cheers. We were the first Union troops to land in Texas. Here we are, but can do nothing. It is four days since we landed, and the remainder of our Regiment has not been heard from yet. General Banks said another Regiment and Battery would follow us, but have not yet seen them. Our number is only two hundred and fifty men. The rebel camp is in sight, about seven miles from us, on the main land, at a place called Virginia Point; it numbers two thousand strong, with a heavy artillery force. This camp is out of reach of our gunboats on account of the shoal water; a light draft boat is needed to shell them out. If the whole of our Regiment was here and a Battery, we could occupy the city and cut off their communication with it. But as it is, we are obliged to keep under the protection of the gunboats. During the day, we scout round the city, and send out pickets, but at night, we have to call them in, for fear they will be cut off. I went out one day with thirty men from each Company, about five miles, to examine a fortification erected by the rebels; found it abandoned. They daily enter the further end of the town and carry off every thing they can; and if any man is out unprotected, he is taken prisoner. The place is almost entirely deserted; out of a population of ten thousand, only about two thousand remain, and they are in a starving condition. They are mostly refugees, German, French and Dutch—many of them Union men, and say if we once get possession of the city a great number would return. Now we have them blocked in on one side—the Rebels the other. What we want is force enough to break up the camp at the Point; take possession of the Railroad, proceed to Houston, and take that. Five thousand men, with artillery, could do it. To-morrow we send dispatches to General Banks, and hope such a force will be sent. But it will take time. It was a mistake not to have them now, as we could have taken them by surprise, and they would not as now, have had time to make stronger defences. They are commanded by General Magruder.

The climate here is delightful. I never was in better health—and we have not a sick man with us. It is mild and pleasant, with a sea breeze from the Gulf. It is a splendid town, more like our New England towns than any place I have seen; some elegant dwellings. There were a great many Northern men here at the commencement of the war.

Your affectionate brother,

T. H. NEWCOMB.

TOAST WITHOUT BUTTER. Put in a pan a pint of milk; when it boils, have two tablespoonsfuls of flour dissolved in a little cold milk, and pour in, and salt; let it scald, but not boil; pour it over the bread.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Jan. 24th, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

THE EXCISE LAW. The Report of the Assessor for this District, which we publish in another column, is the first document, of the kind, from that department, which we have been favored with. The footing of the figures in the tables range as follows:

Class A	. . . .	$119,476 40
" B	. . . .	27,310 00
" C	. . . .	18,937 14
		$165,723 54
Annual Tax,	. . . .	$25,965 71
Sept. "	. . . .	35,569 99
Oct. "	. . . .	50,115 06
Nov. "	. . . .	54,072 78
		$165,723 54

The December tax is not yet completed. The next annual tax will be made in May; which will be much larger than the one just taken, as the yearly incomes, over six hundred dollars, will then be assessed. Mr. Beals in his Circular, estimates the entire assessments for the ensuing year between six and seven hundred thousand dollars. He speaks very encouragingly, and bestows a high compliment upon the people of the District, for the cheerful manner which they have responded to the call, and the friendly disposition manifested to assist him in the new and untried duties of his office.

PAINFUL. It was with deep sorrow, we learned that Mr. John B. Bass, son of Benjamin Bass, of this town, was compelled to submit to the amputation of his leg, above the knee, at the Massachusetts General Hospital, one day last week, in consequence of wounds received at the battle of Pea Ridge, Missouri, in the spring of 1862. His situation is considered critical. Mr. B. emigrated to the West, some few years since, and was a resident of Chicago, Illinois, at the time the war broke out. His case claims our sympathy; he was a young man—rising in the world, and has a young family dependent upon him.

ACCIDENT. As Mr. Frederick Hardwick, was grinding sugar, at his store, on Franklin street, a day or two since, from some cause, his hand was caught in the machine, and three of his fingers were shockingly crushed between the iron rollers. His agony for the moment was intense. He is fearful he shall be obliged to suffer amputation of some of them.

LECTURE. It is so seldom that our citizens have the opportunity of attending a good lecture, it gives us pleasure to call their attention to a free lecture to be given before the Adams Literary Association by J. Q. A. Brackett, Esq., of Harvard University. Mr. Brackett, whose parents in former times resided in this place, is a young gentleman of rare intellectual abilities, and will give a very interesting and instructive discourse upon "The Phases of the Times" See notice.

APPOINTMENTS. Col. John W. Thomas, High Sheriff of the County, entered upon his third term of three years' service, on Thursday January 8th. He has re-appointed the following Deputies, all of whom have been commissioned and qualified: John T. Jordan, Randolph; A. B. Endicott, Dedham; Rufus C. Wood, Canton; George W. White, Jr., Weymouth; Washington M. French, Quincy; John Robie, Dorchester; John D. Bradlee, Milton; Bradford S. Farrington, Roxbury; John B. Ingalls, Wrentham; Valentine R. Coombs, Medway; Massena H. Ballou, Stoughton.

ANOTHER QUINCY BOY PROMOTED. We are pleased to notice that Horace A. Derry, of this town, has been promoted to 2d Lieutenant in the 20th Mass. Regiment. Lieut. Derry started as a private, was wounded and taken prisoner at Ball's Bluff, and after being released from Richmond came home to recruit his health; he soon however like a brave soldier returned to his Regiment and was afterwards wounded at the Battle of Antietam, from which wounds he has been confined till the present day at the Hospital at Washington. His promotion is well merited, and will be gladly received by our towns-people. We understand that Lieut. Derry has been through a dozen battles or more.

GEN. TOM THUMB. This noted personage is to be married in Trinity Church, New York, to Miss Lovina Warren, the dwarf lady. The Gen. is said to be worth $200,000.

VERY CONVENIENT. The citizens of Quincy find it a great convenience, having a place in town like Cummings', where there wants in the boot and shoe line are most always sure of being supplied.

STILL ANOTHER. 2d Lieut. Luther S. Bent of the 18th Mass. Regiment who went as a Sergeant has also been further promoted to 1st Lieutenant in the 18th Regiment. His promotion is also well merited, and will please our towns-people.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, JANUARY 21, 1863.

The leading intelligence of the week, shows that from abroad a more cheerful state of things exist in regard to our foreign relations. If we have any power to fear from intervention, it is from Louis Napoleon.

War matters at home indicate that something is lively on the tapis. It is believed that the army of the Potomac will soon move on the way to Richmond. There seems some truth in the rumor. A desperate struggle is evidently close at hand, and the crossing of Burnside over the Rappahannock will be for defeat or victory. The design of the active movements in North Carolina, seem a co-operation in the campaign against Richmond, and also, attacking Wilmington and other parts of North Carolina. Vicksburg is again to be attacked, and probably with success. Upon the whole, war prospects look more hopeful for the Union cause, but without united and prompt action our country is lost.

Interesting debates have been going on in Congress, touching war matters, and political lines are now squarely drawn. The present year bids fair to be one of great political bitterness. An estrangement is manifesting itself between the Middle and Western States and our own New England, according to the programme is to be left out, to take care of herself. A strong and unfounded prejudice exists against her, particularly Massachusetts, even in New York. This spirit is spreading in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and the Western States. They charge that Abolition, which had its birth in our State, is indirectly the cause of the civil war.

The President of the United States has signed the Bill providing for the immediate payment of the Army and Navy by a further issue of one hundred million of dollars in United States Notes. In his Message accompanying the approval of the Bill, he wisely states that a redundant paper circulation increases prices, beyond real values, thereby greatly increasing the cost of living to the injury of labor, and the cost of supplies, to the great detriment of the whole country; and that if this expansion of "Greenbacks" continues, general disaster will follow. He recommends a more uniform currency by the establishment of banking associations. But we cannot see the remedy in this measure, unless in the issue of United States Bonds at fair rates of interest and long terms of payment. Our National debt cannot be paid for a century.

Our State Legislature is now fairly at work, holding sessions each afternoon. Since my last, Mr. Sumner has been re-elected United States Senator for six years, from the fourth of March, and a resolution of thanks has passed both Houses to General Butler. In the latter case, a spirited debate occurred in the Senate on Monday. Messrs. Swan of Norfolk and Tucker of Suffolk, spoke in opposition to the resolution. Tucker, in particular, went into General Butler's sudden political summersets with great severity.

An order has very properly passed, that the Committee on the Militia consider the expediency of providing for the organization, equipment and drill, of able-bodied men, white male citizens, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years. X.

END OF THE WORLD. Prophecies are again current respecting the approaching end of the world. One reverend gentleman of the Millerite persuasion predicts universal dissolution in 1867-68. Another seer names the 17th of August, as the closing up of creation, adding that a world's convention will assemble at Cincinnati to "settle up the business of the past and arrange matters for the future."

INTERNAL REVENUE DECISONS. Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in a note to Amos Noyes, Esq, the Assessor of the Fifth District, gives the following decisions, which are of interest to many of our citizens:—

"Leather, tanned from hides which have paid an import duty, is regarded as a manufacture, and is subject to tax.

"All expressmen, whether companies or individuals, are required to use stamps upon packages transported by them."

TRAIN FOR SICK SOLDIERS. The railroads from Washington have established a sick train, departing from that city on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, for the accommodation of sick and wounded soldiers. A car is fitted up with berths for those too ill to ride in the usual manner.

DEATH OF AN OLD CITIZEN BY DROWNING. Mr. Barnabas S. Wilde, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Milton, perished sadly by drowning early Thursday evening. As had been his custom for a number of years, he left his residence on the fatal evening to go to the depot for the last edition of the Journal and returning in the dark, walked accidentally into a trench, near Tileston & Hollins' paper mill, and there being no assistance near by he was drowned. He was about 80 years of age, and leaves a large family of grown up children in the vicinity of Boston. His body was not recovered until Saturday morning.

Letter from the Army in the West.

MURFREESBORO' JAN. 9, 1863.

MY DEAR: I am glad I have the privilege of writing to you once more. I think we have suffered more hardships for the last ten days than any army in the service ever did. I can't give you all the particulars. We have been wet through ever since we left Nashville; fighting all the way until we came to Murfreesboro', at which place we had a grand cotillion. The battle lasted five days. It was a continual roar of artillery or infantry. We were in it two days—Wednesday, December 31st, and Friday, the second of January. We lost every thing, except what we had on our backs. We rested on our arms all the time, without overcoats, or blankets, or fires, and raining most of the time. For six days we had only two crackers, and now and then an ear of corn, which we stole from the hungry mules. Our Division suffered more than any other Division in the fight. Johnson is our Division Commander now. Gen. Sill was our General when I wrote you last; he was only acting General then. At the battle, he was a Brigadier under Sheriden, and was killed the first day. He was a fine man, and beloved by all that knew him. We lost our Brigadier Willick, wounded and a prisoner, also, the first day. The Brigade seemed to feel as though all was lost, as we all put the greatest confidence in him. Colonel Gibson, of the 49th Ohio Regiment, took command of the Brigade and led us into battle as soon as Willick was lost.

We made our bayonet charges Friday evening, about dark. We had all been wanting to get into battle—but I think we are all satisfied now, our Brigade is so dreadfully cut up.

I suppose the papers will give you more particulars of the battle than I can—only that we are awfully hard up for rations; we drew two crackers yesterday morning, which must last us till to-morrow night. We are allowed to forage more now, as we are short; we are clearing this country of cattle, hogs and sheep.

General Bragg had orders to hold this place at all hazards—so the prisoners tell us; he made a good fight, but old Rosa was too much for him, and he has gone. I think the most terrible thing I ever heard, was last Saturday night; one of our Brigades made a charge on the enemy's breastworks about ten o'clock at night, while it was raining. If you could have heard the artillery and the crack of infantry, and the yell of our men as they drove the enemy out of their rifle pits. It was thunder and lightning and rain—taken all together, I think it was the most horrible thing I ever heard; it lasted about two hours.

Our Regiment was on picket, at the left of our lines. I have seen and heard enough to last quite a spell. But I didn't get a scratch, and I am thankful I didn't. Some of the wounded in our Regiment, and in my Company, lay on the field four days, without being touched. Thirty of our Regiment were detailed Sunday to go on the battle field.

I was one of the number to see to burying the dead, and looking after our own respective companies. We found some of our own men that had been eaten by the hogs. The rebels had stripped our dead of every thing they wanted. We lost two Captains; we found them stripped.

We have had no mails since Christmas. We expect a big rush to-morrow. The second night of the battle, our Brigade was on the reserve; we lay in a big cotton field up to our knees in mud. We all laid down (which is natural for us to do) when we get a chance. I fell into a kind of a sleep and went to dreaming of home—the first time since I went into the army. I dreamed I was at home, sitting by the fire place, in that old dining room, drying my feet. Every thing looked the same as when I left years ago; but I hadn't seen any body that I knew. When I awoke, I found myself in a different situation, than I was in my dream. But I am willing to suffer most any thing if we can settle this thing up. I want to fight the accursed rascals till there is not one of them left.

We hear every day that Richmond has been taken; and all hope that it is so; but we can't believe it yet. I have not time to write much now, as our Lieutenant is going to Nashville, and I must send this by him.

Yours affectionately,

FRANK WHITE.

OUR LOCAL BANKS. Mr. Sherman made a remarkable speech in Congress last week, in favor of taxing bank note currency. According to his views, our whole financial troubles are due to the local banks, which have disturbed the whole country by their currency, and taxing their circulation would compel its withdrawal. "Every effort," said the speaker, "should be directed to nationalize the whole people by binding them together with a common (government) currency, and in a common cause."

CHURCH MANUAL. We have received a copy of the Church Manual of the Evangelical Congregational Church of this town from Rev. Edward P. Thwing, Pastor. This pamphlet contains a historical sketch of the church, list of members, &c. Its typographical appearance is exceedingly tasteful.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

There were coined at the Mint in Philadelphia, during December, five million four hundred and thirty thousand cents, and yet the cry is for more.

The largest military hospital in the world, containing two thousand beds, was opened and dedicated on Saturday at Philadelphia.

The supply of ice is very limited in New England, as the crop of last year has been drawn upon thus far this season. In some of the towns the icemen have ceased to supply their customers.

There has been no snow in Vermont, to speak of, this season. Such warm and pleasant weather, in winter, is not within the remembrance of that venerable incivdual, "the oldest inhabitant."

The Internal Revenue Commissioner has decided that the "probate of wills" and "letter testamentary" must be stamped.

Some excellent specimens of cotton, equal in quality to the Sea Island fiber, have been cultivated in Algeria.

A new volcano has been discovered in a mountain in Iceland, the top of which is covered perpetually with snow.

The winter clothing of a Southern soldier is expected to cost $98 50, according to Richmond prices current, for a cap is worth $5, a jacket $25, a pair of pants $32, a pair of shoes $18, two pairs of woolen socks, $5 50, two woolen shirts $10, and two pairs of drawers $8.

There are no less than eighty-five languages spoken in New York city by natives of as many different nations.

A prominent Senator told the President a few days since, that General Butler had shown more brains in the service than all the rest of the generals he had made.

The Christy Minstrels were passengers on a Scotch steamer wrecked near Cape Town in Africa. They lost everything.

General Rosecrans has ordered all captured rebel officers to be confined until Jeff. Davis' retaliation order is revoked. He also forbids rebel prisoners receiving food contributed by their friends.

The nine Ericsson iron-clads will all be at sea in the course of two weeks.

Commodore Wilkes has captured the rebel steamer Virginia—a prime good vessel.

There is a large quantity of counterfeited shinplasters in circulation, so that people must be on the look-out.

Gen. Wool is about prosecuting vigorous measures for completing the sea coast defences of Eastern cities, so that if European intervention takes place we shall be secured against it.

The venerable Rev. Dr. Lyman Beecher, died at his residence in Brooklyn, N. York, aged 87—nearly one year older than the Declaration of Independence.

The forwarding of all bottles containing medicines or liquors of any description, through the mails, is strictly prohibited, in consequence of the numerous cases of breakage which occurred.

Specimens of excellent cotton, produced in New Jersey, have been sent to the Department of Agriculture.

The losses of the Massachusetts regiments in the battle of Fredericksburg were ninety-nine killed, seven hundred and forty-eight wounded, and seventy-one missing.

For the Patriot.

Verses

Composed on the death of Mr Alexander R. Fogg, formerly of this town, who was killed in the battle at Gaines Mills, near Richmond, aged 39 years and 10 days. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss; besides a large circle of relatives and friends who it is hoped will find consolation in knowing that he gave up his life bravely fighting for his Country—an honor that will never die, no never!

In the rushing tide of Battle,
His life on earth was ended,
Cannons' roar and muskets' rattle,
Thus Life's scenes with Heaven's blended.

On his Country's altar bleeding,
Lies the sacrifice so holy—
God's acceptance kindly pleading,
For the Nation's future glory.

He who rules and governs rightly,
Will receive and bless forever;
And the deed will still shine brightly,
Fading never, never—NEVER!

Near the gates of the Immortal,
With celestial power and might;
He will guard the heavenly portal,
Still battling for the right.

Strangers, friends and soldiers loved him—
Held him as a brother dear;
And when death's cold hand removed him,
Shed for him affection's tear.

Think upon the patriot soldier,
Dying far from friends and home;
And if some bright angel feeling,
Should upon your spirit come.

Pray that he is now in Heaven,
And in glory doth abide;
In that land are none so welcome,
As those who for their Country died.

THE ANKLET. This late novelty is attracting considerable attention among the ladies. It is designed to be worn over the top of the boot, and being made of patent leather is a great protection from cold and wet, at this season of freezing and thawing. It is destined to be very popular. A fine engraving of it can be seen on our outside.

QUINCY BOYS PRISONERS. Lieut. T. H. Newcomb, and some twenty Quincy men, of Co. G, 42d Regiment Mass. Vol. were taken prisoners by the rebels at Galveston, Texas, on New Year's morning. The rebels came down the river under a flag of truce, surprised and captured the Harriet Lane, and having got possession of the bridge entered the city with a large force and took the only Federal troops there, namely; three companies of the 42d regiment, with Col. Burrell, the commander.

PROMENADE CONCERT AND DANCE. The Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Association, of this town, propose giving, as will be seen by their card in another column of our paper, a "Promenade Concert and Dance," at the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening next. The success attending their late exhibitions, have induced these patriotic young ladies to throw themselves once more before a charitable community, in behalf of those who have left the comforts and endearments of home, for the hardships and privations of the camp, to uphold the flag of their country.—Your presence ladies and gentlemen is solicited. Your bounty is needed; our sick, suffering soldiers should not appeal in vain.

Contributions for the Refreshment Table from those disposed to aid the object, will be thankfully received at the Hall, on the 28th instant, before 12 o'clock, M.

THE LOSS OF THE MONITOR ATTRIBUTED TO HARD TOWING. A Washington despatch says that some of our best naval officers, who have had experience in the steaming and towing of iron-clad vessels, are of the opinion that the Monitor sprung a leak from hard towing. The Rhode Island is a fast side-wheel steamer, and with a heavy hawser towing the Monitor astern she would jerk and strain her terribly. It having been ascertained that she sprung a leak forward, it is believed that this was the cause.

TAKE NOTICE. A Free Lunch at the Mariposa Saloon this evening.

Notice to Tax Payers.

AT the Annual Town Meeting of the Inhabitants of the Town of Quincy, held on March 3d, 1862,—

"VOTED—That the names of all persons whose taxes are unpaid on the First day of February, 1863, be printed with the Auditors' Report."

There is yet a large amount unpaid. Those that are assessed for Poll Tax alone have done honor to themselves. Of 648 Single Poll Taxes committed to me for collection, only 100 still remain unpaid. Let those who have delayed paying see that February does not overtake them with their Tax Bills not receipted.

GEO. H. LOCKE, Collector.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

ILLUSTRATED

Scientific American.

The Best Mechanical Paper in the World!

EIGHTEENTH YEAR.

VOLUME VIII—NEW SERIES

A NEW Volume of this popular Journal commenced on the first of January. It is published WEEKLY, and every number contains sixteen pages of useful information, and from five to ten original engravings of new inventions and discoveries, all of which are prepared expressly for its columns.

To the Mechanic and Manufacturer.

No person engaged in any of the mechanical or manufacturing pursuits should think of "doing without" the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN. It costs but six cents per week; every number contains from six to ten engravings of new machines and inventions, which can not be found in any other publication.

To the Inventor.

The SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is indispensable to every inventor, as it not only contains illustrated descriptions of nearly all the best inventions as they come out, but each number contains an Official List of the Claims of all the Patents issued from the United States Patent Office during the week previous; thus giving a correct history of the progress of inventions, in this country. We are also receiving, every week, the best scientific journals of Great Britain, France, and Germany; thus placing in our possession all that is transpiring in mechanical science and art in these old countries. We shall continue to transfer to our columns copious extracts from these journals of whatever we may deem of interest to our readers.

A pamphlet of instruction as to the best mode of obtaining Letters Patent on new inventions, is furnished free on application.

Messrs. MUNN & Co. have acted as Patent Solicitors for more than SEVENTEEN years, in connection with the publication of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, and they refer to 20,000 patentees for whom they have done business.

No charge is made for examining sketches and models of new inventions and for advising inventors as to their patentability.

Chemists, Architects, Millwrights and Farmers.

The SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN will be found a most useful journal to them. All the new discoveries in the science of chemistry are given in its columns, and the interests of the architect and carpenter are not overlooked; all the new inventions and discoveries appertaining to these pursuits being published from week to week.—Useful information pertaining to the interests of millwrights and mill-owners will be found in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, which information they can not possibly obtain from any other source. Subjects in which farmers are interested will be found discussed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN; most of the improvements in agricultural implements being illustrated in its columns.

TERMS—To mail subscribers: Three Dollars a year, or One Dollars for four months. The volumes commence on the first of January and July. Specimen copies will be sent gratis to any part of the country.

Western and Canadian money or Post-office stamps taken at par for subscriptions. Canadian subscribers will please to remit twenty five cents extra on each year's subscription to prepay postage.

Granite Rocks and Blocks of Ice.

BY F. M. ADLINGTON—WEYMOUTH.

Our blocks of ice and granite rocks.
Have fix'd King Cotton in the stocks.

Tune—MISSIONARY HYMN.

From stern New England's mountains
Where granite rocks abound,
And from her frozen fountains,
That chill her sterile ground,
Her brave industrious yeomen
Extract a vital power,
To crush their Country's foemen
When comes the trial hour.

Their sturdy arms converting
Hard rock and ice to steel,
And with their swords asserting,
A truth that tyrants feel.
A truth that freedom's charter
Gives equal rights to all,
Exempt from sale or barter,
E'en tho' the heav'ns should fall.

O'er all our granite quarries,
The freeman's anthem bounds;
And the far Western prairies,
Cheer with the echoing sounds.
Our ice clad lakes that render
Our ships a large employ,
Rear up a new defender,
In each brave sailor boy.

And wheresoever steering,
The sailor's course may be,
One thought his heart is cheering—
New England's sons are free.
The flag their fathers gave them,
Has faced the battle blast,
And should a foeman brave them,
They'll nail it to the mast.

They bear no flinching coward,
Aboard their gallant boat;
Nor will their flag be lower'd
While yet a plank can float.
Stout hearted, firm New England;
Brave parent of the West;
Thy flag has ev'ry wave fau'd,
On ev'ry ocean's breast

And still thy sons contending
For right and liberty;
Our country's flag defending,
Will conq'ring, live or die.
Tho' tyrant power would sunder
Our States, the heart is sound;
Nor home nor foreign thunder,
Can rend our holy ground.

My Husband Uses Tobacco.

He sits in his chair from morning till night,
'Tis smoke, chew, smoke,
He rises at dawn his pipe to light,
Goes puffing and chewing with all his might,
Till the hour of sleep 'Tis his delight
To smoke, chew, smoke.

The quid goes in when the pipe goes out,
'Tis uhew, chew, chew,
Now, a cloud of smoke pours from his throat,
Then, his mouth sends a constant stream afloat,
Sufficient to carry a mill or a boat,
'Tis chew, chew, chew.

He sits all day in a smoke or fog,
'Tis puff, puff, puff,
He growls at his wife, the cat and the dog,
He cowers with filth the carpet and rug,
And his only answer when I give him a jog,
Is puff, puff, puff.

The house all over from end to end,
Is smoke, smoke, smoke;
In whatever room my way I wend,
If I take his old clothes to patch or mend,
Ungrateful perfumes will ever ascend,
Of smoke, smoke, smoke.

At home or abroad, afar or near,
'Tis smoke, chew, smoke;
His mouth is stuffed from ear to ear,
Or puffing the stump of a pipe so dear,
And his days will end, I verily fear,
In smoke, smoke, smoke.

Young ladies, beware! live single indeed,
Ere you marry a man who uses "the weed,'.
Better that husbands you should ever lack, O,
Than marry a "husband who uses tobacco."

Anecdotes.

A Hibernian was reproved by an officer for daring to whistle in the ranks while on duty. Just as the officer spoke, one of Russia's balls came whistling over the ravine.

Pat cocked his eye toward it quietly, and said—

There goes a boy on duty, and by jabers how he whistles.

Mamma said Master Harry how fat Amelia has grown.

Yes, replied his mother; but don't say fat dear, say stout.

At dinner-table on the following day Harry was asked if he would take any fat.

No, thank you, said Harry; I'll take some stout.

His mother leaned back in her chair with surprise.

A toper claims as one advantage gained by rum drinking, that his nose has become so red he can see to read by it without a lamp.

Good morning, Mr. Jenkins—where have you kept yourself this long time?

Kept myself! I don't keep myself—I board on credit!

To Horse Owners.

DR. SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LINIMENT for Horses is unrivaled by any, in and all cases of Lameness, arising from Sprains, Bruises or Wrenching, its effect is magical and certain. Harness or Saddle Galls, Scratches, Mange, &c., it will also cure speedily. Spavin and Ringbone may be easily prevented and cured in their incipient stages, but confirmed cases are beyond the possibility of a radical cure. No case of the kind, however, is so desperate or hopeless but it may be alleviated by this Liniment, and its faithful application will always remove the Lameness, and enable the horse to travel with comparative ease.
Every horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for its timely use at the first appearance of Lameness will effectually prevent those formidable diseases mentioned, to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses nearly worthless.

U. S. MARSHAL'S OFFICE,
New York, Nov. 6, 1861.
WM. GRAY, ESQ.: DEAR SIR—Two months ago, my head was almost bald, and the little hair I had was all grey, and falling out very fast, until I feared I should lose all. I commenced using your Hair Restorative, and it immediately stopped the hair falling off, and soon restored the color, and after using two bottles my head is completely covered with a healthy growth of hair, and of the same color it was in early manhood. I take great pleasure in recommending your excellent Hair Restorative, and you also may refer any doubter in person to me.

PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES
— ON THE —
Physiological View of Marriage.
250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, blushings, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c, &c. It is a truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.
YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATMENT.
We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled hpysicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the many NEW AND EFFICACIOUS REMIDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of professional Practice, for the past twenty-five years.
FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. De Laney's Female Periodical Pills. Childhood

Drawing pictures on the slate,
Making houses out of cards,
Solving riddles all elate,
Peeping in the neighbor's yards;
Such is part of childhood's game,
Innocent of wealth or fame.

Blowing pencil dust away,
Some perchance may meet the eye;
Looking out for market day,
When comes home an extra pie;
Such is part of childhood's fun,
Ere the growing time is done.

On all-fours about the room,
Personating cats and mice,
Saying of the weaver's loom,
"Don't it match the carpet nice?"
Fairy weavers, still themselves,
Dancing like the ancient elves.

Nodding when the prayer is long,
And the eyes are rubbed in vain;
In the morning up with song,
Holding hands to catch the rain,
Tom, come in! You roguish Will,
Go to school, and there be still.

Life a holidays of sweets,
Care a blueheard not yet known;
Every day its joy repeats,
Rapture in one even tone.
Who that moon would wish to cloud?
Who that fairy land would shroud?

Hard their destiny who creep,
Through a childhood full of gloom,
Sad awake and sad asleep,
Buried in a living tomb!
Old before their spring is shed,
Gray at heart ere morn has fled.

Scraps.

Men of great ability and enterprise are usually severe employers, from mistakenly requiring of their employees energy and capacity equal to their own.

A CAUTION. This is a dangerous period of the year for colds. People should be careful. Mrs. Partington says she has got a running affection in her shoulders, the neurology in her head, and the embargo in the region of the jocular vein; and all from opening the window to throw a bottle at a couple of belligerent cats on the shed.

A woman may be of great assistance to her husband in business, by wearing a cheerful smile continually upon her countenance. A man's perplexities and gloominess are increased a hundred fold when his better half moves about with a continual scowl upon her brow.

Stuffing is a good way to preserve a dead bird; but a poor way to preserve a live person.

A bright little three year old was sitting on his mother's lap a few evenings since, when he asked, "Are the stars in heaven?" His mother, of course, responded in the affirmative, when the little fellow put the further question, "Are the stripes there, too, mother?"

Learn in childhood, if you can, that happiness is not outside, but inside. A good heart and clear conscience bring happiness; riches or circumstances ever can do it.

There is one thing that the most successful man rarely succeeds in—and that is making others forgive him his success.

We cannot have all things our own way; some things must be allowed to go God's way.

It is hard to believe that in the heart of an acorn is encased the germ of a ship which shall baffle the storms of fifty years; but harder than to believe that in all men lodge the germ of an angel.

In order to deserve a true friend, we must learn first to be one.

Babies being a sort of marriage certificate under the new law will require a ten cent stamp to be affixed to them.

Of what has he to boast, who proclaims himself square with all the world, if he be not so with God?

The physically blind are thankful for guidance; the mentally blind resent it as an insult.

Miscellaneous.

The Wrong Picture.

The full sunshine came pouring through the plate glass windows of the great photographic saloon, where Virginia Lynne had become very tired of waiting "just one minute" for her turn to face the camera.

Are you nearly ready to take my likeness, sir? she asked, rather impatiently, as the operator entered the room on some rather trifling errand.

Not quite yet ma'am. We shall be soon, I hope, however. To tell you the truth, we didn't anticipate so much trouble from our present subject—a baby, ma'am, who will not sit still!

A baby! oh, then I haven't another word to say, said Virginia, scornfully elevating her pretty shoulders as she turned toward her companions. I do detest babies!

Why, Virginia! exclaimed Mrs. Walter, her matron sister, with genuine horror.

Can't help it— I never could endure a baby—that's one of my articles of faith!

And how many articles of faith have you? laughingly enquired another companion.

O, several. One is a hearty aversion to widowers—that class of dyed over husbands who are always alluding to Mrs. Smith, No. 1. If I became that lady's successor, I should be perpetually fearful I was standing in the way of Mrs. Smith, No. 3. And then the idea of washing the faces and combing the hair of half a dozen unruly step children. No second hand babies for me, thank you

But if Virginia could only have had a peep into the operating room, where the hazel eyed baby was setting Photograph at defiance, she would probably have kissed its perfumed breath nearly away with true feminine inconsistency.

Harry, do sit still! pleaded the nurse in despair, while the operator dodged hopelessly to and fro, trying to "catch the focus," and two or three young lady aunts jingling their watch chains and held up their bracelets in the vain endeavor to attract the little one's eye. But if the quintessence of obstinacy can be imagined to fix its throne in a year old baby, that baby was the individual.

All of a sudden, a bright-winged canary in a cage opposite began to sing piercingly. The scarlet lips opened into a wondering smile—the large hazel eyes that had roved from place to place, like chain lightning, were fixed for a moment. The operator jerked the drapery away from his instrument with the agility of magic—the sunrays swept their pencils over the gleaming plate, and—

O, let me see it! shrieked aunts and nurse in a confused treble chorus, crowding round the photographer as, after a short absence, he entered the room bearing the plate. Only let me get one peep at it!

How delighted Raymond will be! whispered one of the aunts to her sister, as she caught the baby in her arms, crushing her shining brown curls against its silky little head.

Where shall I send the cards, ma'am? asked the operator

To Captain May—Raymond May, Philadelphia. Just the address, please—no other word. We intend it as a birth day surprise to my brother.

Very well, ma'am. Theodore! as soon as the ladies had disappeared, just write down that address, and tell the young lady below that we are ready for her.

Virginia Lynne must have been hard indeed to please, had she been dissatisfied with the face reflected in the mirror, as she took a last glance ere leaving the saloon down stairs. A proud, stately young beauty, and heart as free as the wildest fawn upon the eastern hill.

When can I have the picture? she asked.

In about five days, ma'am.

No sooner? I leave town to-morrow.

We can send it to you by mail, wherever you are, ma'am.

She hurriedly wrote upon a card, Miss Lynne, Philadelphia, and pushed it toward the man.

There is my address—please send it as soon as possible.

Captain May's sitting room in the great Philadelphia hotel was about as snug a den as man need wish for, and Captain May himself, as he looked smilingly up from the perusal of a heap of papers, to greet the entrance of a companion, was no unfair specimen of a handsome young naval officer.

Well, Charley!

Well, May—upon my word, if you're not up to your ears in those old navigation charts again. It's enough to make a lazy man ache, to see you work.

It's time to work, said May, good humoredly. I expect sailing orders in about a fortnight—and glad I shall be when they come.

Glad! ejaculated Charles Monroe, throwing himself into a chair, and biting at the end of one of his friend's quill pens.—May, you're a perfect problem to me—as uneasy on dry land as a fish. I can't understand it—hanged if I can.

Perhaps you could, said May, calmly, if you had no home ties—nothing to look forward to—nothing to make life pleasanter in one spot than another, since Minnie died.

He stopped abruptly. Monroe leaned over with frank sympathy, to grasp his friend's hand.

Pardon me, Raymond; I'm a stupid, blundering fellow, I know, I don't mean to hurt you by any of my careless words. Still, there is your child left you.

Dear little Harry, said May, half smiling, but a year old baby isn't much company for a man of thirty, you must admit.

True, said Monroe, twisting the quill round and round his fingers. Who's that knocking? Letters, eh? Don't mind me, open your correspondence.

May complied; tearing open the envelopes and glancing carelessly over their enclosures until he came to the last one. As his eye fell on it, he uttered an exclamation of astonishment.

What a beauty! ejaculated Monroe, who with the privileged impertinence of long established friendship, caught up the letter as it fell from Raymond's hands. Well, I'd just like to know what this means, you sly scamp.

Upon my word—upon my honor, Charlie! ejaculated the astonished young man, I never saw the face before. I cannot imagine who she is, or how the picture came here.

No message with it?

Not a word! But the direction is certainly plain enough—Captain Raymond May, Philadelphia.

Well, I can only recommend to you to wait patiently for time to solve the question, said Monroe, rising. Come do look up a moment from the entranced photograph, and give a fellow a little attention—I want to know if you are going to Mrs. Leaford's, Saturday night.

Yes—no—I don't know, I haven't made up my mind.

All right; I'll call for you at nine to a moment.

Away went Monroe, leaving Raymond May still bending over the fair countenance, which seemed to entrance him like a dream.

The exotics in Mrs. Leaford's bay windows were in full blossom and brightness; the fire, which one or two bleak days had rendered far from disagreeable, even in April, glowed cheerfully in the grate, and half a dozen young guests, matronized by their pretty hostess and Mrs. Walter from New York, were busy, some reading, some chatting, some engaged in the graceful mysteries of embroidery and crochet.

By the way, where is Virginia? asked Mrs. Leaford, glancing around.

She will be down presently, answered her sister. She took her letters up stairs to read.

That very instant Miss Lynne's light touch fell on the door knob, and she came into the room looking prettier than ever, in a white cashmere morning wrapper, relieved by the fluttering of blue ribbons.

Lizzy, she said, coming to her sister's side, I have had the strangest adventure this morning.

What do you mean? asked Mrs. Walter.

As I opened one of my letters, she said, laughingly, in a half pleased, half puzzled manner, out fell a photograph! Of course, I supposed it was one of those I had taken of myself just before I left New York.

Well, ejaculated the eager chorus of listeners, and it was—

The prettiest baby you ever saw! exclaimed Virginia, holding up the pictured representation of our old acquaintance, baby Harry—and her auditors pounced ecstatically upon it, uttering various feminine adjectives of delight and admiration.

Saturday night arrived, most propitiously, with a keen wind and brilliant starlight, and Mrs Leaford's spacious rooms were soon filled. Mr. Monroe and Captain May were among the mass of crinoline swaying around.

Here he is, Mrs. Leaford! ejaculated Monroe, as at length he reached the lady sought for. I've brought him according to contract; but, do you believe, the lazy fellow, had coiled up on a sofa for an evening over his books! if it hadn't have been for my indefatigable efforts, you wouldn't have seen him here to-night.

I am sure I'm very much obliged to you, said Mrs. Leaford, laughing. Captain May, the only amends you can make for such an outrageous breach of discipline, is to be just as agreeable as you can to my fair guests to-night. Miss Lynne, let me present Captain May.

As the young officer bowed low over the extended hand of the New York beauty, he was half uncertain whether he was broad awake or wandering through the mazes of a dream. There before him, stood the lovely reality of that lovely photograph, her jetty hair wreathed with pearls, and her dark beauty contrasted with a dress of the softest pink, with moss roses at her belt.

If he had been in love before, his case was hopeless now—desperate, irremediable,

How quick the next two weeks flew by. It was not until the night before he sailed, that Captain Raymond May mustered up courage to confess to Miss Lynne that her similitude was in his possession; for, of course, that would necessarily involve a surrender of the precious property. But he felt that he must at length tell her the truth, and so, with sinking heart, he marched up the broad marble steps of Mrs. Leaford's mansion, and was shown into a pretty little room opening out of a fragrant conservatory.

As he waited Miss. Lynne's appearance, he nervously turned over the pages of the gilded volumes that lay on the table. One was a photograph album, and he glanced mechanically at the various faces contained, without really seeing them, until suddenly the rosy face of his own little Harry—Minnie's child—smiled up in his own.

Why, is it possible? I must be mistaken!

But a second glance convinced him that he was not mistaken. It was Harry May, and no body else's baby.

Suddenly a light footstep disturbed his reverie.

Miss Lynne, he said, earnestly, as soon as the customary greetings of the day were exchanged, I am in a state of very great perplexity. Will you solve the enigma for me?

Certainly; if I can, said Virginia, blushing, and with a soft, uncertain tremor at her heart.

How did this picture obtain a place in your album?

The color subsided into ordinary pallor, as Virginia replied.

In rather a romantic way, Captain May. It was sent to me, with no accompanying message, and I haven't the least idea whence it came.

Ah! that furnishes a clue to the whole mystery, said Captain May, placing upon the table the picture which had laid next to his heart for the last few days, and relating briefly how it had fallen into his possession

By some mistake at the Photographer's, my little Harry's picture has been sent to you, and your likeness to me. I am a widower, Miss Lynne, with one child, as I suppose you have heard.

No, said Virginia, coloring, I was not aware of it; but—

He looked earnestly into her face, where the tell-tale crimson, was already beginning to glow, and the soft eyes to become shadowed with timid, down-cast lashes; he looked, and saw something that encouraged him to ask another question.

Miss Lynne—Virginia—may I keep the picture?

And she did not say, No.

When Captain May sailed the next day, it was with something to look forward to on his return.

My dearest Virginia! exclaimed her sister, what have you been doing? Don't you know that Captain May is a widower?

Yes, said Virginia, valiantly; but that don't make any difference. I love him, and that's enough.

And don't you know he has a baby?

Well; and I love the baby, too, because it is Raymond's.

Oh! said Mrs. Walter, archly, so you have overcome your horror of second-hand babies. Well, my dear, only take care that he don't keep quoting Mrs. May, No. 1.

I have no fear, said Virginia, quietly.

And time proved the correctness of her premises, for we don't know any happier young wife than Mrs. May, No. 2, and it is hard to say which she loves best—her husband, or "Baby Harry."

Teeth Set on Edge.

All acid foods, drinks, medicines and tooth washes and powders, are very injurious to the teeth. If a tooth is put in cider, vinegar, lemon juice, or tartaric acid, in a few hours the enamel will be completely destroyed, so that it can be removed by the finger nail as if it were chalk. Most people have experienced what is commonly called teeth set on edge. The explanation of it is, the acid of the fruit that has been eaten has so far softened the enamel of the tooth that the least pressure is felt by the exceedingly small nerves which pervade the thin membrane which connects the enamel and the bony part of the tooth. Such an effect cannot be produced without injuring the enamel. True, it will become hard again, when the acid has been removed by the fluids of the mouth, just as an egg shell that has been softened in this way becoms hard again by being put in the water. When the effect of sour fruit on the teeth subsides, they feel as well as ever, but they are not as well. And the oftener it is repeated, the sooner the disastrous consequences will be manifested

Rambles Abroad.

LEAVES FROM A TOURIST'S JOURNAL—NO. 4.

THE HIGHLAND HERDSMAN.

It was midsummer when we reached the Highlands. Three hours riding from Stirling brought us to the borders of Loch Katrine, that sylvan lake of which the Scottish bard has given such inimitable descriptions. Having spent an hour on its calm, sunny waters, our party landed and proceeded to Loch Lomond; some in carriages, while others preferred to walk through the country which was once the abode of those proud mountaineers, the Macgregors. Along the pastoral slopes and mountainous ridges of Benvenue I descried the wild goats cropping the fresh herbage, while here and there, along the base of the ravine, half hid by the foliage of the oak and the birch, stood the hamlets of the Highland shepherds. From the lips of these simple herdsmen the stranger may gather, if he choose, many incidents of local and traditionary interest, which serve to throw light on the ethnographical history of the people. The following narrative shows the truth of the remark applied by a German author to the Scotchman: "He is as grave as a Spaniard, as sly as a fox, and as slippery as an eel."

Several years ago a brave, hardy Highlander, whom we will call Duncan, left his home among the glens and hills of Argyleshire with a large herd of cattle, destined for the sunnier fields and more fertile meadows of Yorkshire.

With his uniform success, he soon disposed of his stock to the English graziers, and with a well-filled purse he started on his return. He had nearly reached the confines of Scotland, when, quietly walking along the highway, accompanied by his faithful dog, he was overtaken by an Englishman, well dressed and of pleasing appearance. He drew near Duncan, and familiarly accosted him. Well, my good fellow, whither bound? You're a herdsman, I see.

Yes, from Argylesh.re, sir.

And do you not fear to travel alone, with your wallet well filled, I doubt not, with English gold?

Not quite alone, the brave Highlander replied, drawing his dirk; for there's a real Scotch blade that never failed me yet; and here, too, is as fine a dog as ever roamed Highlands or Lowlands.

A noble fellow, indeed; but is that really a true Scotch blade? inquired the gentleman, as he approached still nearer, to examine it.

Sure, man, it is; take it in your hand, said the unsuspecting drover, as he gave it to the stranger—who, as he walked along, examined its curious workmanship with apparently great interest. Watching his opportunity, the gentlemanly highwayman plunged the dagger into the neck of the dog beside him, and at the same instant sprang upon the astonished Duncan, threw him on the ground and planting his knees upon his breast, held him firmly by the throat.

Now, cried the robber, give up your money, or I'll take both your money and your life.

Poor fellow, he was in a fix. His faithful dog had expired without a groan, and his trusty steel was now in an assassin's hand. It was all the work of a moment. Seeing no possible alternative, he very reluctantly gave up his gold, and was suffered to arise, the highwayman still holding him fast. Who'll believe, said the crestfallen Scotchman, that such a man as I, with such a dog, and with that good blade, could have been robbed by an Englishman.

Don't give yourself any uneasiness on that score, old fellow, retorted the other; for you are not the first one of your countrymen that have made my acquaintance. Besides, I always give them a mark to remember me by. At the same time he drew his sword, and leading him to the stump of a decayed oak near by, bade him lay his right hand thereon.

Now, the idea of losing this useful and important member, and especially by such an unnecessary and unscientific amputation was peculiarly disagreeable to the worthy Scotchman. A bright thought just then suggested itself to his mind. Without saying a word, he did as he was ordered, and very meekly placed his hand on the stump, calmly awaiting the blow. The robber drew himself up to his full length, and lifting his sword high in air, brought it down with a thundering stroke. But the cunning Highlander, at that very instant, had slipped aside his hand, and while the enraged Englishman was vainly trying to withdraw the blade from the wood, into which it had deeply penetrated, he rushed upon him, and locking his sinewy arms about the robber's waist, hurled him down, and held him with as fierce a gripe as Roderick held Fitz James at Coilantogle Ford.

"Now, gallant Saxon, hold thine own!
No maiden's hand is round thee thrown!
That desperate grasp thy frame might feel,
Through bars of brass and triple steel."

The brave Duncan soon had his foe completely in his power; but he would not take his life. He, however, securely bound him, too; his purse again, in spite of the impotent threats and curses of the robber, and hastened back to the house of the nearest magistrate. There he informed the police where they might find "a rogue that richly deserved the gallows."

It is unnecessary to add that the honest herdsman received ample justice, and the highwayman soon after incurred the punishment due his crimes.

The Literary Husband.

Frederick Mozel was translating Libanius, when some one came and told him that his wife, who had been languishing some time, was very ill, and wished to speak with him. I have only, said he, two periods to translate, and I will then come to see her. A second messenger informed him that she was on the point of death. I have not more than two words to finish, said Mozel; return to her; I shall be there as soon as you. A moment after, another messenger brought the tidings of her death. I am very sorry; she was a very good woman; said he, and continued his translation.

Strange Occurrence.

A Western editor, on entering his office and seeing his apprentice boy cutting some queer capers, called out to him,

Jim, what are you doing on the floor?

Why, sir, I have had a shock!

A shock?

Yes, sir.

What kind of a shock?

Why, sir, said the lad, gasping, one of your subscribers came in during your absence, said he owed for two years' subscription, paid it, and also paid another year in advance.

In advance? gasped the editor, nearly as much overcome as his apprentice.

Yes sir, and it has produced such an effect on me, that I've been perfectly helpless ever since.

And well you may, my Jim. But get up; if you survive this you are safe, as there is little prospect of another such catastrophe in this office.

Animal Heat.

What is it that makes your body warm? Clothes and fire, you will perhaps say. No; they help to keep you warm, but they do not make you so. The heat that makes you warm is produced in your own body, and clothes and fires only serve to keep the warmth in after it is made. The heat in you is made by a real combustion. There is a fire going on everywhere in your body. It is a real fire, though there is no flame nor light.

The Thoughtful Wife.

She knew her husband had an aversion to under-dressed meat; and seeing that the servant had so placed the joint that the part least done would meet his eye, mutely, but promptly, the wife turned it over before she took her seat at the opposite end of the table. This was a simple act, but a very wise one. How much discomfort may not that simple act have prevented! and, assuredly, "prevention is better than cure." Moreover, deeds speak louder than words. Was it not a proof of the wife's interest, and the showing of a becoming concern for her husband's comfort, as well as a laudable anxiety to avoid the veriest reason for fault finding? Oh, ye wives, by a little forethought and an effort on your part to bring to mind what you long have known to be your husband's likes and dislikes, how many cross looks and hard words may you not save!

The Finished Garment.

A Christian man's life is laid on the loom of time to a pattern which he does not see, but God does, and his heart is a shuttle. On one side of the loom is sorrow, and on the other is joy; and the shuttle, struck alternately by each, flies back and forth, carrying the thread, which is white or black as the pattern needs; and in the end, when God shall lift up the finished garment, and all its changing hues shall glance out, it will then appear that deep and dark colors were as needful to perfectness and beauty as the bright and high colors.

Long and Short Days.

At Berlin and London, the longest day has sixteen hours and a half; at Stockholm, it has eighten and a half hours; at Hamburg, seventeen hours, and the shortest seven; at St. Petersburg, the longest day has nineteen, and the shortest five hours: at Tornea, in Finland, the longest day has twenty-one hours and a half, and the shortest two hours and a half; at Wanderhus, in Norway, the day lasts from the 21st of May to the 22d of July; and at Spitzbergen, the longest day is three months and a half.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Jan. 31st, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

ARRIVED SAFE. Letters have been received from the Quincy Boys in the 39th Mass. Regiment, announcing the arrival of boxes packed recently at the store of Mr. Holden. Many cheers were given when the boxes were opened to find the things in so good a condition. Thanks were given to Miss Elizabeth Adams for the many things sent by this generous lady. A secesh flag was sent to little George Wilson, as a compliment for his parched corn. The letters also speak in the highest terms of Mr. Schwabe, who sent some eighteen parcels in the boxes.

We understand that boxes will soon be made up at the store of Mr. Frederick Hardwick, for Quincy Boys in other regiments.

WORTH AND PATRIOTISM REWARDED.—The friends of Lieut. David T. Chubbuck, of the 17th Mass. Regiment, are about to present him with a beautiful sword and sash, as an humble testimonial of the regard with which he is held by them as a soldier, and his worth as a citizen.

Lieut. Chubbuck is a native of this town—honorably connected. At the first alarm of his country's danger, he sprang to her rescue, and for noble deeds of daring and soldierly bearing, on many a hard fought battle field, he was taken from the ranks and promoted to the enviable position he now occupies.—The Lieutenant belongs to a chivalrous stock, and there is no doubt, with his trusty blade, he will carve out a fame, honorable to himself and the generous donors.

AMPUTATION. The accident of Mr. Frederick Hardwick, which we mentioned last week, has proved quite serious. An amputation of one finger has taken place, and it is feared that he will lose another.

THE LECTURE. According to announcement J. Q. A. Brackett, Esq., of Harvard University, delivered an address in the Town Hall, upon the "Phases of the Times," on Wednesday evening last. The gathering was small, owing largely, no doubt, to the inclemency of the weather. The lecturer was quite young, and from appearance not well versed in the gestures and ways that usually please our "go ahead" people. The address was well written—containing much that would have done credit to an elder and more experienced person, and was well received by the audience. We hope the good success the young student has had in this place, will stimulate him on in his upward career to that destiny so much admired by public orators.

THE LEVEE. Time rolls on, and another of those social re-unions so universally admired, and largely attended by our citizens generally, is to be given by the Universalists of this place, on Wednesday evening next. Their entertainments in former years have been unsurpassed; and, from what we can learn, it will be no less admired this year. In addition to the programme announced in another column, we hear that an excellent Glee Club from Braintree will enliven the occasion. The music of the evening will be Gates' celebrated band from Boston, instead of Flagg's, as announced on the posters through mistake. An unusually large crowd may be expected.

RICHARDS' HEATER. We are pleased to learn that Mr. Jacob Flint, an industrious and much respected citizen of this place, has purchased the right to sell this useful patent in this and the adjoining town of Weymouth. Believing from experience that it is one of the best and most economical patents ever offered to the public, we should be ungenerous if we did not say a word in its praise.—It is particularly a blessing to the poor, being a great saving of fuel. Mr. Flint invites all our citizens to try these excellent Heaters, and, if they do not give perfect satisfaction, they will be removed without charge.

KILLED IN BATTLE. Thomas J. Crowell, of Braintree, a veteran soldier of this war, was killed in the disastrous repulse at Fredericksburg, (Va.) Mr. Crowell was a member of the 4th Massachusetts Regiment, in the three months campaign.

On the return of the Regiment, he joined the Massachusetts 20th Regiment, Company I, and bravely he fought in their many bloody battles, which were gloriously enrolled on its banners. We have official notice of his patriotism and bravery, and many are his friends who mourn his loss. Through ten severe battles he passed unharmed, but in the eleventh, he fell mortally wounded, and lived but a few hours.

APPOINTMENT. We learn that Seth Adams, Esq., of this town, has been re-appointed by Col. Thomas as Deputy Sheriff for Norfolk County, and was commissioned and qualified one day the present week.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, JANUARY 29, 1863.

There is a changed feeling here relative to the rebellion and its results. There is less of hope, with dependency on the increase. A rumor reaches us, that the Army of the Potomac is to be virtually disbanded, and the greater portion of it sent to the West, to cooperate in the grand campaign soon to be inaugurated. A small portion of it will be retained near Washington—enough to protect the city; again, that General Burnside has resigned and Hooker succeeds him; and, as if the chapter of sorrows were not complete, a correspondent writing from the headquarters of the Army of the Potomac, after detailing the late movements, says: "Whether this drawback might not have been overcome by a vigorous effort and hearty cooperation on the part of the military leaders is a question much mooted here. There are those who assert that had it not been for the apathy of some in high military command, we might still have carried the day. Such is the present gloomy picture of National affairs, and the people disappointed. But experience has taught the civilized world that the progress of war hardly ever fulfills the popular expectation. Though final success maybe accomplished, the course of uninterrupted triumph never runs smooth. War is always attended with more or less opposition to Government. If the administration has made mistakes they will be corrected. The loyal men of the country have but one purpose, one hope, and that is the restoration, preservation, and the perpetuity of the Union. We condemn in toto the harsh denunciations used by partisan presses, that every Republican is an Abolitionist; and Democrats who dare to differ with certain measures of the General Government are traitors to their country. There are but two parties of the present day—loyal and disloyal men. He who stands by the Federal Constitution, the palladium of our liberties, and who is in favor of a vigorous prosecution of the war to restore the Union as it was, and bring about an honorable peace, claims true fealty to the country, and the sublime sentiment of patriotism has a resting place in his heart. These are gloomy times; but darker days existed in the war of the American Revolution. Our Fathers passed through the ordeal of trial and suffering with success. Scarce a decided victory was won except the surrender of Lord Cornwallis, and that closed the seven years' war. Like our Forefathers we are struggling for liberty, and if the spirit of patriotism is depressed among the people, it should be revived. If a re-construction of the Cabinet is necessary, let it be done. If a change in the administration policy is needed, it is wise, however bold and sweeping it may be, to bring that change about. Every thing for the country, nothing for men.

The business of the State Legislature is moving quietly. A bill has been reported in the Senate from the Banking Committee, contemplating the continuance in force until the 1st of February, 1864 the Act suspending the penalties against banks for non-payment of specie. It will pass without opposition.

The Insurance Commissioners have presented their Annual Report on Loan Fund Associations. A true report would show these shaving institutions great humbugs. Horse Railroad Petitions are coming in, and some efforts are making to retrench State expenditures. But very little business of importance will be done until the Standing Committees report.

There is a visible lull in the commercial circles. The advance of gold to fifty-five, and silver to forty per cent. premium, has no favorable effect on trade or commerce. Speculations in stocks continue rampant, and many have realized handsome gains in this hazardous operation since New Year's day.

X.

THE WORST FEARS ABOUT TO BE REALIZED. Mr. John B Bass, who submitted to the amputation of his leg at the Massachusetts General Hospital, in the early part of this month, from wounds received in the army of the United States, which we made mention in our last, we regret to learn has continued gradually to fail since the operation. It was reported last evening, that it was thought he could not live the night out.

A VICIOUS HORSE. As Mr. Simpson, of the West District, was harnessing his horse, yesterday morning, the enraged animal turned on him and bit him severely in the arm.

GRUMBLERS. It is conceded on all hands, we believe, that this is the most remarkable season within the recollection of the "oldest inhabitant." During the twenty-four hours, we have every variety of weather—the mild, dewy rains of spring—snow and sleet, with a brisk Northwester, and the freezing breath of winter. Locomotion for man or beast is wearisome and difficult. Such weather is pregnant with colds, and if care is not used, will make fat graveyards.

INJUNCTION REMOVED.—The Supreme Court of Massachusetts on Saturday removed the injunction from the Newport and Fall River Railroad, which Judge Hoar some months since pronounced perpetual.

THE MUTUAL LOAN FUND ASSOCIATION at Weymouth, have sold their mortgages to various Savings Institutions and are closing up their business.

Galveston, Texas, Dec. 25, 1862.

We arrived off this city yesterday, after two days' sail from New Orleans; during which time we saw nothing of importance. We eat this morning aboard the vessel, and what do you think we had for a Christmas breakfast? nothing but mush and molasses. The mush was awful, and the molasses no better. I eat in silence. Soon after breakfast the order came to pack up, and about ten o'clock, we landed and took possession of some store-houses on the wharf. It is very shoal water here, and the wharves are built similar to our bridges, and extend a long distance out into the bay. Our orders are very strict; we are obliged to keep on our equipments, and be ready at a moment's warning.

Dec 26. We were ordered last night to sleep with our equipments and boots on, and be ready for any emergency; but we had a beautiful night's rest without being disturbed. The people here are in a starving condition—flour is selling at $100 per barrel; eggs at $1.50 per dozen; shoes at 14 to $16 a pair; tobacco at $5 per pound, and everything else in the same proportion. It is very hot here in the middle of the day, but the weather is beautiful, and the nights resemble our July and August evenings. This morning a scouting party was sent out—the writer being one of the number. The houses and shops we passed were all shut up; everything was awful dull—it seemed like Sunday. We saw a great many sheep, cows, horses, pigs, &c., roving about. The soil is sandy, and the grass is coarse in many places. Orange trees and Oleanders are growing in all their richness by the roadside; and everything else seems to be growing without care or trouble.

Dec. 27. I accompanied another foraging party this afternoon, and had a jolly time.—We were allowed to go into the houses and take what we wanted, and it was fun. I got more than I could carry and had to throw away part. It was dark before we started to return, and when we came in sight of the pickets, they cried out to us to "double quick," as we were pursued by the rebels, and you had better believe we did it in good earnest. We were lucky enough to escape them; but the report now is that we are to be attacked to-night, and are ordered to sleep with all our things on, ready for an engagement. There is a large fire burning in the rebels' camp, and everything looks suspicious In conclusion, dear Father and Mother, I must say, I am bound to do my duty as a soldier, and if I should fall you may know that I died fighting for my Country.

From your son, A. H.

[The writer of the above journal, is a Quincy boy belonging to Co. G., 42d Mass. Regiment, and was captured with some three hundred more, who was stationed at Galveston, Texas, on New Year's morning.—ED.]

At Douglas Hospital, Washington, (D. C.) on the 3d instant, from wounds received at the battle of Fredericksburgh, (Va.) December 13th, 1862, Henry F. Packard, son of Josiah V. and Catharine E. Packard, of this town, aged 20 years and 9 months.

The feelings of the relatives and friends here, were bowed in sorrow, on the announcement of the death of young Packard: they were not prepared for such an event; true, they knew of the gallant bearing of the young soldier—the part he took in the bloody affair at Fredericksburgh—his misfortune—but never dreamed it would result so seriously.

From a letter of Sergeant Pratt, Company K, 18th Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteers, of the 18th instant, to O. T. Newcomb, of this place, after the detail of other interesting particulars, the following beautiful encomium is paid to the memory of the deceased:

MR. NEWCOMB—SIR: We have just received the intelligence of the death of our beloved comrade; we all shared in the general regret—that one so young, so good, and so noble, should be cut down in the spring-time of life. Captain Meservey is too unwell to write, and wishes me to communicate the sad news to his parents; will you undertake the delicate office?

Henry was the favorite of both officers and men; he was the life of the Company—always cheerful and in good spirits under all circumstances—whether on the march or in the camp. I was by his side at the battle of Bull Run; he stood his ground like a hero—with perfect coolness and bravery. At the battle of Butler's Mills, near Sharpsburg, he was fearless in the midst of danger; and at Fredericksburgh, where he received his death wound, the same daring intrepidity marked his career; he was in the front ranks when we charged the rebels' breastworks; I did not see him fall; but after we retreated, and had again formed in line of battle, to make a second charge, I saw him making his way to the rear. I did not think he was mortally wounded. In his death, his parents have lost a dutiful son, the Company a beloved brother in arms, and the country, one of its bravest defenders.

How many homes have been made to mourn the loss of their loved ones, by this cruel and unnatural war. May it soon be brought to a close, and peace once more be restored to our unhappy country, is the wish of

Yours, JOHN A. PRATT,
Serg. Co. K 18th Reg. Mass. Vol.

For the Patriot.

Mr. Bosserman's Lecture.

According to appointment, Rev. Mr. Bosserman spoke upon "Prison Life among the Rebels," in the Universalist Church, on the evening of the twenty-second instant. He had a long story to tell, and he told it well. The iron had entered his own soul, and he spoke from his heart, and with effect. His lecture was instructive from the beginning to the end. He gave an interesting account of his own arrest and imprisonment for the sake of his country. Mr. Bosserman was a resident clergyman of Richmond; when the rebellion broke out he found himself among the rebels, and they expected to find him one of them. But they had mistaken their man. He was not a rebel, but a patriot. He was true to the Union. He clung to the good old flag, though he could see nothing but the stars and bans waving in all directions. He would not preach in favor of the slave-holder's rebellion. He would not pray for the success of the rebel army. He refused to open his church for service on Jeff. Davis's Fast day. He would have nothing to do with the abomination. He would not lift hand or voice on the side of his country's foes. He stood his ground bravely as a true patriot. And because he was a patriot, he was charged with treason, arrested as a traitor, thrown into a filthy negro jail, and kept there three months. Here John M. Botts was one of his fellow-prisoners. The first chance he had after his release, he escaped with his family by a flag-of-truce-boat and came to Baltimore. Mr. Bosserman, as an eye, an ear, and heart witness, confirms all that we have heard and read of the dishonor and cruelty of the rebels towards their Union prisoners. The sentinels were instructed by the superior officers not to take the least insult from a Yankee. And if they saw or heard anything they didn't like, they would fire their loaded muskets into the rooms among the prisoners. Mr. Bosserman's room was fired into several times.

If a prisoner put his head out of an unbarred window he was shot at once. Mr. Bosserman was permitted to see his wife but twice, and then in the presence of the jailer and several officers. His little children were allowed to come into the alley where he could see them a few minutes from the window, but they must not speak with each other. When he left Richmond a few months ago, it was dark and desolate. Provisions and every thing else were at starvation prices. They are worse now. It is Mr. Bosserman's opinion, that the rebels are getting weaker daily. Their strength is only a thin shell; when that is broken, the sham Confederacy will be crushed and destroyed. He has no word of discouragement for the Union, but like every faithful friend of his country, he believes we are bound to conquer, and present the world an undivided and Free Republic. O. K.

Gymnastics.

On Wednesday, of last week, a friend handed us a ticket, admitting two, to an exhibition of the "Quincy Gymnasts," to take place in the Town Hall. Accordingly we arrived there early, and seating ourselves upon a settee near the stage, awaited the entertainment. Soon, a bright little fellow played upon the piano the fine air, "Marching Along," and a column of thirty young ladies and gentlemen entered. They were dressed in appropriate and becoming costumes—admitting perfect freedom of motion, and displaying the good taste and pretty figures of the wearers. After taking their assigned positions, they went through many graceful evolutions with "dumb-bells"—movements, each one of which, brought into play the muscles of the chest and shoulders. Then followed the pleasing exercises of the "wand," showing the flexibility of the arms; marching around the Hall in a variety of intricate ways—with the "wands," held perpendicular; walking in couples, with arms crossed behind them—now on one toe and one heel; now hopping, running "double quick"—all came to the inspiriting music. Then the nimbleness and agility of our girls were brought out by a game of "bean bags," which was very exciting. They took every imaginable position without the aid of apparatus and pliable movements with rings—all being presented with the accompaniment of the piano. Many familiar waltzes and enlivening marches were played by the nimble fingers of the performer. Altogether, it was a pleasing and unique entertainment, reflecting credit upon both teacher and pupils. The necessity of physical training is too obvious to need urging upon the public mind. Give our girls liberty to run, jump, leap, hop and play "bean bags," and we shall have smarter girls, happier wives, and more competent mothers. And instead of delicate, round-shouldered invalids, we shall have a race of fresh looking, healthy women. R. E. O.

THE 18TH. We learn that Mr. Schwabe sent a box of niceties to the Quincy and Taunton Boys in the 18th Mass. Regiment, yesterday.

☞ Third Lecture to Young Men by Rev. Mr. Thwing to-morrow afternoon: SUBJECT—The Perils of Young Men.

CELEBRATION AT WEYMOUTH. The Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of the settlement of Rev. Joshua Emery, at the Old North Church, took place on Monday evening.—The meeting-house was brilliantly lighted and profusely ornamented with evergreen and flowers. It was densely crowded at an early hour. Over the pulpit were various inscriptions:

"Our Pastor from 1838 to 1863."
"This Church organized 1638."

Two hundred and twenty-five years ago, and the names of the early ministers. Above the chandelier were the Stars and Stripes. A choir of some eighty voices sung a number of hymns prepared for the occasion. Addresses were made by Rev. Mr. Dyer, who presided, Dr. Storrs, Rev. Messrs. Rockwood, Lane, Perkins, Haynes, and J. P. Terry. Mr. F. E Loud then presented his Pastor with a magnificent service of plate, valued at upwards of two hundred dollars, a testimonial of his people's love, which was suitably acknowledged, as well as other gifts by which his table and purse had been filled. A collation followed.

We have not space to allude to the details of this deeply interesting occasion. A Memorial volume will soon be published. The Anniversary was as creditable to the Society, whose faithful and generous care of their minister was repeatedly alluded to, as it was gratifying to him. Never have they failed, we are informed, in the payment of a single quarter's salary on the day it was due, for twenty-five years—except in one instance, when the neglect was purely accidental. Besides rendering him his dues, they have, as Mr. Perkins observed, remembered the Scriptural suggestion:

"Take a present in thine hand, and go meet the man of God."

His Library as well as his Larder has been remembered; a quiet hint that "beaten oil is to be brought to, and will be appreciated in the Sanctuary."

May this ancient Church long enjoy the ministrations of their present Pastor, and some day celebrate a "Golden Wedding," as happily as they have this "Silver Wedding."

KEROSENE OIL A reduction in the price. Furnald, on Washington street, has a prime article, which the public are invited to make trial. There is no pleasanter or more economical light in use than pure Kerosene oil, and no surer place to obtain the genuine article.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

The Secretary of War in answer to a call for information, reports to the House, that a statement of the men in service would involve the examination of a dozen different muster rolls of about 1,000 regiments; that work now dragging heavily would be suspended; and that the publication of such a statement would not be compatible, in his view with the public interests.

Dr. Stephen Gale of Portland has erected in the burying ground at Plymouth, Mass., a marble monument over the remains of sixty of the seventy two mariners who perished in the shipwreck of the armed brig Gen. Arnold in the year 1778.

The Post Office Department is now ready to issue embossed postage envelopes, for private firms and individuals, made up with their names and business designations, to order.

The cleaning of postage stamps for the purpose of using them a second time is a penal offence, punishable by imprisonment not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by both imprisonment and fine.

Gen. Breckinridge had one of his ears taken off at the battle of Murfreesboro'. It should be preserved in souse. The General is marked just as common thieves are in eastern countries.

The Standard says J. F. Bigelow, of East Abington, is putting up a patent pegging machine, which it is calculated will peg 300 pairs per day.

A man inquired in the office of the Aroostook Times the other day if they charged as much for advertising a colt as they did for an old horse.

The California section of the Pacific Railway was commenced at Sacramento on the 8th inst.

There are now about 300 men lacking to fill the quota of the State under the last call.

Louis N. Stodder, of Boston, Acting Master of the Monitor, who remained by her until she went down, has been promoted to be an Acting Lieutenant in the Navy. A deserved reward for his fearlessness and devotion.

The slaves excepted from the presidential boon of freedom number 837,624. Gen. Butler regards those in the exempted districts in Southern Louisiana virtually emancipated already.

The President has signed the bill for the admission of the State of Western Virginia, and it becomes a law.

Elisha Hall of Bridgewater was found dead in his bed on the morning of the 13th inst. He was 38 years old and retired the evening previous in his usual health.

The President has closed the contract proposed some time ago by M. Bernard Kock, for the voluntary colonization of negroes on the Haytian Island, A Vache. M. Kock has a lease of the island for twenty years. The contract is for the colonization of 5000 persons at a cost of $50 each.

THE CONCERT. On Wednesday evening there was a Concert and Dance at the Town Hall, under the auspices of "The Quincy Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Association." The occasion was one of much interest and enjoyment. We would especially commend the fine singing of Miss Clara Hill, Colonel J. H. D. Blake and Mr. Wilson. It was an entertainment of itself worth the price of admission, not to mention the noble object for which it was given. Miss Hill has acquired a high reputation both as a genial lady and vocalist. Colonel Blake is ever ready to use his naturally fine gifts as a singer, in behalf of any charitable object. We think the citizens are greatly indebted to him on this and former occasions. Mr. Wilson needs no commendation—his part was finely executed. It was an evening of enjoyment—a social gathering, productive of good feeling, and in these dark times, as a moral, social, and commendable meeting, the citizens owe their thanks to all those who originated, or helped on this really noble project. We hope that for the benefit of the soldiers as well as for the genuine enjoyment of the people, that these entertainments may be repeated as often as possible.

OLD JEFF. GOT IT. The Pontoon Bridge, consisting of sixty boats and the like number of wagons, which was built last year, at Mr. Manfield's works, at South Braintree, is now used by the rebel army. The bridge was laid by our army at Harper's Ferry last summer, but, unfortunately, Stonewall Jackson came along one day, and finding it an excellent bridge, concluded to carry it off with him on his travels. It cost the Government fifty thousand dollars.

SOMETHING NEW!

The Craig Microscope

Magnifies 100 Diameters or 10,000 Times

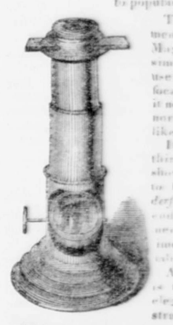
The Microscope simplified and adapted to popular use.



This beautiful instrument, although of great Magnifying power, is so simple, that a child can use it, for it requires no focal adjustment, and it neither fatigues the eye nor wearies the patience. To reveal the wonders of creation, shows the minutest object to be fearfully and wonderfully made. In the mechanic shop it will detect imperfect tools, or the presence of dust, and in the household, the hidden cause of disease. As an ENGRAVER'S GLASS it is unequaled, being elegant, amusing and instructive.

PRICE, $2 00. Sent by mail, post paid, for $2.25, or with six beautiful objects, $3 00. Mounted Objects at the rate of $1 50 per set.

Notice to Tax Payers.

AT the Annual Town Meeting of the Inhabitants of the Town of Quincy, held on March 3d, 1862,—

"VOTED — That the names of all persons whose taxes are unpaid on the First day of February, 1863, be printed with the Auditors' Report."

There is yet a large amount unpaid. Those that are assessed for Poll Tax alone have done honor to themselves. Of 648 Single Poll Taxes committed to me for collection, only 100 still remain unpaid. Let those who have delayed paying see that February does not overtake them with their Tax Bills not receipted.

Scientific American.

The Best Mechanical Paper in the World!

EIGHTEENTH YEAR.

VOLUME VIII—NEW SERIES

A NEW Volume of this popular Journal commenced on the first of January. It is published WEEKLY, and every number contains sixteen pages of useful information, and from five to ten original engravings of new inventions and discoveries, all of which are prepared expressly for its columns.

To the Mechanic and Manufacturer.

No person engaged in any of the mechanical or manufacturing pursuits should think of "doing without" the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN. It costs but six cents per week; every number contains from six to ten engravings of new machines and inventions, which can not be found in any other publication.

To the Inventor.

The SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is indispensable to every inventor, as it not only contains illustrated descriptions of nearly all the best inventions as they come out, but each number contains an Official List of the Claims of all the Patents issued from the United States Patent Office during the week previous; thus giving a correct history of the progress of inventions in this country. We are also receiving, every week, the best scientific journals of Great Britain, France, and Germany; thus placing in our possession all that is transpiring in mechanical science and art in these old countries. We shall continue to transfer to our columns copious extracts from these journals of whatever we may deem of interest to our readers.

A pamphlet of instruction as to the best mode of obtaining Letters Patent on new inventions, is furnished free on application.

Messrs. MUNN & Co. have acted as Patent Solicitors for more than SEVENTEEN years, in connection with the publication of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, and they refer to 20,000 patentees for whom they have done business.

No charge is made for examining sketches and models of new inventions and for advising inventors as to their patentability.

Chemists, Architects, Millwrights and Farmers.

The SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN will be found a most useful journal to them All the new discoveries in the science of chemistry are given in its columns, and the interests of the architect and carpenter are not overlooked; all the new inventions and discoveries appertaining to these pursuits being published from week to week.—Useful information pertaining to the interests of millwrights and mill-owners will be found in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, which information they can not possibly obtain from any other source. Subjects in which farmers are interested will be found discussed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN; most of the improvements in agricultural implements being illustrated in its columns.

TERMS—To mail subscribers: Three Dollars a year, or One Dollars for four months. The volumes commence on the first of January and July. Specimen copies will be sent gratis to any part of the country.

Western and Canadian money or Post-office stamps taken at par for subscriptions. Canadian subscribers will please to remit twenty-five cents extra on each year's subscription to prepay postage.

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES.

Doctor Cheeseman's Pills.

The combination of ingredients in these Pills is the result of a long and extensive practice. They are mild in their operation, and certain in effecting all irregularities, Painful Menstruation, removing all obstructions whether from cold or otherwise headache, pain in the side, palpitation of the heart, whites, all nervous affections, fierce, fatigue, pain in the back and limbs, disturbed sleep, which arise from interruption of nature.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS

Are the commencement of a new era in the treatment of those irregularities and obstructions which have consigned so many to a PREMATURE GRAVE. No female can enjoy good health unless she is regular, and whenever an obstruction takes place the general health begins to decline.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS.

Are the most effectual remedy ever known for all complaints peculiar to Females. To all classes they are invaluable, inducing, with certainty, perfect regularity. They are known to thousands, who have used them at different periods, throughout the country, having the sanction of some of the most eminent Physicians in America.

Explicit directions, stating when they should not be used, with each Box—the Price One Dollar per Box, containing from 50 to 60 Pills.

Pills sent by mail, promptly, by remitting to the Proprietor. Sold by Druggists generally.

Poetry.

Winter's Advent

Winter, old Winter, hath just peeped in,—
Only a moment, in passing, he called,—
As I saw his icicle-bearded chin,
I thought of the poor by his visit appalled.

Homeless and friendless, and shriv'ring with cold,
Is the picture they see in his advent near;
'Tis an oft told tale, worn out and old,
That cheerless tale of the winter drear.

But little the children of fortune know
Of the biting frost so cruelly keen,
Of the chilling shroud, of the winter snow,
And the frozen crust in the street, I ween.

Such musings the falling snow-flakes brought,
And I felt how fraught with fear
To the poor and friendless must be the thought
Of the cold, bitter hours drawing near.

Not thus they seem to the wealthy and gay,
Whose hearts exult as they view
Old Winter's cards, saying, "I'm on my way
With my mantle of pearly hue.

"And I'll spread it far o'er valley and field,
And your avenues far and wide;
And boundless the joy my presence shall yield
From snow-hill and merry sleigh ride.

"With silver bells jingling to pulses of love,
And eyes that lovingly shine
As bright as the starl-ts that glitter above,
Yet more precious than gems of the mine.

"And the skimming of crystal mirrors clear,
And the dance and the "Christmas yule" bright,
And the cozy fire, with the loved ones near,
Shut out from the stormy night,

"Will brighten your spirits with social glee,
And render more welcome my call;
So, merry and joyous the wealthy will be,
As my heralds of white softly fall."

Ah! yes, I sighed, there are pictures too,
That before earth's children are laid;
And the lens fate giveth doth tinge the view,
Either rosy or dark with shade.

'Tis blessed to think the heavens above
Will yet, in their roseate light,
Fold rich and poor with an equal love,
If only the heart be right.

And the poor hands, wasted with toil and care,
That here might not cull a flower,
Shall gather whole garments of roses there,
To form an eternal bower.—N. Y. Eve. Post.

We're on our Journey Home.

[The following beautiful stanzas were sent by Lorenzo D. Parker to his sister, only a few weeks before he started for home. Alas! his long home; for his spirit fled from its weak, mortal frame, ere the vessel had half completed its voyage, and his body was consigned to a watery grave.—Ed.]

BY RICHARD WRIGHT.

We're on our journey home, sis, o'er hill and flowery heather,
Through broad roads and through narrow paths, in fine and cloudy weather;
By placid shining river and o'er stormy ocean's foam,
Thus far we both have travelled, sis, upon our journey home.

From dear-loved childhood's cradle, sis, from hearth where sat our mother,
We've journeyed, often side by side, in sight of one another;
We've helped each other over stiles, and morn and evening's gloam
Beheld us in the spring-time, sis, upon our journey home.

In bright green summer fields, sis, 'mid autumn's fruit trees glowing,
And on through winter's ice and snow, with sharp winds keenly blowing,
We still progressed, as to his shrine the pilgrim's footsteps roam,
Though oft with weary limbs, sis, upon our journey home.

We're nearing to that "bourne," sis, where our journey will be ended,
And thankful let us be to HIM who all our steps attended;
And may angelic Hope and Faith, with cheery voice, say—Come!
As singly, or together, sis, we reach our journey's home.

Anecdotes.

A stranger came up to a true Washingtonian with the inquiry:

Can you tell where I can get anything to drink?

O, yes, said the other, follow me.

The man followed him two or three streets, till he began to be discouraged.

How much further, must I go? said he.

Only a few steps further, said the Washingtonian, there is the pump!

A man who had given himself up to the doctrines of the great dietist, Graham, was once discovered voraciously putting out of sight a large beefsteak.

Why, said his friend in surprise, I thought you lived on vegetable diet!

So I do, choked out the carnivorous animal; so I do—is not all flesh grass?

A Frenchman was lately bargaining for half-a-dozen sheep.

What are you about? said a friend.

I have heard say, replied monsieur, that if you want to make money buy sheep and sell deer. I shall puy de sheep and sell de venison.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical Cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Emissions, Sexual Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally, Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c.—By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in his admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands.

PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES

ON THE

Physiological View of Marriage.

250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, blushings, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c, &c. It is a truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.

YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATMENT.

We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled hpysicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the many NEW AND EFFICACIOUS REMIDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of professional Practice, for the past twenty-five years.

FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. De Laney's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box,) though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.

Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.

TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.

THE "ELECTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.

I commenced using your Hair Restorative, and it immediately stopped the hair falling off, and soon restored the color, and after using two bottles my head is completely covered with a healthy growth of hair, and of the same color it was in early manhood. I take great pleasure in recommending your excellent Hair Restorative, and you also may refer any doubtful person to me.

My Love.

My love, dear man, turns in his toes,
My love is tangle-kneed,
Cross-eyed, left-handed, hair and beard
In hue are disagreed.
He has no soft and winning voice,
No single charm has he,
And yet, this awkward, ugly man
Is all the world to me.

My neighbor gay rejoices in
A beauty of a man;
Straight-limbed, fair-faced,—and find his peer
She knows no mortal can
I looked upon his handsome form
And own 'tis fine to see,
But turned back to the homely man
That's all the world to me.

There's Mrs. Flirt and Mrs Chat,
Each with their cavalier:
They smile and wonder how I can
Call such a fright "my dear."
I smile and wonder too, to think
How they can happy be,
Without my homely man, for he
Is all the world to me.

Don't ask me why. I cannot tell;
'Tis all a mystery;
I've sought myself, a thousand times,
Its secret history.
Meanwhile my heart grows sad to think
How drear this life would be Without this awkward, homely man,
Who's all the world to me.

Scraps.

FRENCH ROLLS. One quart milk, one cup butter, two eggs. Let the dough rise twice in the dish, that is, after it rises once, take it out, knead it over and let it rise again; after this roll it out, cut it out with a tumbler, double together, roll-fashion, and let it rise in the pans half an hour before baking.

RYE AND INDIAN JOHNNY CAKES. Two cups of rye, two cups of Indian meal, a small teaspoonful of saleratus, a little salt, sufficient sour milk to make a stiff batter. Bake in cakes on a griddle; split open and butter them; send to table hot.

SOLVENT FOR OLD PUTTY AND PAINT.—Soft soap mixed with solution of potash or caustic soda; or pearl ash and slaked lime mixed with sufficient water to form a paste. Either of these laid on with an old brush or rag, and left for some hours, will render it easily removed.

The editor of a country newspaper, in answer to a reader's complaint that he did not give news enough, advised him to read the Bible which he had no doubt would be news to him.

Old Mrs. Darnley is a pattern of household economy. She says she has made a pair of socks last fifteen years by merely knitting new feet every winter and legs every other winter.

FORGETFUL. A little fellow weeping most piteously, was suddenly interrupted by some amusing occurrence. He paused in his cries for a moment—the train of thought was broken. Ma, said he, renewing his snuffle, ma ugh! ugh! what was I crying about just now?

They err widely who propose to turn men to the thought of a better world by making them think very meanly of this.

A clergyman has administered the following warning to crinoline wearers: Let women beware, while putting on their profuse and expansive attire, how narrow are the gates of Paradise.

The best way to expand the chest is to have a large heart in side it.

Wanted for our shot proof vessels, a few men of iron frame.

I like your impudence, as a pretty girl said when her beau kissed her.

What stingy fellows they must be in New York, exclaimed a fine country girl. Our Sallie says she never could get a buss without paying five cents for it.

Imitate the example of the locomotive. He runs along, whistles over his work, and yet never takes anything but water when he wants to "wet his whistle."

Miscellaneous.

Ashamed of her Father.

Clinkerty, clankerty, clink—sounded out the hammer of worthy Giles Hardy, as the sparks flew, and the red gleam brightened the smutty timbers within the shop, and shone across the greensward over the way, where the village boys played with kite and ball. He might think his lot a hard one, toiling, as was his wont, from morning till night, did you not hear his glad song rising high above the sound of the iron he was welding. "I'm Going Home," and "Happy Day," were ever on his lips, and music and gratitude dwelt in his heart; therefore he was one of the happiest men in W. Giles lived in a little house so near the shop that it was covered with the soot and cinders from the forge. From its door might be seen his little Sallie running over to admire the sparks which she called "soldiers," or to lead her father home when the day's toil was over and the evening meal was waiting. She was not ashamed of his smutty face, his bare, brawny arms, or his soot-begrimmed clothes; not she! In her loving eyes, Giles was the most beautiful man alive. She was not old enough to know that men are too often honored in this world for their garments rather than for their worth; so she imagined that every body esteemed him just as she did.

A new house had been erected on a high hill near, by a fine gentleman from the city; and Sallie was quite delighted to see in his carriage drawn by two bay horses, a sweet little girl about her own age. Once when she was in the shop, they stopped to say something to Giles about shoeing the horses, and Sallie smiled at Lucy, who in return threw her a great red apple. She caught it so nice that they both laughed heartily and became friends; for little children have none of that mean pride which we sometimes see among older people, till they are taught it.

One day, when Sallie was dressed very neatly, she asked leave to take a walk, and bent her steps toward the mansion on the hill. She did not know how to go round by the road, so she climbed over fence and wall till she reached the grounds. There, to her delight, she saw Lucy on a little grey pony which the coachman was leading carefully by the bridle. She drove up to the wall and asked in a kind voice: Have you berries to sell, little girl?

Sallie laughed, and said: No, I'm Sallie, don't you remember me? I came to play with you a little while. May that man open the gate for me? it is very heavy.

I should like to play with you, and to let you ride on my pony, replied pleasant little Lucy, but I know mamma would not allow me to play with you.

Why not? asked Sallie in wonder. I never say naughty words, and I'm all dressed clean this afternoon.

Oh, said Lucy, it is because your father works with his shirt-sleeves rolled up, and has a smutty face and hands.

Oh! the smut washes off, replied the innocent child. He is always clean in the evening; and when he has his Sunday clothes on, he's the handsomest man in the world! Mother is pretty all the time!

Oh, but—mamma would not let you in, I know, because your father shoes the horses, added Lucy.

That is no harm, is it,? Don't your father want his horses shod? asked the wondering Sallie.

Yes; but he won't let me play with poor people's children, answered Lucy.

We're not poor! we're very rich! replied Sallie. Father owns the house and shop and we've got a cow and a calf, and twenty chickens, and the darlingest little baby boy in the world.

But after all this argument, little Lucy shook her head sadly, and said I wouldn't dare to ask you in; but I'll give you some flowers.

So Sallie went back over fence and wall, wondering much at what had passed! Then, for the first time in her life she wished that her father would wear his Sunday clothes all the week, just as the minister and the doctor and Lucy's father did. She almost felt ashamed of him—so noble and kind and good—as she entered the shop to wait for him. She stood by the forge trying to enjoy the sight of the sparks as they danced and fought each other after each stroke of the hammer. But her thoughts were so troubled that she could not see them, nor the beautiful pictures which she always found before her in the blazing fire; mountains, castles, churches, angels, all were gone, and there was nothing left in the black shop but a coal fire, hot sparks, and a smutty man. Tears came into Sallie's eyes, but she crowded them back because she could not tell why she shed them.

The fire was out, the blacksmith pulled off his apron, laid aside his hammer and took the soft hand of Sallie in his own hard and smutty one. For the first time in her life she withdrew it to see if the black came off. Just then the cars came in, creaking and whizzing; and in her joy she saw little Lucy on the platform waiting for her father. The conductor helped him from the steps, and he called out to Lucy: Take my hand, child; but she put both hands up to her face to hide it, and sprung back into the carriage alone; while the coachman, with a blushing face, almost lifted the finely dressed gentleman into it. Oh, what a sad, sad sight. He had been drinking wine till his reason was gone, and he could not walk, so his own sweet child was ashamed of him.

Oh, father, she cried, I was so wicked that I was just beginning to be ashamed of you because your face was black, and you did not dress up like a gentleman all the time. I'm so glad you are a blacksmith instead of a drunken man! Poor! poor little Lucy! She is ashamed of her father, although he has on a fine coat, and has gold buttons in his shirt.

Ah, my dear child, said the blacksmith. God deals justly with us all; every one has a black some where. Some have it in grief in the heart, some as sin in the life, and others as poverty, which makes them toil hard and live poorly. Thank your Heavenly Father, dear, if all the blackness you see about your father is on his face and hands; for the fine gentleman, whose child I fear you have envied, has a black heart, which shows itself in a wicked life. He has money, but that cannot make one happy or honored who does not fear God nor respect himself.

Oh, father, dear! replied the child, I shall never, never be ashamed of you again as long as I live, for there was never such a father as you are to me. I don't care how black your hands and face are.

Rambles Abroad.

LEAVES FROM A TOURIST'S JOURNAL—NO. 5.

The story of the Highland Herdsman, narrated in our last, is supposed to have beguiled our pedestrian trip between Lake Katarine and Inversnaid. At our arrival at the latter point, a steamer met us bound for Balloch, on the southern shore of Lake Lomond. The grand mountain form of Ben Lomond, three thousand two hundred and ten feet high, here threw its dark shadow over the sunny lake. With beating heart—I gazed, as we sailed along, on

"Each purple peak, each dark ravine,
Here eglantine embalmed the air,
Hawthorn and hazel mingled there.
The Primrose pale, the Violet flower
Found in each cliff a narrow—bower.
So wood'rous wild, the whole might seem
The scenery of a fairy dream."

The day spent among the Highlands was the pleasantest of the many spent abroad—but I will not weary my readers with details. At dusk that evening, I found a welcome retreat in the pleasant rooms of "the Royal Albert," one of the best hotels in Glasgow.

There are many things to interest the stranger in this city—but I wished to see more of Edinburgh, and therefore spent a short time in Glasgow, and hastened back to my old quarters, No. 10, Brighton street.

One of the pleasantest features of Edinburgh (my readers will please pronounce the last syllable boro, not berg,) is the literary society which may be here enjoyed. "Scotland's darling seat," as one of her greatest bards has called it, is surpassed but by one in the British realm, in this respect. Here is a University which ranked in the last century, the first in Europe. Here are numerous civil and criminal courts. Many of the nobility and gentry reside in this Modern Athens; indeed, about one third of the citizens belong to the higher educated classes. Many families resort hither for the education of their children, and to enjoy the advantages of a refined and cultivated community, at a more moderate expense than in London or in Continental cities. And here let me answer a question often proposed in reference to the expense of living abroad. There, as here, the cost of living and of travel, is graduated pretty much according to the tastes or necessities of the individual. When in Edinburgh, for instance, I preferred rooms near the University buildings, where I might be with American students. I engaged for my companion and myself a parlor and sleeping room, well furnished, lighted with gas, and comfortable in every respect. The care of the room, blacking of boots and such chores, were included in the weekly charge, which was only four shillings each, a very weakly charge, certainly. If we wished meals in our rooms, we had but to order the articles and pay the cost of each; as for instance—"a basket of strawberries four pence"—such is one of the entries I find in my account book before me—or a cup of tea, or any thing else our kind-hearted hostess could get. One time, however, I remember how sadly perplexed the good woman was when I said to her, "Mrs. Duncan, you may bring us some milk toast." She nodded assent, and retired. After a while, she returned to receive once more the directions of her Yankee guests. She was evidently bothered. She came in at length with some sour buttermilk. We stared at the pitcher; she stared at us; we both looked at each other. "Milk toast"! we at length repeated, with some emphasis. Our hostess now had to own up that she didn't know what milk toast was. I described the method of preparation so far as my knowledge went of culinary art; but as the breakfast hour had passed by, we excused our good lady this time from any further labor.

The Battle of Murfreesboro, Tennessee.

FROM A MASSACHUSETTS SOLDIER.

The following is part of a private letter from Sergeant George F. Howard, Company F, Twenty-Fourth Wisconsin Volunteers, to his relatives at Braintree, his native town. Sergeant Howard was in Sheriden's Division and Griscelle's Brigade, which commenced the fight.

BATTLE FIELD, THIRTY-FIVE MILES FROM NASHVILLE.

"As the battle is now over, I will give you some account of it. The fight commenced Monday morning, on the 6th instant. We were in the first Division and first Brigade in the fight. We fought till night and they drove us. We were rather badly whipped. They came upon us four regiments deep, and we stood and fired into them until they came within two rods. Every time we fired they would drop by the hundreds; but there were so many of them that they would close up and come on again. We fell back and formed a new line, and fought there again, but they came upon us just in the same way.

"Then our General told us to charge bayonet, which we did, and the rebel tide was driven back.

"They soon formed a new line, and again they came at us in greater numbers than ever. They were drunk, and furiously they charged right up to the mouths of our cannon. Our Batteries mowed them down like grass, but they closed up and came on again. We had to retreat.

"On Monday, the first day, we had the worst of it.

"On Tuesday, we had hard fighting, but we did not lose much ground.

"Wednesday and Thursday, the battle raged furiously, without decisive results on either side. During this time, the dead on the ground were so thick that we had to stand on them to form a line of battle.

"Friday was worse than all. General Rosecrans rode along the line and told us his life was not worth a straw if we did not win the battle, and that we must drive the rebels out of the town that day or die!

"He directed our Batteries to stop firing but one gun at a time, that the rebels might think our guns were disabled. The General then placed one hundred and forty pieces of cannon (thirty Batteries) on a little hill, and masked them, and directed our Division to charge on the enemy, and then fall back behind the hill. Some of our cannon were loaded with large iron chain, and the others were doubly charged with grape and canister.

"We charged, and when they showed a disposition to follow, we fell back behind the hill. They came down on us in immense force—tens of thousands. They though: our cannon were silenced, and calculated to give us the grand finishing blow, and destroy us.

"On they came—not seeing our cannon—Regiment after Regiment, and Brigade after Brigade—screaming and yelling like devils, until they came within short range of our guns.

"On our side, for a few minutes, there was an ominous stillness. Suddenly, a broad sheet of flame, and ten thousand thunders broke from our line as our cannons opened on the enemy. Incessantly, for more than an hour, our artillery hurled the most destructive missiles of war into the solid masses of rebel infantry.

"Oh! my God! such a sight was never before seen in this war—so our Generals say.

"They fell like grass, cut and mangled in every conceivable way; whole Companies were swept away in an instant. The dead and wounded were piled up four deep, top of each other. It seemed to me there were ten thousand wounded and slain on that bloody field.

"The rebels acknowledged thirteen hundred killed outright, and five thousand wounded in a short space of time.

"After such slaughter, they broke and run, and we charged after them, killing, wounding, and taking prisoners, till night.

"The next day, Saturday, we fought all day, and we whipped them just as bad.

"On Sunday it rained, and we were busy in burying our dead.

"Sunday night it was dark and raining in torrents. Again the rebels attacked us in great force, yelling like Indians; but we were prepared for them, and gave them a warm reception, consisting of grape, canister, and musket balls, which drove them back with severe loss. This was their last desperate charge.

"Our Brigade General was killed the first day. Of the sights and sufferings, words cannot tell. The dead were left on the field for the whole six days. They were in heaps, in rows, piled on each other. No pen, or words, can describe the horrors of a battle field.

"We slept in the open fields three nights before the battle, without tents, it raining hard day and night. We were wet through and through, and nothing to eat for two days. The rebels captured all our provision train and burned it, and then fought us six days, without cessation.

"Our Regiment went into the fight with six hundred good men. But it makes me cry when I think of it; my comrades are nearly all killed. There are not enough left to form one good company."

P. S. Since the foregoing was written, we are sorry to learn that Sergeant Howard has been wounded while pursuing the retreating army.—[ED.]

A Pumpkin.

Jim —— never made a joke in his life, yet no man ever had more made at his expense. On one occasion, while a candidate for Congress, he was making a speech in a country school house to an audience of country farmers, who were, as a general rule, very attentive listeners. Joe G ——, however, formed an exception. He had been partaking rather liberally of whisky straight, under the influence of which his comments, made in a tone rather louder than a stage whisper, were exceedingly annoying to the speaker. Jim prepared for his grand effort. My friends, said he, I am proud to see around me to-night the hardy yeomanry of the land, for I love the agricultural interests of the country; and well may I love them, my fellow-citizens, for I was born a farmer—the happiest days of my youth were spent in the peaceful avocation of a son of the soil. If I may be allowed to use a figurative expression my friends, I may say, I was raised between two rows of corn. A pumpkin! by thunder, exclaimed the inebriated Joe.

Transportation of Disabled Soldiers.

The bark Fenelon arrived at this port on the 12th inst., from New Orleans, having left that port on the 10th of December last. After knocking about in the Atlantic for only four weeks, she at length arrived as above stated. It will hardly be credited, when known, that 160 sick and disabled soldiers were put on board this vessel and furnished with "transportation" to their homes. These men were subjected to such hardships, as regards unfit accommodations and disgusting food, that twelve or more out of the whole number died on the passage home. The ship had pig iron as ballast, and these bars furnished convenient weights, which were attached to the feet of the dead man when they were slid over the vessel's side into the deep! The crew of the vessel consisted of eight men, all told, when she ought to have had at least fifteen to handle her properly. The food was rusty and rotten bacon, so tender with age that the finger could be pushed through it in any part very easily. This stuff, with some beans occasionally, and biscuits—literally unleavened bread made of flour and water—were the stores served out to men who were, many of them, unable to stand, from chronic diarrhœa, fever and ague, and all diseases incidental to and aggravated by exposure. The families of these men, such of them as reached home alive, will long have cause to remember the barbarity of the officials at New Orleans, who consigned our brave soldiers to ships unfit to carry cattle in. The captain of the Fenelon was a kind hearted man, we believe, and did all he could to alleviate the men's sufferings.—Scientific Am.

The Great Mystery.

The body is to die; so much is certain. What lies beyond? No one who passes the charmed boundary comes back to tell. The imagination visits the realm of shadows—sent out from the window in the soul over life's restless waters, but wings its way wearily back, with an olive leaf in its beak as a token of emerging life beyond the closely bending horizon. The great sun comes and goes in the heaven, yet breathes no secret of the ethereal wilderness; the cresent moon cleaves her nightly passage across the upper deep, but tosses overboard no message, and displays no signals. The sentinel stars challenge each other as they walk their nightly rounds, but we catch no syllable of their countersign which gives passage to the heavenly camp. Between this and the other life is a great gulf fixed, across which neither eye nor foot can travel. The gentle friend, whose eyes we closed in their last sleep long years ago, died with rapture in her wonder-stricken eyes, a smile of ineffable joy upon her lips, and hands folded over a triumphant heart, but her lips were past speech, and intimated nothing of the vision that enthralled her.

The Age of Man.

Of 100 men who are born, 50 die before the 10th year, 20 between the 10th and the 20th, 10 between the 20th and the 30th, 6 between the 30th and the 40th, 5 between the 40th and the 50th, 3 between the 50th and 60th; Haller, who collected the greatest number of instances respecting the age of man, found the relative duration of life to be in the following proportion: Of men who lived from 100 to 110 years, the instances have been 1,000, of from 110 to 130, 60.

The Career of the Alabama.

Mr. S. M. Underhill has furnished the Scotsman with a short history of the career of the Confederate war steamer Alabama. He says:

"The "290" was built by Mr. Laird, the eminent ship builder of Birkenhead, under contract with a Mr. Butcher. She was regularly contracted and paid for; and as nothing transpired during her construction to warrant the supposition that she was destined to hoist the ensign of the Southern Confederacy, no laws of neutrality were infringed. Indeed, it was hinted that the vessel was intended for the service of the Emperor of China. Her keel was laid in the beginning of the year 1862, and she was launched in April thereafter, though she was not ready for sea for the succeeding three months. The "290" is simply a large wooden screw gunboat; such a vessel as is in European navies styled a corvette. She is very strongly built of the best materials, and is constructed to carry ten guns—viz.: one rifled 100 pounder, one 68-pounder, and eight 32-pounders—that is, four 32-pounders, on each broadside, throwing collectively one hundred and twenty-eight pounds of solid shot at each discharge, and two pivot guns. She is bark rigged, and is fitted with a pair of very powerful engines, by Penn, of London. She left Birkenhead towards the end of July, ostensibly on a trial trip, having on board a large party of ladies and gentlemen. On getting out of the Mersey, this party was sent back in a tug-boat, and the "290," as had been previously arranged, neglected to return to Birkenhead, but steamed direct for the island in the Atlantic, where she was to take in her guns, amunition, &c. On leaving England, the 290 had a crew of ninety-three men, for the most part belonging to the English Naval Reserve, all being trained gunners, and the majority old men-of-wars-men. She was temporarily commanded by Captain Bullock, who had under him the proper complement of commissioned and petty officers. Capt. Bullock having learned that the Tuscarora lay in wait for him in St. George's Channel, took his departure by what is known as the North Channel, thus eluding the Federal enemy; though even had he been intercepted the Northener would have found himself in a dilemma, as the "290" had a set of English papers, and other presumptive proofs of her neutrality, in the face of which it might have been difficult for her captor to have acted. The "290" at this time carried no guns or other warlike stores, but consisted merely of the hull, spars, and engines, excepting of course coal and other requisites to enable her to reach her destination, which was Tarissa, one of the Azores or Western Islands, belonging to Portugal. This destination the "290" duly reached, after a fine run of eight days.

"Some time before the departure of the "290" from the Mersey, a large barque left the Thames (cleared for Demerara, West Indies,) to meet the "290" at Tarissa, and there transfer to the latter vessel the guns and stores destined for her, which formed the cargo of the barque. Some reason required to be assigned satisfactory to the Portugues authorities for the "290" having anchored in their bay; and accordingly the excuse furnished to them was that her engines had broken down, which with other repairs would require time. This plea was accepted as a valid one. After the lapse of a week, the barque referred to sailed in, and transferred her amunitions and cargo to the deck of the "290."

The second day after the arrival of the barque, and when the transfer was nearly complete, the British screw steamer Bahama came in, having on board Captain Semmes and the other late officers of the Sumter, beside the remainder of the "290's" armanent, and an addition of twenty odd men to her crew. These; also, were transferred to the decks of the "290," and Captain Semmes then assumed command. The vessels now separated, and the "290" proceeded to sea.

Previous, however, to the Alabama leaving the harbor of Tarissa, Captain Semmes had the men summoned aft, and made known to them the character of the vessel, and her future destination. He read to them a document, attested at Richmond, bearing the signature of Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederate States of America, commissioning him as a Post Captain in the Confederate navy, with orders to take command of the Sloop-of-war Alabama, known as the "290" and instructions to scour the seas, and to sink, burn and destroy every thing which flew the ensign of the United States. Before dismissing them, he intimated, that if there were any who repented the step they had taken, they were at liberty to retrace it; but there were none to accept the alternative.

The first prize of the Alabama, was a Yankee whaler, which she captured and burnt. Her subsequent career is now so famous as to render a single remark thereon superfluous. The Alabama's crew receive from the Confederate government half the value of every American ship and cargo they destroy, and each of her crew is now worth several hundred pounds. All obligations to them have hitherto been faithfully discharged in gold. The Alabama is supplied with coal from Wales by three sailing vessels thus constantly employed.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

RETURNED INVALID SOLDIERS—DISCHARGED. PROMOTION, ETC. The following is a list of Quincy soldiers who have recently reached home, many of them being discharged on account of sickness and wounds received in battle.

George L. Miller, George W. Collier, Moses Luzarder, James B. Christian, Charles Willet, all of the 39th Mass. Regt., Lewis Spear, of the 9th New Hampshire Regiment, Paul Newcomb, of the 35th Mass. Regiment, Jonathan Payne of the Braintree Co., 33d Mass. Regiment—he was three months in the hospital at New York—James M. Cunningham, formerly of the three months' quota, and latterly of the United State Army—he was wounded in the leg—Charles, son of Jotham Cummings, of the Dedham Company, 18th Mass. Regiment—he was three months an invalid in the Fortress Monroe hospital, from a severe rheumatic complaint—Warren Q. Spear, of the 18th Mass. Regiment—he was wounded at the second battle of Bull Run, the ball has never been extracted, and is very painful at times—Warren B Stetson, of the 13th Mass. Regiment—he was long an inmate of the Fairfax hospital, complaint, heart disease, he has been in many a battle—Charles, son of Jonathan Jameson, Esq., of the 18th Mass. Regiment, is gradually recovering at the Portsmouth Grove hospital, (R. I.) where he has been for the last five months. Henry A. Jacobs, attached to the Quincy Company, 18th Mass. Regiment, was wounded in the arm; he reached his home, (Hingham,) last week.

Young Willet, whose return is mentioned above, was only fifteen years of age; he was six weeks in the hospital, and two months in the Convalescence Camp; much too young for such arduous service.

Promoted,—George Monk, of Captain Hunt's Company, has been promoted to Drum Major of the 39th Mass. Regiment.

The 48th, formerly the 55th Mass. Regiment, has a fine officer in Major George Wheatland, of Salem; he is a young man, nevertheless, an experienced officer; of genial manners, but a strict disciplinarian.

INVALIDS ABROAD. Alonzo Howard, of the 18th Mass. Regiment, was severely wounded at the battle of Fredericksburg; the ball was extracted after three weeks.—This young man has been a great sufferer, but is now doing well.

Quincy Boys at the Convalescence Camp, Alexandria, (Va.) Jos. A. Lapham, 28th Mass. Regiment, sick; Patrick Hawley, 28th Mass. Regiment, wounded in the leg at the second Bull Run battle; John Cronin, wounded in the arm, Jas. Billings, sick, both 2d Mass.; —— Bowman, 9th Mass. Regiment, sick; Edward Cane, 18th Mass. Regiment, wounded in the arm, recovering slowly, in one of the Washington hospitals. Lieutenant Horace Derry, severely wounded in the leg, expected home soon on a furlough.

Tim Conlin, of the 14th Mass. Regiment, we learn from the same source, is hearty and robust; the life, climate, and living, agree with Tim remarkably well; his corpulency increases prodigiously. He is a "Broth of a' Boy," and was a great favorite while in the employ of Washington M. French; in his Valentine, is a request to be remembered to the ladies of Quincy for their many kind favors.

A Compliment to Quincy Boys. When Follett's Battery stuck in the mud, at the last move upon Fredericksburg, Lieutenant William Follett, of this town, was appointed Superintendent of the Ambulance, and his brother, Orderly. They conducted themselves with so much credit, that General Hooper, personally, complimented them for their great coolness and bravery. They were then in General Hooper's corps.

For the Patriot.

Company A, Forty-Second Regiment.

CARROLLTON, (LA.) JAN. 15, 1863.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

I prepared an account of the affair at Galveston, Texas, but being called off for duty, I missed sending it by the mail at the time; but I will give you a sketch of the movements of our Regiment since we left New York. The Regiment embarked on the Propellers Quincy, Charles Osgood, Shetucket and Saxon, on the 5th of December. The Saxon arrived at New Orleans in twelve days, but the others were nearly a month on the passage. The two Companies, C and H, which came on the Shetucket, only arrived in camp last Monday; and I have just heard that they are now under orders to go to a new fort to do garrison duty.

The Saxon proceeded to Galveston with Companies G, I and D, and Colonel Burrell and a portion of the Staff, all of whom were captured by the rebels on New Year's morning, excepting Quartermaster Burrell, the Colonel's brother, and Adjutant Charles A. Davis, who was sent aboard a vessel with a request to take off the men, who were exposed on an open pier to the fire of the enemy, but before it could be done they were taken prisoners.

The Adjutant says the men defended themselves most gallantly, repulsing a large force, but, after the Gunboats had been driven away, a force of some two thousand rebels crossed the bridge, and the little band of about two hundred and fifty were overpowered—though I hear they made terms by which they were permitted to take their knapsacks, containing their personal effects.

The Adjutant, who was with them during the five hours in which they were under fire, and left but just before they were captured, says he saw no signs of cowardice, but all seemed ready to do their duty against all odds. The wounded did not exceed twenty in number, and he was not aware that any were killed. In Company G, in which are Lieut. T. H. Newcomb and about twenty of our townsmen, the most serious wound was that of a man who lost his hand.

The men were sent to Houston, and will be exchanged or paroled without doubt.

When the Saxon left New Orleans for Galveston, I was sent aboard the Honduras to join several of Company A, to which I belong, and went up to Baton Rogue, to leave the horses with which she was loaded. Saw Nim's Battery, which was quartered in the Arsenal. They made quite as fine an appearance as when in Quincy, some eighteen months since; though the blood-stains on their clothing would make some of the fair spectators, who used to visit them, express other sentiments besides those of admiration.

Loring French, the well-known Saloon keeper of Quincy, was busy cooking dinner for the officers, and wore as genial a countenance as ever, looking well and hearty, and happy as a king. (He had seen John Luzarder, of Company G, who had been left behind at New York, and was following the Company; so he was not captured at Galveston.)

Returning from Baton Rogue, the Honduras was sent with the 21 Vermont Battery to Galveston, where we arrived in time to see the last gun fired at the rebels by our retreating Gunboats, when we returned to New Orleans, where we joined our Company and came into camp here. I hear that Galveston has been retaken by our Gunboats—but it may be only a rumor.

Yesterday I visited the 38th Regiment, where I found Captain James Wade, son of Shadrach Wade, formerly of Quincy; also, Sergeant Wm. Parker, 3d and John Simpson, of Quincy, and Charles Thayer, of Milton, all in Company I. They were in good health, and seemed to enjoy soldiering. They have been in Baltimore and Frederick, Maryland, and on the way from thence, remained five weeks at Norfolk, Virginia. They are under marching orders, and were expecting to go up the river to-day.

There is a large number of troops here, but what disposition is to be made of them is beyond my ken. The 47th Regiment has gone up the river.

I saw the Patriot of Dec. 27th, which was a welcome sight, indeed, as I had heard from home but once since leaving New York. There is something wrong in the Post Office Department, for we get very few favors from home, though we are certain our friends have not forgotten us.

I have had a very pleasant time of it thus far. Had a chance to see a little of the world, having stopped at Key West and Ship Island—and had a good chance to see New Orleans, as I was there about a week with nothing to do but look round and see the sights; I also had a pleasant passage up to Baton Rogue, but only remained there a few hours. Did not see much of Galveston, as we did not go nearer than three miles.

Yours truly, URIEL JOSEPHS.

☞Fourth Lecture to "Young Men," tomorrow afternoon, at the Orthodox Church. Subject: POPULAR LITERATURE AND AMUSEMENTS.

LUNCH. There will be a free lunch at the Mariposa Saloon this evening.

PRESERVES a la WHOLESALE. The inmates of our Almshouse were agreeably surprised on Tuesday by the present of a large pail of preserve from L. B. Schwabe, Esq. On the same day Furnald's Express carried two large tubsful to the Discharged Soldiers' Home, corner Fulton and North streets, Boston. Also, two large basketsful of jars of preserve to the soldiers of Pemberton Square Hospital; fifty cans to the Mass. General Hospital; four large boxes of preserve to the Philadelphia Hospital; one box to the Portsmouth Grove Hospital, five large kegs of Tamarinds to Murfreeboro', (Tenn.,) 500 lbs. of different kinds of preserves to the U. S. Sanitary Commission; and two boxes to New Orleans—all a free gift of L. B. Schwabe, Esq.

PERSONAL. Mr. John B Bass, still lingers along at the Massachusetts General Hospital. There is a decided improvement in his favor, since our last, and there are now strong hopes of his recovery.

MR. HARDWICK. We are sorry to learn that Mr. Frederick Hardwick has been obliged to submit to the amputation of another of his fingers, and that he is still prostrated on a bed of sickness.

THE UNIVERSALIST LEVEE was an old fashioned turn-out; over five hundred tickets were sold; the company was as large as the Hall would well accomodate—and the entertainments were of such a character as to give general satisfaction; as they occur but once in a season, it was voted to make a long day of it—the curtain therefore was not dropped, until the darkness of night gave way to the light of another morning.

JURORS. Messrs. George Baxter and William Gardner Prescott have been drawn as Jurors to serve in the Supreme Judicial Court, February Term.

WEATHER. Wednesday was the coldest day of the season. In the morning, at certain localities in this town, the thermometer ranged from eight to ten degrees below zero. After such unprecedented mild weather, it was a surprise we were unprepared for.—It appeared to give new life to animated nature; pedestrians hurried on their way, as if the "Conscript Fathers" were in pursuit—turning neither to the right hand or left, until the door was closed behind them. We have another change now—a warm south wind, accompanied with rain.

PERSONAL. We copy with pleasure from two distinguished papers in this vicinity, the following well deserved compliments to one of the fair daughters of this place:—

There is a very unpretending writer for the Boston Pilot, who signs herself Marie and dates from South Quincy, who shows great power as a poet. There is no effort at fine writing in what she says, but there is a heart and soul in it that places it far before much more pretentious poetry that finds position in our papers and magazines.—Saturday Evening Gazette.

It may not be improper to say that the writer referred to is Miss Mary Magrath, an amiable and accomplished young lady of Irish parentage, a graduate of the Quincy High School, and at the present time a teacher in one of the public schools in that town. Her father, who is connected with the firm of the Messrs. Mitchell, ornamental marble and stone workers at South Quincy, possesses no mean degree of talent in his profession, several fine mural monuments in the Stone Church at Quincy, and other monuments in many of the cemeteries of this and the neighboring counties, fully attesting to his skill and ability.

Miss Magrath's talent for composition is not confined to poetry, for her prose contributions to several literary journals manifest the same ease and elegance that characterize her poetical productions.—Dedham Gazette.

RICHARDS' HEATERS. These excellent economizers are fast winning popular favor in this place. Many excellent testimonials have been received by Mr. Jacob Flint, the agent for Quincy and Weymouth, who is very anxious that all the citizens in both places should give them a trial, which is granted free of cost. See advertisement.

GODEY FOR FEBRUARY. Green with fresh laurels as the bay tree. The "Duet" is a fine steel engraving; a Duet of hearts as well as melody.—a picture for young and old—where the sympathies of the affections beat in unison. The "Extension Plate" is the crowning feature of this magazine; here, Godey has outstripped all competition; the present number has five figures, which reflect, in the most gorgeous manner, the approved fashions of the day. The other engravings, which are numerous, upon "Embroidery," and patterns for fancy needle-work, must be a rich treasure to the ladies. The contributions, as usual, are of the first order, and furnish much valuable reading.

For sale at the Quincy Bookstore.

A NEW WRINKLE. It is becoming quite common to append to marriage notices in the papers "no cards sent" thus obviating the misunderstanding and offence which would necessarily arise among friends and acquaintances from a want of knowledge of the fact, and escaping the responsibility of the omission and discrimination incident to the custom.

Old Colony and Fall River Railroad.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Old Colony and Fall River Railroad was held in Boston on the 29th ult., the President, Alexander Holmes of Kingston, in the chair, the following gentlemen were chosen Directors for the year ensuing: Alexander Holmes of Kingston, F. B. Crowninshield of Boston, William J Walker of Newport, Geo. A. Kettell of Charlestown, Benjamin Finch of Newport, John R. Brewer of Boston, Richard Borden of Fall River.

The ninth annual Report of the Directors of the Road has been printed for the use of the stockholders, showing the Company to be in an exceedingly flourishing condition. It appears that the receipts of the road during the year ending Nov. 30, 1862, amounted to $580,150 16; of which $379,832 63 was derived from transportation of passengers and $200,317 53 from the carrying of freight. The expenses during the same period were $286,691 61. The net earnings for 1862 exceed those of the previous year by $84,723 03; while the expenses during 1862 were decreased $9,893 69. The balance of income now on hand, exclusive of dividends heretofore declared, is $824,791 01. The debt of the Company Nov. 30, 1862, was Bonds $350,500, floating debt $134,058—total debt $484,558. The stock on hand at the date referred to was valued at $148,725 52. Real estate not required for the use of the road $204 240 Sinking fund—4,368 shares Old Colony and Fall River Railroad stock at cost $301,796 91

Mr. F. B Hayes of Boston stated to the meeting that the injunction against the union of the Old Colony and Newport Roads has now been dissolved, and that the union would speedily be consummated.

The President explained the present condition of the work on the extension toward Newport, showing that by June next the road will be completed.

WAGES. Wages are higher at the present time, in the several trades, than they have been for a long time previous. This is owing to the scarcity of help and also to the increased cost of all kinds of food, fuel, light, &c. We have taken some pains to ascertain the rates paid to members of the several trades. Good machinists are paid for general floor and vise work, from $1 50 to $1 75 per day of ten hours. Lathe hands receive from $1 75 to $2 per day. Moulders receive about the same rates. Carpenters about the same. Blacksmiths receive from $1 75 to $2 25 for ten hours work. Coppersmiths from $1 50 to $2. Ship carpenters from $2 to $3. Laborers get about $1 per day on an average.—Scientific American.

RUSS B. WALKER it will be seen by reference to another column of our paper today, signifies his intention of commencing a "Course of Lessons" in the graceful accomplishment of dancing, at Mariposa Hall, on Saturday next. Mr. Walker, as a professional man, is known and his talents are appreciated in this community. His success as a teacher, in a series of courses, but a few years since, met with general approbation. There is a new generation on the stage now, whose deportment needs culture, and we would advise their parents, to improve this opportunity, by securing Mr. W's services.

CAR TIME. There was a change in the time of running the trains on the Old Colony railroad on Monday last, but through the carelessness of somebody, we failed to receive notice until the middle of this week—thus disappointing many of our readers.

For particulars, see advertisement.

EXHIBITION OF ART. On Wednesday evening last, the lovers of the fine arts enjoyed a rich treat at the Studio Building, Boston. Our prominent artists had a "Reception" of their friends which was a season of interest and satisfaction to all. Their studios were thrown open, and also the Exhibition room below. A rare collection of ancient works from Italian churches added a new feature of interest to the Exhibition. It is not often our citizens have the opportunity to examine original paintings by Murillo, Guido and the Pre-Raphaelites. In pleasing contrast we notice several gems of modern art by Darley, S. W. Griggs, Champney and Hodgdon. The former has a spirited picture of a rebel repulse in Virginia, in which his wonderful genius for combination and expression is strikingly displayed. Hodgdon is a young but promising artist. His chef d' œuvre 'Nahant", sold for $300, was on exhibition; also "the Seasons," four beautiful paintings of excellent composition and coloring. The landscapes of Inness are too well known to need notice. They are greatly admired by connoisseurs, but we must confess to a feeling of disappointment in looking at them. He seems to dispose his colors for finical, immediate effect. They do not bear close examination. We are glad to know that a "second benefit" is to be given soon, and trust the weather will not give us so cold a reception on that occasion.

THE DUTY ON PAPER. The Pennsylvania Legislature has passed a resolution instructing the representatives in Congress from that State to cast their votes in favor of the repeal of the duty on paper.

SHERIFFS' FEES. The receipts of the Sheriff in this County, for the year 1862, for salary, fees, and attendance on courts, were $2801 92. The Sheriff of Bristol received $1153 12: Plymouth, 600 60; Barnstable, $437 90.

SHINPLASTERS. This term is said to have originated during old Continental money times. When it had become very much depreciated, a soldier bound some of it on his wound for healing purposes—hence "shinplasters."

TO CORRESPONDENTS. Our Boston Correspondent must bear with us again. His communication lingered so long on the way, that it never reached us until the moment of our going to press. We regret it, and we know our readers share with us our feelings, for no article which appears in our columns is looked for with more interest.

PROMOTION. Sergeant Wm. Rudderham, of this town, has been promoted to 1st Lieutenant in the 48th Mass. Regiment.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

That portion of the United States Patent Office, which was used for a long time as a military hospital, has recently been vacated and the patients transferred to more suitable structures for sick soldiers.

The Portsmouth (N. H.) Chronicle says that the ground was bare of snow there in January, 1818, as it was in July; but in February it began snowing on the 5th, and snowed three days. There was good sleighing six weeks, from Feb 8, and snow and ice remained on the ground till the 1st of April.

Hundreds of pack-saddles are being manufactured in Cincinnati. Pack mules were first introduced last winter into our army in Western Virginia, after it was discovered to be impossible to carry supplies in wagons over mud roads in the winter season. It is now intended to supply the forces in Southern Kentucky in the same way.

The debt of New York city, according to the message of Mayor Opdyke, is twenty seven millions of dollars. The debt of Boston is over ten millions dollars.

The first Congregational Church in Hanover, who lost their meeting house by fire lately, have received an offer of $1000 from Melzar Hitch, Esq., to aid them in the erection of a new edifice.

A portion of the extension of the Old Colony and Fall River railroad to Newport is being cut through an old Indian burying ground near Newport. A large number of bodies have been exhumed, together with what appear to be ornaments, cooking utensils, etc.

Old Colony and Fall River Railroad stock sold in Boston on Thursday last at $141.

Gen. Tom Thumb's first present to his affianced was a set of diamonds valued at $5000 He is to be married on Tuesday at the Metropolitan Hotel, N. Y. Commodore Nutt will act as groomsman at the wedding and the bridesmaid will be a little sister of the bride, a young lady quite as minute and pretty as the future Mrs. Thumb.

Gen. Hooker was born in Hadley Mass. in 1815. He graduated at West Point in 1852, standing twenty eight in a class of fifty.—He left the army in 1853 and lived in California till he was called into the service of the country in March 1861.

Whiskey drinkers and tobacco users will not be over satisfied in learning that, according to reports, the Committee of Ways and Means in Congress propose to raise the duty on whiskey and tobacco one dollar per gallon and one dollar per pound, respectively.

The State bounty to volunteers in Rhode Island has been stopped.

☞"On to Richmond"—that's to say, if the cussed rebels will allow it.

Jeff. Davis's "retaliation" Proclamation is censured in very strong language by the London Times, and the rebel President advised not to attempt its enforcement, as it may cause him the loss of the friendship of both France and England.

A deed was executed in Hartford a few days since on which the revenue stamps cost eighty-nine dollars.

One million dollars was paid by the Government to the Commissioners to recompense slave-owners in the District of Columbia for the emancipation of their slaves. The soldiers in the field yet remain unpaid.

General Rosencrans is forty-three years of age—was born in Ohio, but is of German descent.

The Negro Regiment Bill passed the House quietly; Judge Thomas voting against it.

It is estimated that the frauds committed upon the Government, since the war began, amount to one hundred million dollars. That is a low figure.

One hundred persons were lately killed by a railroad accident in Portugal.

An old resident informs the Belfast Age that in 1817 there was not two inches of snow on the ground till after December. At that time the roads were dusty and the weather mild.

Three thousand seven hundred and eighty-six invalids, and five thousand widows, orphan children, sisters and mothers, have made application for pensions since the 14th of July last for losses of the present war in the army, and two hundred and sixty-four in the navy, making a total of nine thousand three hundred and nine.

Over one thousand persons were killed and wounded by railroad and over three hundred by steamboat accidents, and about eighteen millions of dollars worth of property destroyed by fire in 1862.

FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.—The Washington correspondent of the New York Express states that officers returning from the Army of the Potomac represent that the dissatisfaction which has been in existence among the troops, is now decidedly on the wane. The selection which the new commander made for his Staff officers is a pleasing one to the troops. This has had the effect of producing a much better state of feeling in the army. Desertions are becoming much less frequent than formerly, so many having been taken prisoners while in the act, and being now in the custody of Provost Marshal's Guard, will have speedy trials granted them. The proofs against them are conclusive, and the penalty will be very severe. A great incentive to a better feeling on the part of the soldiers arises from the fact that their pay is coming to them with all possible dispatch.

ARMY HORSES. A Washington dispatch states that the subject of army horses has assumed a degree of importance not much understood as yet by the public. The daily loss to government through the mismanagement of animals is enormous. There is no doubt that the employment of veterinary surgeons and skillful farriers would have prevented much of the great waste from this cause. The horse hospital receives over one hundred horses daily. The daily average of those that die, or shot, is twenty-six, and thirty per day are sold for almost nothing, so that the average daily loss is three thousand dollars or more in the Quartermaster's Department at Washington alone. The losses in the field service are also enormous.

NEWSPAPERS. As Congress persistently favors the paper monopolists, and refuses to lower the tariff on foreign paper from its present prohibitory rate, and as the issue of more paper money will raise the prices of all kinds of articles, it is more than probable that the daily papers will be obliged to add another cent or two to their present prices. Thus the people are taxed for the benefit of a few monopolizing manufacturers of paper.

OPENING THE MISSISSIPPI. A contemporary mentions a curious fact, that Gen. Scott, at the opening of the war, predicted that the decisive battles of the rebellion would be fought in opening up the Mississippi, and of these he judged there would be about eight. He has proved so remarkably correct a prophet in all that relates to the war, that it would be well to hear his predictions in mind.

ENGLISH POSTAGE-STAMPS. The manufacture of postage-stamps in England costs £27,000 a year, and the produce sells for £2,700,000.

FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.—The Washington correspondent of the New York Express states that officers returning from the Army of the Potomac represent that the dissatisfaction which has been in existence among the troops, is now decidedly on the wane. The selection which the new Commander made for his Staff officers is a pleasing one to the troops. This has had the effect of producing a much better state of feeling in the army. Desertions are becoming much less frequent than formerly, so many having been taken prisoners while in the act, and being now in the custody of Provost Marshal's Guard, will have speedy trials granted them. The proofs against them are conclusive, and the penalty will be very severe. A great incentive to a better feeling on the part of the soldiers arises from the fact that their pay is coming to them with all possible dispatch.

ARMY HORSES. A Washington dispatch states that the subject of army horses has assumed a degree of importance not much understood as yet by the public. The daily loss to government through the mismanagement of animals is enormous. There is no doubt that the employment of veterinary surgeons and skillful farriers would have prevented much of the great waste from this cause. The horse hospital receives over one hundred horses daily. The daily average of those that die, or shot, is twenty-six, and thirty per day are sold for almost nothing, so that the average daily loss is three thousand dollars more in the Quartermaster's Department at Washington alone. The losses in the field service are also enormous.

NEWSPAPERS. As Congress persistently favors the paper monopolists, and refuses to lower the tariff on foreign paper from its present prohibitory rate, and as the issue of more paper money will raise the prices of all kinds of articles, it is more than probable that the daily papers will be obliged to add another cent or two to their present prices. Thus the people are taxed for the benefit of a few monopolizing manufacturers of paper.

OPENING THE MISSISSIPPI. A contemporary mentions a curious fact, that Gen. Scott, at the opening of the war, predicted that the decisive battles of the rebellion would be fought in opening up the Mississippi, and of course he judged there would be about right. He has proved so remarkably correct a prophet in all that relates to the war, that it would be well to bear his predictions in mind.

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES.

Doctor Cheeseman's Pills.

The combination of ingredients in these Pills is the result of a long and extensive practice. They are mild in their operation, and certain in effecting all irregularities, Painful Menstruations, removing all obstructions whether from cold or otherwise headache, pain in the side, palpitation of the heart, whites, all nervous affections, fevers, fatigue, pain in the back and limbs, disturbed sleep, which arise from interruption of nature.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS

Are the commencement of a new era in the treatment of those irregularities and obstructions which have consigned so many to a PREMATURE GRAVE. No female can enjoy good health unless she is regular, and whenever an obstruction takes place the general health begins to decline.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS,

Are the most effectual remedy ever known for all complaints peculiar to Females. To all classes they are invaluable, inducing, with certainty, periodical regularity. They are known to thousands, who have used them at different periods, throughout the country, having the sanction of some of the most eminent Physicians in America.

Explicit directions, stating when they should not be used, with each Box—the Price One Dollar per Box, containing from 50 to 60 Pills.

Pills sent by mail, promptly, by remitting to the Proprietor. Sold by Druggists generally.

ILLUSTRATED

Scientific American.

The Best Mechanical Paper in the World!

EIGHTEENTH YEAR.
VOLUME VIII—NEW SERIES

A NEW Volume of this popular Journal commenced on the first of January. It is published WEEKLY, and every number contains sixteen pages of useful information, and from five to ten original engravings of new inventions and discoveries, all of which are prepared expressly for its columns.

To the Mechanic and Manufacturer.

No person engaged in any of the mechanical or manufacturing pursuits should think of "doing without" the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN. It costs but six cents per week; every number contains from six to ten engravings of new machines and inventions, which can not be found in any other publication.

To the Inventor.

The SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is indispensable to every inventor, as it not only contains illustrated descriptions of nearly all the best inventions as they come out, but each number contains an Official List of the Claims of all the Patents issued from the United States Patent Office during the week previous; thus giving a correct history of the progress of inventions, in this country. We are also receiving, every week, the best scientific journals of Great Britain, France, and Germany; thus placing in our possession all that is transpiring in mechanical science and art in these old countries. We shall continue to transfer to our columns copious extracts from these journals of whatever we may deem of interest to our readers.

A pamphlet of instruction as to the best mode of obtaining Letters Patent on new inventions, is furnished free on application.

Messrs. MUNN & Co. have acted as Patent Solicitors for more than SEVENTEEN YEARS, in connection with the publication of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, and they refer to 20,000 patentees for whom they have done business.

No charge is made for examining sketches and models of new inventions and for advising inventors as to their patentability.

Chemists, Architects, Millwrights and Farmers.

The SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN will be found a most useful journal to them. All the new discoveries in the science of chemistry are given in its columns, and the interests of the architect and carpenter are not overlooked; all the new inventions and discoveries appertaining to these pursuits being published from week to week.—Useful information pertaining to the interests of millwrights and mill-owners will be found in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, which information they can not possibly obtain from any other source. Subjects in which farmers are interested will be found discussed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN; most of the improvements in agricultural implements being illustrated in its columns.

TERMS—To mail subscribers: Three Dollars a year, or One Dollars for four months. The volumes commence on the first of January and July. Specimen copies will be sent gratis to any part of the country.

Western and Canadian money or Post-office stamps taken at par for subscriptions. Canadian subscribers will please to remit twenty-five cents extra on each year's subscription to prepay postage.

To Horse Owners.

DR. SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LINIMENT for Horses is unrivaled by any, in and all cases of Lameness, arising from Sprains, Bruises or Wrenching, its effect is magical and certain. Harness or Saddle Galls, Scratches, Mange, &c., it will also cure speedily. Spavin and Ringbone may be easily prevented and cured in their incipient stages, but confirmed cases are beyond the possibility of a radical cure. No case of the kind, however, is so desperate or hopeless but it may be alleviated by this Liniment, and its faithful application will always remove the Lameness, and enable the horse to travel with comparative ease.

Every horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for its timely use at the first appearance of Lameness will effectually prevent those formidable diseases mentioned, to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses nearly worthless.

Poetry.

The Soldier's Dream.

Our bugles sang truce--for the night-cloud had lower'd,
And the sentinel stars set their watch in the sky;
And thousands had sunk on the ground over-powered,
The weary to sleep, and the wounded to die.

When reposing that night on my pallet of straw,
By the wolf-scaring fagot that guarded the slain,
At the dead of the night a sweet vision I saw;
And thrice ere the morning I dreampt it again.

Methought from the battle field's dreadful array,
Far, far I had roamed on a desolate track,
'Till Autumn—and sunshine arose on the way
To the home of my fathers, that welcomed me back.

I flew to the plesant fields travers'd so oft
In life's morning march, when my bosom was young;
I heard my own mountain-goats bleating aloft,
And knew the sweet strain that the corn-reapers sung.

Then pledged we the wine-cup, and fondly I swore
From my home and my weeping friends never to part;
My little ones kissed me a thousand times o'er,
And my wife sobbed aloud in her fullness of heart.

"Stay—stay with us! rest! thou art weary and worn!
(And fain was their war-broken soldier to stay;)
But sorrow returned with the dawning of morn,
And the voice in my dreaming ear melted away!

The Brook.

BY ALFRED TENNISON.

I come from the haunts of coot and hern,
I make a sudden sally,
And sparkle out among the fern,
To bicker down the valley;
By thirsty hills I hurry down,
Or slip between the ridges,
By twenty thorps—a little town—
And half a dozen bridges;
Till last by Phillip's farm I flow
To join the brimming river;
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on forever.

I cluster over stony ways,
In little sharps and trebles:
I bubble into eddying bays;
I bubble on the pebbles;
With many a curve my banks I fret,
By many a field and fallow,
And many a fairy foreland set,
With willow weed and mallow.
I clatter, as I flow
To join the brimming river;
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on forever.

I wind about, and in and out,
With here a blossom sailing;
And here and there a lusty trout,
And here and there a grayling:
And here and there a foamy flake
Upon me as I travel,
With many a silvery water-break
Above the golden gravel;
And draw them all along and flow
To join the brimming river;
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on forever.

I steal by lawns and grassy plots,
I slide by hazel covers,
I move the sweet forget-me-nots,
That grow for happy lovers;
I slip, I slide, I gleam, I dance,
Among my skimming swallows,
I make the nettled sunbeams dance
Against my sandy shallows:
I murmur under moon and stars,
In brambly wilderness,
I linger by my shingle bars,
And loiter round my cresses;
And out again I curve and flow
To join the brimming river,
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on forever.

Anecdotes.

Two Irishmen in a recent engagement were gallantly standing by their gun, firing in quick succession when one of them touching the piece, noticed that it was very hot.

Arrah! Mike, the cannon is getting hot we'd better stop firing a bit.

D—l a bit, replied Mike, jist dip the cartridge in the river afores yees load, an kape it cool.

What's that horse out of? said a fellow, with a view to quiz a farmer's boy, who was riding an old horse, which showed less blood than bone.

Out of?

Yes, what's he out of—do you know?

Yes, I do.

Well, what?

Out of oats!

Hallo steward! exclaimed a fellow in one of the steamboats after having retired to bed, hallo, steward.

What, massa?

Bring me the way bill.

What for massa?

I want to see if these bed bugs put down their names for this berth before I did. If not, I want 'em turned out.

Say, what's to be done with this window, dear Jack? The cold rushes through it at every crack!

Quoth Jack; I know little of carpenter craft. But I think my dear wife, you will have to go through the very same process the rest of us do, that is—you must 'list, or submit to the draft!

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical Cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Emissions, Sexual Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally, Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c.—By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in his admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands.

DR. LA CROIX'S
PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES
ON THE
Physiological View of Marriage.

250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, blushings, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c. &c. It is a truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.

YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATMENT.

We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled physicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the many NEW AND EEFICACIOUS REMIDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of professional Practice, for the past twenty-five years.

FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. De Laney's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box,) though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.

Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.

TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.

THE "ELECTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.

The SECRETS of YOUTH UNVEIL'D
A Treatise on the Cause of Premature Decay—A solemn warning. Just published, a book showing the insiduous progress and prevalence among schools, (both male and female,) of this fatal habit, pointing out the fatality that invariably attends its victims, and developing the whole progress of the disease, from the beginning to the end.
It will be sent by Mail on receipt of two [3] cent Stamps.

The Love Knot

Tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied her raven ringlets in;
But not alone in the silken snare
Did she catch her lovely floating hair,
For, tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied a young man's heart within.

They were strolling together up the hill,
Where the wind comes blowing merry and
And it blew the curls a frolicsome race,
All over the happy peach colored face,
Till, scolding and laughing, she tied them
Under her beautiful dimpled chin.

And it blew a color, bright as the bloom
Of the pinkiest fuschia's tossing plume,
All over the cheeks of the prettiest girl,
That ever imprisoned a roaming curl,
Or, in tying her bonnet under her chin,
Tied a young man's heart within.

Steeper and steeper grew the hill—
Madder, merrier, chillier still
The western winds blew down and playe
The wildest tricks with the little maid,
As, tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied a young man's heart within.

Oh, western wind, do you think it was fa

The Love Knot.

Tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied her raven ringlets in;
But not alone in the silken snare
Did she catch her lovely floating hair,
For, tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied a young man's heart within.

They were strolling together up the hill,
Where the wind comes blowing merry and chill;
And it blew the curls a frolicsome race,
All over the happy peach colored face,
Till, scolding and laughing, she tied them in,
Under her beautiful dimpled chin.

And it blew a color, bright as the bloom
Of the pinkiest fuschia's tossing plume,
All over the cheeks of the prettiest girl,
That ever imprisoned a roaming curl,
Or, in tying her bonnet under her chin,
Tied a young man's heart within.

Steeper and steeper grew the hill—
Madder, merrier, chillier still
The western winds blew down and played
The wildest tricks with the little maid,
As, tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied a young man's heart within.

Oh, western wind, do you think it was fair
To play such tricks with her floating hair?
To gladfully, gleefully, do your best
To blow her against the young man's breast,
Where he as gladly folded her in,
And kissed her mouth and dimpled chin!

Oh, Filery Vane, you little thought,
An hour ago, when you besought
This country lass to walk with you,
After the sun had dried the dew,
What perilous danger you'd be in,
As she tied her bonnet under her chin.

Scraps.

SODA CAKE. One egg, three teaspoonsful of melted butter, one cup of sugar, two teaspoonsful of cream tartar, one teaspoonful of soda, one pint of sifted flour, and one cup of sweet milk.

FINE POMADE FOR THE HAIR. Two ounces castor oil, one and a half ounces almond oil, and three ounces white wax. Melt the wax, pour in the oil, and stir it well.

TO PRESERVE CRANBERRIES. Dry them a short time in the sun, and bottle them closely. Thus preserved they will keep for years.

It is useless to talk about love in a cottage. The little rascal always runs away when there is no bread and butter on the table. There is more love in a full flour barrel than in all the roses and posies and woodbines that ever grew.

The last best fruit which comes to late perfection, even in the kindliest soul, is tenderness toward the hard, forbearance toward the unforbearing, warmth of heart toward the cold, philanthropy toward the misanthropic.

On this great battle field of life, God sets the positions, God arranges us, and puts us in our places. We may desert, we may run away, we may lie down; but the position is not of our choosing, but of God's.

The pursuit of pleasure is unprofitable business. The more you catch it the more it escapes from you.

Miscellaneous.

Hints on Household Management.

It is well to have in the mind a summary of the general qualifications needed to make a thoroughly good, careful housewife. The first requisite is:

Cleanliness. This underlies all the various work that needs to be done in the house. The good old maxim that "cleanliness is next to godliness," cannot be too carefully remembered. Dirt in the house, is like sin in the soul, it taints and corrupts all. Take care in your cleaning, not only to scrub your room well, but to clean every thing in the room, and to manage to have a tidy mat at the door, and teach your children to scrape and wipe their shoes. Have a basin kept in one place, with soap and hand towel, and always set the example yourself of washing your hands before you sit down to meals. Be careful to have the corners well cleaned out. The inside of saucepans and crockery perfectly sweet. Think less of outside show in your house and in your person, than of real, thorough cleanliness. I have known people who rubbed a brass knob on a street door very bright, and put a deal of hearthstone on the step outside, but did not polish the grate or clean the hearth properly. There is a kind of cheating in this, a desire to appear what you are not; and when a woman slurs over her back kitchen, or neglects her bedroom, saying, "Nobody will see it, and there's no need of cleaning it," she forgets that a person who really loves cleanliness, must have every thing sweet and wholesome, for the love of it, and the comfort of it, though no one but herself ever saw it. In the long run, time is saved by complete cleanliness. You know the old maxim. "Lazy folks take the most pains." That is very true. Did you never see a careless girl or woman just when she had to cook her dinner, finding the saucepan, which ought to have been put away dry and clean, unfit for use? If it was a tin saucepan, perhaps the damp and rust had made a hole in it, and as soon as it was on the fire there was a leakage, that put out the fire, and then there was a running about with the leaky saucepan, and emptying out the dinner, and stopping the hole with a bit of rag, and the dinner was late and muddled, and the fire place and room messed, and all for want of putting away the saucepan dry and clean, and ready for use. I might write a volume of little incidents of this kind that fully prove lazy folks have far more trouble than cleanly ones.

The next requisite to cleanliness is:

Punctuality. I repeat, that if a house is to be orderly, and the work is to go on comfortably, and the husband and children are to be well-cared for, there must be a fixed time for getting up and going to bed—a regular hour for meals that nothing must hinder; and settled days for washing, mending and cleaning. With method in arranging all this, there is a great saving time of labor. If you are ever to have a little leisure time, and especially if you are to enjoy the Sabbath-day's rest, it must be by arranging your work so that it shall be divided among the six days of the week.

One of the best domestic servants I ever knew, was a young woman who had but a poor constitution, and was often very weakly. I wondered how she got through her work, and managed of an evening to be so neat and nice, and I found it was by careful management every day. "I keep it under," she said, "by having set times for doing the different things; if I once let it get ahead I shouldn't have strength to do it all. But by never letting any thing get out of order I manage to master it"

Now, as a wife and mother is seldom over strong, it is far better to regulate all according to given times, than to let any of the work accumulate until, instead of your mastering it, it masters you.

Another quality required is:

Discretion. In the old times, a word was used that we seldom now employ—a woman that knew her duties and did them used to be called a discreet woman. I like the term. It is comprehensive, and means not only a cleanly, punctual woman, but a sensible, prudent, economical woman. A discreet woman will exercise her thoughts when she goes to market. She will buy from the best dealers. She will buy exactly what she wants. She will buy food and raiment with judgment. In her house the table will not show a feast one day, and a fast the rest of the week. Things plain, wholesome, and as abundant as possible will be her rule, and not a great joint of meat lavished away, without vegetables or plain rice, or flour puddings, to make it go farther. In her house there will be no eating of unwholesome new bread, or washings of crusts and ends. A discreet woman will waste nothing. And when a discreet woman buys articles of clothing, she will wish to have all alike. She will not choose for herself or her children, a fine bright ribbon that makes the rest of the garments look shabby, and neglect to get good strong boots, or comfortable, warm wrappings. Real, respectable clothing is when all is neat, serviceable, and one thing is in harmony with another. I have seen children in print or stuff frocks and bonnets and caps made of pieces of merino or cloth, all so snug and nice, that they have looked quite respectable; while another poor child, who had not a discreet mother, would have a fine pink ribbon on a dirty bonnet, or a gay sash on a torn frock, and look very shabby. For every discreet woman knows nothing in dress is so wretched as shabby finery.

A discreet woman will not allow herself to be persuaded to buy any thing she does not want, merely because it is cheap. It is not cheap at any price unless it is serviceable, and you want it. Some articles are not worth making up.

A discreet woman will govern her tongue. How many sorrows arise from idle words—what mischief is done that sometimes causes life-long misery. More than half the quarrels among neighbors, that involve not only women, but men, in bitter disputes, arise from foolish talking. Be neither a listener to, nor a repeater of scandal. The evil that you do not fully know you have no right to believe. The evil that you do know you have no right to spread. If you have anything to say of your neighbor, and you think it will do good to say it, go and say it to your neighbor in kindness; but beware of all mean, crafty, backbiting ways; they are sinful, and will fill your own heart with bitterness. The same reason that makes a discreet woman avoid all chattering and scandal, will make her careful about her companions.

Many men are driven from their homes by the gossiping acquaintances that come dropping in to chat with the wife. Be civil to all your neighbors—kindness is needed—but be intimate with but very few. If you have a good, sensible, pious woman near you, thank God for sending you the comfort of a friend, but both she and you will have too much to do to be able to spend much time together.

A good wife and mother is:

Sympathizing. Your husband and children will have all the more love for you, if you show a ready sympathy with them in their pursuits. Try to make them feel that you are so completely their loving friend, that all their joys and sorrows, the small as well as the great, have an interest for you. Do not chide the children, and tell them to hold their tongue, when they want to talk to you about little incidents they have seen or heard. Oh, mothers, if you would make home happy to them, try to win their confidence by taking an interest in their pursuits, and having a kind, wise word to say to them.

If your husband sees that you are a good careful manager, that you make no companions but such as, like yourself, are orderly, industrious women, he will not only love you, but he will and must respect your judgment. It is a great point gained, both for your husband and you, when he thinks well of your good sense. Then you can take sweet counsel together, and be in the best sense, mutual helps to one another.

But above all, or rather around all, like a silver cord binding together all the household virtues, is piety.

Religion is not a something to be put on with the Sunday clothes, and carried merely to church or chapel; it is a daily, life-long matter that should blend with all you do and say. You cannot, in the fullest and completest sense, be cleanly, punctual, discreet, and sympathizing, unless your heart is right towards God, and by prayer and supplication, through faith in Jesus Christ, you have imparted to you the gift of a new nature.—"Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me." That is your prayer. The answer to that prayer will enable you "whether you eat or drink, or whatever you do, to do it to the glory of God."

It is a Mistake.

The editor of the Star of the West furnishes the following modest attempt at correcting rather wide-spread mistakes.

It is a mistake to suppose that the subscription price of a paper is clear gain to the publisher.

It is a mistake to suppose he gets his white paper for nothing.

It is a mistake to suppose that it is printed without cost.

It is a mistake to think that he can live bodily by faith.

It is a mistake to suppose it is easy to please everybody.

It is a mistake to suppose that money due for the paper would be as good to us in a year as it would be now.

It is a mistake to suppose that he would not be thankful for what is due him, and for new subscribers.

Rambles Abroad.

LEAVES FROM A TOURIST'S JOURNAL—NO. 6.

The clock struck eleven. "Coach ready for Roslin!" shouted the driver as he mounted his box. In a few moments we were whirled out of Edinburgh at a rapid rate, on our way to the charming banks of the Esk. In visiting the Border district, you will of course, take in your pocket the "Lay of the Last Minstrel," as in the Highlands you carried the "Lady of the Lake." We are now bound for Melrose, and take Hawthorden and Roslin on our way. Do you wish to visit a spot of charming beauty, where nature and art, poetry and romance, unite their attractions? Do not fail to go to Roslin. Here for centuries, twenty proud barons have slept in their iron panoply, unshrouded and uncoffined, each buried "with candle, with book and with knell:" here some of the rarest decorations of ecclesiastical architecture may be seen: here the solidity of Norman art with the minuter embellishments of the Tudor age, each suggestive of historic and legendary lore; and here, around the Chapel and Castle of Roslin is some of the most wild and picturesque scenery in Scotland. It spoils the enjoyment of all this, to a great extent, to be led about like children by a hired guide, always attached to such places, whose parrot-like chatter continues incessantly till you are confused and confounded. I seem to see now the crowd which the cicerone of Roslin has about him, and hear the story which for the ten thousandth time he has repeated, as he stands pointing out with a long stick the various objects of interest. It reminds one very much of the sing-song descriptions of a showman who travels with some "wonderful specimens" of nature or art, and wearies out his audience by a perfect diarrhœa of words, instead of allowing them a chance to look and think for themselves. As at Holyrood Palace, so here, I made my explorations alone, led only by my eyes and by what information I had gained by previous readings.

"It is a very difficult way," said another of the hangers-on of this place to me on coming out and enquiring the way to Hawthorden; "a very difficult way." I saw, however, that he was anxious to feather his own nest. He didn't get the job, after all. Passing on down the glen, a pretty little lassie of some eight summers met me and very willingly engaged to be my companion through the some what intricate windings of the valley. Here

> "In old disastrous times,
> Loud pealing from the caverns drear,
> The Covenanter's nightly hymn,
> Upraised its startling chimes."

A shower just then hastened my steps, and those of my little guide, Mary Moodie, who soon brought me in sight of the Railroad Station, at which I was to take a train for Melrose. Giving her a double fee and a kind farewell,—my reader may conjecture what kind—I sought a more rapid mode of conveyance. "Pale moonlight" we are told is needful to see "fair Melrose aright." But circumstances alter cases. There happened to be no moon that night, and so the dreamy and delicious effect of that kind of light had to be wholly imagined. But it was my privilege to walk around St. David's ruined pile, unattended. Even the old man who kept the keys, kept silence too, except to answer a question, and suffered me to roam over the Abbey at my leisure, till feasted with its beauty, poetry and romance, I retired to my room, to dream over this grandest of ruins, of which from boyhood I had read with delight, and longed to see. What a history have those crumbling arches! What changes in the world since they were reared, seven centuries ago! Sic transit gloria mundi.—The next night found us on the North Sea, or German Ocean, on board the Steamer Moselle bound for London. The weather during the trip was fine. The sea was calm and the moon that evening very kindly took up her "wondrous tale," and thus made our walks, after tea, on the promenade deck all the pleasanter. Early on the morning of July 28th, we came in sight of the world's great workshop, as the English metropolis is called. Of some of my "Rambles" in London, my readers shall be informed in our next.

Under Fire.

A French soldier, who first smelt gunpowder at the battle of Solferino, thus discribes his sensations:—

"How each shot electrifies you! It is like a whip on a racer's legs. The balls whistle past you, turn up the earth around, kill one, wound another, and you hardly notice them. You grow intoxicated; the smell of gunpowder mounts to your brain. The eye becomes bloodshot, and the look is fixed upon the enemy. There is something of all the passions in that terrible passion excited in a soldier by the sight of blood and the tumult of battle."

First Congregational Church, Weymouth.

A correspondent of the Hingham Journal furnished that paper with the following historical facts concerning that ancient Society, known as the first Congregational Church in Weymouth:—

According to the Parish Records, it appears that the first meeting-house in this town stood on Watch House Hill, about a hundred and fifty rods north of the railroad depot in North Weymouth. The hill is now called Burying Hill. There are still found the graves of the early settlers—some of the stones requiring the chisel of Old Mortality to brighten their inscriptions, to make them legible. This is generally regarded to have been the first meeting-house in Weymouth, though it is described as "small, and remaining unfinished in 1645 and for some years later." This fact and the record of the settlement of the first minister as early as 1623, seem to furnish strong grounds for believing that there was an earlier, though probably a much ruder structure standing on the same hill, which was used years before the building of this.

In 1682, a new house, 45 feet in length, 40 in width, and 20 in height, (of walls,) was erected on the site occupied by that in which the people now worship, and which stands on a beautiful elevation, on the south side of the South Shore Railroad, about fifteen rods from the depot, and in full view of Burying Hill. This house was built by Jacob Nash, for the sum of £280 besides the old house. It stood till April 23d, 1751, when, on the evening of that day, it was set on fire and consumed.

The Parish soon took measures to erect another of larger dimensions. They built a new house, 55 feet long, 42 feet wide, and 22 feet walls. This house stood for eighty years. Once during that period it was altered and enlarged, and was finally taken down in 1830. The present house is still larger. Its length is 68 feet, its width 54 feet, its hight between joints 24 feet. It contains 76 pews on the lower floor and 24 in the gallery, is furnished with a fine large organ of considerable power, and has in the rear a neat and commodious chapel. In less than five months after taking leave of the old, this new house was finished and dedicated. All the pews in it were sold. The proceeds of the sale exceeded by $2 000 all the costs, including enlargement of the meeting-house lot, exchange of bells, and all the expenses of the building committee. The following is a list of the ministers of this Society from the first, including the dates of their respective settlements:

Printers' Proverbs.

Never inquire thou of the editor for the news, for behold it is his business at the appointed time, to give it unto thee without asking.

It is not right that thou should'st ask him who is the author of an article, for his duty requireth him to keep such things unto himself.

When thou dost enter his office take heed unto thyself that thou dost not look at what may be lying open; for that is not meet in the sight of good breeding.

Neither examine thou the proof sheet, for it is not ready to meet thine eye that thou mayest understand it.

Prefer thine own town paper to any other, and subscribe for it immediately. Pay in advance, and it shall be well with thee and thy little ones.

Expand the Chest.

Those in easy circumstances, or those who pursue sedentary, in-door employment, use their lungs but little, breathe but little air into the chest, and thus, independent of position, contract a wretchedly small chest, and lay the foundation of the loss of health and beauty. All this can be perfectly obviated by a little attention to the manner of breathing. Recollect the lungs are like a bladder in their construction, and can be stretched open to double their size with perfect safety, giving a noble chest, and perfect immunity from consumption. The agent, and the only agent we require, is the common air we breathe—supposing, however, that no obstacle exists, external to the chest, such as tying it round with stays, or having the shoulders lying upon it. On arising from your bed in the morning, place yourself in an erect position, the shoulder thrown off the chest: now inhale all the air you can; so that no more can be got in; now hold your breath and throw your arms off behind, holding your breath as long as possible. Repeat these long breaths as much as you please.—Done in a cold room is much better, because the air is much denser, and will act much more powerfully in expanding the chest.—Exercising the chest in this manner will enlarge the capability and size of the lungs.

Talking.

The majority of people now-a-days, seem to give very little consideration to the use of their tongues. Stammering is very common, and this is occasioned in very many cases by a slovenly and careless way of talking. Rapid and imperfect utterance takes the place of pure and careful articulation; it is rather better to be a Cockney, and pronounce words clearly, than to clip them short, as is the almost universal custom. Our countrymen have discovered doubtless that talking, like eating, takes time, and are consequently indisposed to give much of it to either duty. For example, what does this word mean: "jelluk?" It is a popular vehicle of comparison, but what sense is there in it? who would recognize, but for the sequence, the phrase, "just like." And yet very many persons who know better will very gravely assert that this or that is 'jelluk' this. So also the idiom 'azzi' or rather "s'zi" (for "says I"); there never was a poor adverb so abused before. Shorn of all its proportions it passes, like a shinplaster for any value that may be attached to it. We cannot, of course, be all linguists and elocutionists, but we may at least give some slight attention to the organs of speech and use them as nature and grammarians intended they should be used. Tongues are not made merely to be wet with fluids; they are sometimes used for imparting intelligible sounds.

An Army Oven.

One of these oven, which weighs but fifteen hundred pounds, and can be used while in motion, has been exhibited in New York, by the inventor, and patentee, Mr. William H. McCormick. The oven is of sheet iron, and is heated by two furnaces underneath, one at each end. Any kind of wood which can be met with on the line of march will do to heat it. It will bake one hundred and twenty rations of bread in fifty minutes, and as soon as one batch is drawn out another can be put in, the peculiarity being that the bread can be baked and the oven heated at the same time. The oven is placed on a wagon and moved by two horses, and the bread can be baked while the wagon is in motion. Fresh bread can be supplied to the troops every day, instead of the "hard tack" now in use, which many of them throw away. One of these ovens can be attached to each regiment, and it is claimed that its price can be saved in sixty days, independent of the saving to Government by having less bread to transport, and the benefit to the health of the soldiers by enabling them to have fresh bread every morning.

Health—Our Feet.

Women are not more hardy than men. They walk on the same damp cold earth.—Their shoes must be as thick and warm. Calf or kip skin is best for the cold seasons. The sole should be half an inch thick; in addition there should be a quarter of an inch of rubber. The rubber sole I have used for years; I would not part with it for a thousand dollars. It keeps out the damp, prevents slipping, and wears five times as long as leather of the same cost. For women's boots it is invaluable. But rubber shoes should be discarded. They retain the perspiration, make the feet tender, and give susceptibility to cold. Stand on one foot, and mark around the outspread toes. Have your soles exactly the same width. Your corns will leave you. The narrow sole is the cause of most our corns. A careful study of the anatomy of the foot and the influence of a narrow sole will satisfy every inquirer. The heel should be broad and long.

Wear thick woolen stockings. Change them every day.

Before retiring, dip the feet in cold water. Rub them hard. Hold the bottoms at the fire till they burn.—Dr. Lewis.

A Rebel Graveyard.

There is a graveyard in Winchester, (Va.,) which deserves notice. It is about sixty or seventy yards square. The graves are in rows about two and a half feet apart, extending the whole length. There are some twelve hundred or fifteen hundred graves, each with a little board at the head, bearing the name of him who sleeps beneath. A long trench, two feet wide, and about four feet deep, is dug, a man wrapped in his blanket is laid in, and the trench is filled up just his own length, and raised up a little above the ground as graves generally are. The next is laid with his head at the feet of the first, and so on till the trench is filled; then another is dug and filled in a like manner. There are fifty of these trenches. Each one contains twenty-eight or thirty men, having a nice little board at the head of each grave. These trenches are all filled with rebel soldiers, who have fought their last battle, and now sleep their last sleep.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Feb. 14th, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

MR. JOHN A. SIMPSON. The injuries received by Mr. S. from a refractory horse, which we had occasion to mention in a former number, we now regret to say, has resulted in his death. The particulars of the accident as they have reached us, are as follows: On the unfortunate morning alluded to, as Mr. Simpson was leading the horse from his stable, to a blacksmith's shop, near by—the treacherous animal suddenly turned on him,—threw him down, tore the flesh from his arm with his teeth, and crushing the bones in so shocking a manner, as to produce lockjaw, which resulted in his death on Sunday last.

The event has cast a gloom over the neighborhood in which he has resided for twenty-five years past, beloved and respected by all, as a good citizen and honest man. His funeral was largely attended from his late residence, West District, on Wednesday afternoon last. The deceased leaves a widow and seven children to mourn his loss.

A FAITHFUL COLLECTOR. We are pleased to learn through reliable source that the Collector of Taxes for the past year, has attended to his duty most faithfully. Only the small sum of $372 31, remained unpaid on the first of the present month. This is something which exceeds anything in the shape of collecting in former years. There is now some two thousand dollars due on 1861 tax, and quite large figures on the years previous. George H. Locke, Esq., the present Collector, deserves, and we believe will receive, the hearty thanks of the Town, at the annual March meeting, to be held one fortnight from Monday next.

The 42d Mass. Reg. at Galveston.

At last we have the official account of the late disaster at Galveston. Captain Alfred N. Proctor, of Company G, 42d Mass. Regiment, writes from Houston, Texas, January 8; he says that his Company, together with Company D, Captain Sherive, and Company I, Captain Savage, were captured at Galveston, on the 1st ult., and conveyed to Houston. The killed and wounded are as follows, viz:

Killed. Company G, Frank L. Nott of Quincy, by a shell.

Wounded. J. W. D. Parker, ball in arm, severe; George R. Derry, ball in arm, severe; James W. Vinal, contusion, slight—all of Quincy; Sergeant D. L. Wentworth, ball in leg, slight; E. B. Dolby, ball in hand, severe; slight; T. T. Sweetser, buckshot in chin, slight; James L. Davis, by splinter in face, slight; John M. Barnard, ball in leg, slight; John T. Cook, ball in leg, slight.

Many others had narrow escapes. Lieut. T. H. Newcomb, of this town, had five bullet holes through his coat, but was unhurt.

LIEUTENANT T. RICHARD LOMBARD. We had the pleasure yesterday, of a avisit fram Mr. Lombard. He left the Army of the Potomac a few days since on a short furlough. He looks remarkably well—never had a sick day, though he has seen over twenty months of hard service—been in numerous battles, and had more than one race with Stonewall Jackson.

DEATH OF AN EDITOR. Mr. Nathan Hale, senior editor of the Boston Daily Advertiser, died at his residence in Brookline, on Sunday, in the 79th year of his age. He was a nephew and namesake of the patriot spy of the Revolution. He was a graduate of Williams College, and practised law for a time, but became editor of the Advertiser in 1814. He was one of the club which founded the "North American Review," and of that which founded the "Christian Examiner." He has held several positions in the city government; has served in the State Legislature; was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1820, and the later one of 1853. He was a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and of the Massachusetts Historical Society. He received the degree of Doctor of Laws from Harvard College in 1853.

MR. BASS is still alive, but there is but small hopes of his recovery.

WINTER. We have had a sprinkling of winter; enough to cover the earth with several inches of snow. The sleighs are out—but from present appearances it looks as if it would be but a short-lived amusement.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY. To-day commences this blissful season; when all the unmated it is expected will choose their Valentines.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, FEBRUARY, 1863.

OUR NATIONAL FINANCES.

These are nice questions, involving the American Union in extreme peril, and if not rightly managed, the downfall of our country and race. It is impossible now for the General Government to return to specie payments. Paper money must continue to be used, and the only question is as to the character and extent of its issue. The issue of Treasury Notes as a legal tender was a necessity growing out of the rebellion—and as a substitute for the present bank issues. Now a war on the part of the Federal Government with the State Banks will do no good, as the very existence of National currency is interwoven with our State Bank system. There is paper enough now in circulation for all business purposes. We want no more "Greenbacks," for in proportion to their increase, depreciation will follow. In our very humble judgment, the issue of Government Bonds, at low rates of interest, payable in gold, for a term of twenty years or more, is the sure remedy to save us from the evils of continued depreciation and perhaps repudiation. One thousand millions of these Bonds if negotiated, would carry us through the war, and on the return of peace, would be eagerly sought after by European capitalists.

MATTERS IN CONGRESS.

The days of this august body are drawing to a close. No patriot should weep. But, shall we be any better in a National sense by the advent of the next Congress? Politically, the Senate will stand antagonistic with the House, check-mating if they please one another. It will be some time before the United States Senate becomes Democratic, but the event is sure to follow. And whatever party gets in power, a vigorous prosecution of the war is demanded. There should be no half-way work in the business—the Union must be preserved in tact, and that too, by adhering faithfully to the Federal Constitution. Negro Emancipation is a secondary consideration; first bring back the recusant States to their allegiance, and settle the question of slavery afterward. The Conscription Bill of Senator Wilson makes but little progress and its passage is doubtful. Some money plan must be adopted by Congress before the fourth of March; and this is the most difficult matter to arrange. "Money makes the mare go."

THE PRESIDENT.

Rumors are afloat in Washington that a change has come over the President's mind. That he is not now disposed to adopt extermination and subjugation as his policy:—Should the Supreme Court declare the Emancipation Proclamation of the President unconstitutional after the adjournment, a change of the Cabinet may be expected.

WAR NEWS.

The work of re-organizing the army has begun in good earnest. The rebel reports of the raid at Charleston, South Carolina, are greatly exaggerated. But the affair has given much uneasiness to the Navy and State Departments, and at the White House. Unpleasant controversies are likely to grow out of this raid with foreign governments. Half a dozen Iron Clads are now off Charleston. But if we had one there before the recent attack the misfortune would not have occurred. A combined attack upon Charleston by our naval and land forces is expected in a few days. The British Consul has left the city. No news of especial interest this evening from the Army of the Potomac or the South Western Army.

FESTIVITIES IN WASHINGTON.

Notwithstanding the gloom of war, Perley writes from Washington, that Lord Lyons has given a diplomatic dinner gaily attended. The Senate Committee of Foreign Relations and the Judges of the Supreme Court, were around Mr. Seward's mahogany on Friday. Then a Hotel-hop at the National, half a dozen pleasant parties, a reception at Speaker Crow's, an amateur concert, and the usual round of Canterbury performances for visitors from Boston and from the Army of the Potomac. Great city, Washington, just now.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

The present week is selected for the choice of Directors of the Western Railroad and of five Overseers of Harvard University, being the usual annual farce. The Gov. has communicated information to the House relative to the purchase of arms in Europe by secret agents from this State. The exorbitant demands for compensation for services, places one of the agents in an unenviable position before the good people of this Commonwealth. It is believed here that the present Session will be very short—terminating before April.

LOCALS.

The present winter will be long remembered for its mildness—thereby preventing much suffering among the needy which cold seasons always induce. There is a steady course of remunerative business with most kinds of enterprise, and well it is so, for a general prostration of business, would be followed by hard pinches of adversity, inasmuch as prices of all kinds are highly inflated, and they seem to be on the ascending scale. The week has been free from any great excitement. But war matters continued to be very freely discussed in all public places, not excepting hotels and bar-rooms. The places of public amusements are not so well patronized as in the early part of the season. The Star actors having come and gone. The money market continues easy and large investments are sought in Real Estate securities. Stocks are lower, with some exceptions, and gold has declined to-day, at a figure of 155, 1-4. The consolidation of the Worcester Railroad with the Western, has carried up the Worcester Railroad stock to $150, but making over the Fitchburg Railroad shares to $115. This will be temporary, for the prospects of advance of the Fitchburg, touching the Housatonic Tunnel matters, were never brighter.

Resignation.

QUINCY, FEBRUARY 9, 1863.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:—

Herewith you will find enclosed a letter addressed to the Clerk of the South School District.

Will you please insert its contents in your next issue, and oblige

Yours, T. CURTIS.

LETTER.

Adams School, Quincy, Feb. 2d, 1863.

THOMAS CURTIS, ESQ DIST. CLERK.

Dear Sir: I have notified the School Committee of my intention to leave the Adams Grammar School at the close of the present year.

The uniform kindness of the people of this town to me during fourteen successive years, and the almost unanimous support, continuing to the present time, which I have received, make me regret the step I am about to take. I shall long thankfully remember the many favors received from the parents and children of this District. Asking them to forget my numerous errors, and wishing the School continued prosperity,

I am the friend of all. S. MORSE, JR.

The Lilliputian Wedding.

The New York Evening Post devotes a large space in its columns of scenes witnessed at the marriage of Tom Thumb and Miss Warren, on Tuesday last, at Grace Church in that city. The entrance of the bridal party and the nuptial ceremonies, are thus described by that paper:

"Commodore Nutt led the way, gallantly escorting a most tiny bit of femineity—the bridesmaid, little Miss Warren, the sister of the bride. Next came Tom Thumb, gallant and gay, with his little bride upon his arm; and then came the relatives and friends, who were seated in the front pews.

In the meantime the four tiny specimens of humanity ascended the little platform, while without any delay the officiating clergyman, Rev. Mr. Willey, began to read the marriage services. And here be it known, that however farcial and absurd the whole affair may have appeared hitherto, from the moment the ceremonies commenced, every thing was quiet and reverent, and the entire service was listened to amid the most profound attention.

The bridegroom repeated with clearness and distinctness the words set apart for him, and the bride—who was "given away" by her father, a tall, very respectable looking old gentleman—also appeared to be perfectly familiar with her part of the routine. Both the bride and bridegroom went through the ceremony with perfect ease and self-possession, but yet manifested an earnest seriousness, which showed that to them at least it was no farce. The slightest levity on their part would have made the affair repulsive; but this was carefully avoided".

Their dress was well chosen, and very appropriate for the occasion—which set off their tiny figures to admiration.

The bridegroom, Mr. Stratton, was attired in a black dress coat, and white vest: the groomsman, Commodore Nutt, in a dress coat, similar to the bridesgroom, with white vest; the bride, Miss Lavina Warren, was arrayed in a dress of white satin, and the bridesmaid, appeared in one of full white.

"Multum in Parvo," say we. "May their shadows never be less."

REORGANIZATION OF THE ARMY ON THE POTOMAC. Gen. Hooker has issued an order abolishing the three grand divisions and converting the army into one grand whole, with the old corps organizations restored under the following comanders:

"To the First Corps is assigned Gen. John F. Reyolds; to the Second, Major General D. N. Couch; the Third has for its commander Brigadier General D. E. Sickles (temporarily); the Fifth, Major General George G. Meade; Sixth, Major General John Sedgwick; Eleventh, Major General Franz Sigel; Twelfth, Major General H. W. Slocum."

The cavalry has been consolidated into one corps under command of Brigadier General Stoneman.

PAPER MANUFACTURE. The New York Post, in speaking of the new discoveries in the manufacture of paper, says: The heavy boilers needed for preparing pulp from straw and wood require time to make, and workmen in iron are scarce just now. But we understand that a large number of mills have ordered such boilers, and that in a few months the public may hope to be independent, with the help of Congress, of the Paper Makers' Association of the United States.

LUNCH. There will be a free lunch at the Mariposa Saloon this evening.

For the Patriot.

Hingham and Quincy Turnpike.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

The Hingham and Quincy Turnpike, like the "Irrepressible Nigger," still agitates; it is thought by some that Mr. Lincoln's Proclamation, freeing one, should have included the other; it would have been equally effective and statesmanlike—and might have been done under the plea of "Military necessity."

The last notice of it was after the award of the Commissioners, in consequence of a law passed by the Legislature, and approved by Governor Andrew; the County Commissioners now contest the constitutionality of that law, and carry the question before the full bench of the Supreme Court—and although, Constitutions, National or State, are not, in these days, presumed to stand in the way of our Legislative or official servants, the Judges, who do respect them, may decide in such a manner as to reverse the whole matter; in that case, it will be curious to see who shall pay the damages; the Selectmen, individually, who have acted without proper authority! the towns they represented! or the State, whose Great and General Court passed the Act!

A safe remark of a learned judge in his charge to the jury, was, "That things of doubtful natures are very uncertain."

JUSTITIA.

The Evan's House.

This Asylum for sick and destitute soldiers was opened in Boston soon after hostilities broke out, through the munificence and under the management of Mrs. Harrison Gray Otis. Mrs. Otis (we believe is the daughter of the late Harrison Gray Otis, whose name and fame is so indelibly stamped upon the early history of that place,) has always been foremost in deeds of mercy and charity. The Mayor of Boston, in a late speech, passed a merited compliment to the disinterested benevolence of this lady.

In the late Report of Mrs. O., we learn, that since her connection with this establishment, hundreds of our brave soldiers, belonging to this and other States, have been kindly cared for—clothed and fed—the sick made whole, and sent on their way rejoicing; and in addition, for the suffering and destitute elsewhere, hundreds of dollars worth of articles of comfort for the camp and the hospital, have been collected and sent abroad.

She has, truly, been a mother to our sick and needy soldiers. Their blessings she has, and the prayers of a generous and grateful people. May she live to realize her fondest anticipations—a restored and happy country.

Rev. Joseph Richardson.

The following pleasing reminiscences in the life and ministry of this aged divine, we copy from an article which appeared in the Hingham Journal of the 6th inst., in relation to the celebration of the eighty-fifth birth-day anniversary of Mr. Richardson, which recently came off in that place.

"On Sunday last, Rev Joseph Richardson, senior pastor of the First Parish in this town, reached the 85th anniversary of his birth-day. Four-score and five years have "the days of the years of the life of his pilgrimage thus far been." Through what cares and labors has he passed, what sorrows and joys experienced, what vicissitudes witnessed, since he entered on life's still lengthening journey. Yet almost every day is he seen walking in the street with the vigorous and elastic step of one whose health is firm and whose constitution is unimpaired.

"On Sunday afternoon, a sermon adapted to the occasion and prepared by himself, was read from the pulpit of the Old Meeting House, by his colleague, the Junior pastor, Rev. Calvin Lincoln. This arrangement seemed the more necessary, as, within a few weeks past, the Rev. Mr. Richardson's sight has been waxing more dim. The text selected for the sermon was that used by Rev. Dr. Gay, as the foundation of his discourse from the same pulpit, when he also had attained to his 85th birth day,—

"This day I am four-score and five years old."

"Mr. Richardson's sermon was filled with interesting historic reminiscences, chiefly of a local character and mainly appertaining to the Parish from its formation until now. Mr. R. stated, in the course of the sermon, that the average duration of the ministry here of the several successive pastors of this Parish has been fifty years. Mr. Richardson was ordained July 2, 1806, more than fifty-six years ago."

LIGHT FOR THE MILLION. Furnald, on Washington street is the dispenser of this blessing. With his far-famed Kerosene, he can turn night into day, and make our ways light and pleasant. Give him a call.

QUAKER GUNS IN THE FORTIFICATIONS OF RICHMOND. We have another Quaker-gun report, this time from Richmond. A lady who arrived within Sigel's lines last week, direct from that city, professes to know that there are a large number of wooden guns placed within the fortifications erected for the defence of the city, and so ingeniously constructed that she only discovered their real character by a close examination.

EXEMPT FROM STAMP DUTY. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has decided that a quit-claim deed, releasing a mortgage on real estate, and an assignment of a mortgage, are exempt from stamp duty.

DEATH OF AN EMINENT DIVINE. The death of Rev. Dr. Benj C. Cutler, for many years the Rector of St. Ann's Church, Brooklyn, New York., is announced. The deceased was born near Roxbury, in 1798 and preached in this place for many years.

VACANCY FILLED. At a meeting of the Selectmen and School Committee held on Thursday evening, Rev. Mr. Heath was chosen to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Col. Walker, who is now in the service of his country.

RARE BARGAINS. We would call the attention of our readers to the large sale of Bankrupt Stock, at the stores of Cushman & Brooks, opposite the Tremont House, Boston. To commence on Monday next. A good chance for bargains.

EXPENSES OF LIVING. The Salem Gazette has been reviewing the market values of the principal articles of consumption, and finds comfort in the conclusion that, though prices are steep enough now, they are in fact lower than the average of the fifteen years last past. Flour in the Salem market is only half as dear as it was in 1815, when it retailed there at from $17 to $20. The wholesale prices in New York for mess beef per barrel were, in 1819, $15,37; 1839, $16; in 1855, $16,25. For pork per barrel in 1819, $22,50; in 1839, $16; in 1855, $16. At the close of 1862, mess pork was only $14, and mess beef $11, 75 to $18.

WOOLEN GOODS. These are taking the place of cotton fabrics to a large extent, for many articles of clothing, among the working classes of Europe, just as they have lately done among ourselves. Flannel outer shirts are now worn by thousands of persons who would have scorned to wear such articles two years ago.

GOOD. It seems there is one army inspector who won't wink at the rascality of contractors. A few days since a shoe manufacturer in Essex County had a lot of shoes returned on his hands, with a large hole cut through the botton of every one, so as to effectually preclude the possibility of their subsequent acceptance by any less conscientious inspectors.

☞ We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the Boston Courier in another column of to-day's paper. This paper has during the last few months increased its circulation largely, owing to the firm and independent manner in which it has supported the Constitution and the Union.

The higher the temperature to which steel to be hardned is raised, and the colder the fluid into which it is plunged, the harder and more brittle it becomes. In India glazeirs never use a diamond to cut glass; they use steel points hardned as described.

Within a few days, 20,000 lbs. of Davis' Straits whalebone have been sold in New York at $1 75 per lb. This is the highest price bone ever touched in this country.

A California pear just arrived in New York, weighs three pounds and seven ounces. It is of the Duchess d'Angoulene graft.

The French have experienced two bad defeats in Mexico, and have abandoned Jalapa and Tampico.

The steamer Constitution has arrived at San Francisco from Panama with $300,000 from the wreck of the Golden Gate.

In the church at East Canaan, N. H. 25th ult, at the moment Rev. Mr. Barron, a Universalist minister, rose from the sofa to pronounce the benediction, the chimney, weighing perhaps a ton fell through the ceiling, and crashed the sofa. Mr. Barron was hit by some of the splinters.

In a large mercantile house in Philadelphia, the porter, a man 70 years old, gets a salary of $7 a week; and his son in the same store, gets $2500 a year.

Cotton and cotton goods are now coming from Asia, whence we were accustomed to receive them in olden times, while of late years Eastern Asia has been a great market for our manufactures. Now the tide has turned again. The ship Emily Banning has recently arrived from Japan with seven hundred bales of drills and shirtings from China, and advices are that the market will be supplied from that quarter. Three ships are reported on their way from Japan to England with cotton, which is fine, but an inferior staple to our Southern cotton.

General Rosecran's army still occupies Murfreesboro, and is not likely to move till the railroad between that place and Nashville is completed, and guarded so as to insure the safety of trains.

The new Merrimac and several rebel gunboats have shown themselves at the mouth of the James, and we may have another naval fight in Hampton Roads soon.

Persons lately arrived from Richmond, under flag of truce, state that large bodies of troops are constantly being sent southwards. There is a growing feeling in Richmond in favor of peace.

The Administration is engaged, through eminent council, in preparing to bring before the Supreme Court of the United States the important question of the power of the President, in times of rebellion to suspend the writ of habeas corpus.

ANOTHER HOP AND A SKIP, with other rare entertainments, are to come off at the Town Hall, on Friday evening next, for the benefit of the Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Association. These Exhibitions, have been highly popular, and have met, as they deserve, with unprecedented success. The ladies of Quincy, God bless them—are deserving of all praise, for their self-sacrificing labors in the cause of humanity, and their noble efforts to uphold the good name and character of our army. Let them then receive on Friday next, a substantial proof of our love for the Union, by placing in their hands the means to preserve it. The card which appears in another column of our paper to-day, contains the programme of the evening's entertainments.

Contributions for the Refreshment Table from those disposed to aid the object, will be thankfully received at the Hall, on the 20th instant, before 12 o'clock, M.

Marriages.

In this town on the 10th inst., by Rev. Mr. Heath, Mr. Horace Feltis to Miss Sarah Augusta, only daughter of John Thomas Veazie, both of this town.

The Confessions and Experience of a Poor Young Man.

A Gentleman having been cured of the results of early error and disease, will, from motives of benevolence, send to those who request it, a copy of the above interesting narrative, published by himself. This little book is designed as a warning and caution to young men and those who suffer from NERVOUS DEBILITY, LOSS of MEMORY, PREMATURE DECAY, &c., &c., supplying at the same time the means of self cure. Single copies will be sent under seal in a plain envelope,—without charge—to any who request it, by addressing the author.

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES.

Doctor Cheeseman's Pills.

The combination of ingredients in these Pills are the result of a long and extensive practice. They are mild in their operation, and certain in correcting all irregularities, Painful Menstruations, removing all obstructions whether from cold or otherwise, headache, pain in the side, palpitation of the heart, whites, all nervous affections, hysterics, fatigue, pain in the back and limbs, &c., disturbed sleep, which arise from interruption of nature.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS
was the commencement of a new era in the treatment of those irregularities and obstructions which have consigned so many to a PREMATURE GRAVE. No female can enjoy good health unless she is regular, and whenever an obstruction takes place the general health begins to decline.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS,
are the most effectual remedy ever known for all complaints peculiar to Females. To all classes they are invaluable, inducing, with certainty, periodical regularity. They are known to thousands, who have used them at different periods, throughout the country, having the sanction of some of the most eminent Physicians in America.

Explicit directions, stating when they should not be used, with each Box—the Price One Dollar per Box, containing from 50 to 60 Pills.

Pills sent by mail, promptly, by remitting to the Proprietor. Sold by Druggists generally.

A Friend in Need Try it.

DR. SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LINIMENT is prepared from the recipe of Dr. Stephen Sweet, of Conn., the great bone setter, and has been used in his practice for the last twenty years with the most astonishing success. As an external remedy it is without a rival, and will alleviate pain more speedily than any other preparation. For all Rheumatic and Nervous Disorders it is truly infallible, and as a curative for Sores, Wounds, Sprains, Bruises, &c., its soothing, healing and powerful strengthening properties, excite the just wonder and astonishment of all who have given it atrial. Over four hundred certificates of remarkable cures, performed by it within the last two years, attest this fact.

For sale by MRS. E. HAYDEN.

ILLUSTRATED

Scientific American.

The Best Mechanical Paper in the World!

EIGHTEENTH YEAR.

VOLUME VIII—NEW SERIES

A NEW Volume of this popular Journal commenced on the first of January. It is published WEEKLY, and every number contains sixteen pages of useful information, and from five to ten original engravings of new inventions and discoveries, all of which are prepared expressly for its columns.

To the Mechanic and Manufacturer,

No person engaged in any of the mechanical or manufacturing pursuits should think of "doing without" the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN. It costs but six cents per week; every number contains from six to ten engravings of new machines and inventions, which can not be found in any other publication.

To the Inventor.

The SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is indispensable to every inventor, as it not only contains illustrated descriptions of nearly all the best inventions as they come out, but each number contains an Official List of the Claims of all the Patents issued from the United States Patent Office during the week previous; thus giving a correct history of the progress of inventions, in this country. We are also receiving, every week, the best scientific journals of Great Britain, France, and Germany; thus placing in our possession all that is transpiring in mechanical science and art in these old countries. We shall continue to transfer to our columns copious extracts from these journals of whatever we may deem of interest to our readers.

A pamphlet of instruction as to the best mode of obtaining Letters Patent on new inventions, is furnished free on application.

Messrs. MUNN & Co. have acted as Patent Solicitors for more than SEVENTEEN years, in connection with the publication of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, and they refer to 20,000 patentees for whom they have done business.

No charge is made for examining sketches and models of new inventions and for advising inventors as to their patentability.

Chemists, Architects, Millwrights and Farmers.

The SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN will be found a most useful journal to them. All the new discoveries in the science of chemistry are given in its columns, and the interests of the architect and carpenter are not overlooked; all the new inventions and discoveries appertaining to these pursuits being published from week to week.—Useful information pertaining to the interests of millwrights and mill-owners will be found in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, which information they can not possibly obtain from any other source. Subjects in which farmers are interested will be found discussed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN; most of the improvements in agricultural implements being illustrated in its columns.

TERMS—To mail subscribers: Three Dollars a year, or One Dollars for four months. The volumes commence on the first of January and July. Specimen copies will be sent gratis to any part of the country.

Western and Canadian money or Post-office stamps taken at par for subscriptions. Canadian subscribers will please to remit twenty-five cents extra on each year's subscription to prepay postage.

To Horse Owners.

DR. SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LINIMENT for Horses is unrivaled by any, in and all cases of Lameness, arising from Sprains, Bruises or Wrenching, its effect is magical and certain. Harness or Saddle Galls, Scratches, Mange, &c., it will also cure speedily. Spavin and Ringbone may be easily prevented and cured in their incipient stages, but confirmed cases are beyond the possibility of a radical cure. No case of the kind, however, is so desperate or hopeless but it may be alleviated by this Liniment, and its faithful application will always remove the Lameness, and enable the horse to travel with comparative ease.

Every horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for its timely use at the first appearance of Lameness will effectually prevent those formidable diseases mentioned, to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses nearly worthless.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

The Little Comforter

BY LINDA LINDAN.

A little one sat with his mother one day,
'Neath an apple tree, fragrant and heavy with bloom,
And he prattled and talked in his own childish way,
While the pale face beside him was shrouded in gloom.

But he noticed at length that she heeded him not,
When he spoke of the robin far up in the tree;
And he heard the bees humming: "Say, had she forgot
The verses she taught him about busy bee?"

Then he stole his arm round her, and bade her to see
How the bright sun flashed down through the blossoms so sweet,
While the wind waved them softly, and scattered them free
Like pink and white snow flakes, close down to their feet.

"Did she see them?" "Yes, darling, I hear and I see;
Would that I could behold them as you do, my boy,
But bird, bee, and sunlight, and bloom-laden tree—
All the wealth of the season can bring me no joy.

Bird music reminds me of sad martial strains,
While the gay blooming branches that wave o'er my head,
I liken to banners, borne high o'er the plains
That perchance with the blood of our soldiers are red.

And the flashes of sunlight you're watching, I call
The blaze from the mouth of the cannon burst forth,
While the flight of the bee marks the course of the ball,
As it enters the heart of some flower of the North."

"Oh! mother, you're thinking of father, I know,
But don't you remember the kind words he said,
As we stood at the gate when he started to go,
With one arm around you, and one hand on my head?

He said—I remember his gentle look yet—
That you must be brave, as a soldier's wife should,
Being patient and hopeful; and never forget
That God overcometh all evil with good.

I don't know what he meant, but he told us the soil
That our forefathers purchased for homes of the free,
Was hallowed by memories of bloodshed and toil,
And sacred to liberty ever must be.

Then he bade us remember each night ere we slept,
To pray for our Country's defenders and him;
That our land from all shame and dishonor be kept—
That the stars on our dear flag might never grow dim;

For Washington fought for that flag long ago,
And it must be defended, whatever the cost;
That 'twere better to die for one's Country than know
This Union must ever be severed and lost.

And mother, you often have told me, to die
Was only to go to our heavenly home,
And if father should get there before you and I,
Say, would he not wait for us there till we come?"

Yes, sweet little preacher, he would; and 'tis wrong
To repine at his absence and wish he were here,
When his heart is so true, and his arm is so strong,
And his Country is needing his service elsewhere.

So we'll try to remember his words, my dear boy,
Still hoping—believing the time will soon come,
When the bright dawn of peace will be welcomed with joy,
And each conquering soldier return to his home."

Loami Ill.,

Anecdotes.

An Irishman put his head into a lawyer's office, and asked the inmate:

An what do you sell here?

Blockheads, replied the limb of the law.

Och, thin, to be sure, said Pat, it must be a good trade, for ye have but one of them left.

A married woman at Chicago, Illinois, got angry at her husband and jumped over the banister of the stairs, landing in the hall below and breaking one of her legs.

There, you scoundrel! exclaimed she, now you will have to pay a doctor and a nurse for me!

Belle Clark was reading of some workmen starting into the field with their hoes on their shoulders. But—being a city girl, and better acquainted with another use of the word, she thought it was the last place where she would think of carrying her stockings!

Physiological View of Marriage.

250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, blushings, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c. &c. It is a truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.

YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATMENT.

We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled physicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the many NEW AND EFFICACIOUS REMIDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of professional Practice, for the past twenty-five years.

FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. De Laney's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box,) though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.

Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.

TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.

THE "ELECTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.

Beside the Winter Fire.

'Tis sweet when business hours are o'er,
And homeward I retire,
To meet the smiles of those I love,
Beside the winter fire.

To sit and muse o'er bygone years,
When I was young and gay;
Before I joined the busy crowd
Upon the world's highway.

To think of friends that I have known—
Of hearts sincere and kind;
Of all the hopes and memories
That I have left behind.

To watch the children on the hearth,
Amid their artless play;
And think what I myself have been
In life's young morning day.

Oh! yes, 'tis sweet thus left to muse,
And feed the fire's warm glow;
While round about the frost-bound eaves
The wintry blast doth blow.

For though the world hath charms with
For those who wish to roam;
To me there is no place so sweet,
So pleasant, as my home.

My favorite nook, the old arm chair,
The book I most admire;
And sweetly pass the evening hours
Beside this winter fire.

Beside the Winter Fire.

'Tis sweet when business hours are o'er,
And homeward I retire,
To meet the smiles of those I love,
Beside the winter fire.

To sit and muse o'er bygone years,
When I was young and gay;
Before I joined the busy crowd
Upon the world's highway.

To think of friends that I have known--
Of hearts sincere and kind;
Of all the hopes and memories
That I have left behind.

To watch the children on the hearth,
Amid their artless play;
And think what I myself have been
In life's young morning day.

Oh! yes, 'tis sweet thus left to muse,
And feed the fire's warm glow;
While round about the frost-bound eaves
The wintry blast doth blow.

For though the world hath charms without
For those who wish to roam;
To me there is no place so sweet,
So pleasant, as my home.

My favorite nook, the old arm chair,
The book I most admire;
And sweetly pass the evening hours
Beside this winter fire.

Scraps.

FRUIT CAKE. Take one pint of light dough; one teacupful of sugar; one of butter; three eggs; a teaspoonful of saleratus; one pound of raisins; nutmeg or cinnamon, to the taste; bake one hour. Let it stand and rise a little before baked.

NICE LIGHT BUNS. One pound of flour, six ounces of butter, two teaspoonsful of yeast powder, quarter of a pound of sugar; beat the yolk of the egg seperately, half a gill of milk, and a few drops of essence of lemon; bake immediately.

SPONGE PUDDING. Six eggs, one cup of butter, one cup of cream, two cups of sugar, one teaspoonful of soda, one quart of flour. Season with mace or lemon. Bake in a slow oven.

Mr. Smith, I wish to speak to you privately. Permit me to take you apart a few moments. Smith—(who wasn't the least frightened)—Certainly, sir, if you'll promise to put me together again.

Miscellaneous.

Up-Hill Business.

BY SYLVANUS COBB, JR.

Ah me! This is up hill work!

So said Albert Fairfield in the morning of his life.

And how many thousands of earth's toiling sons are giving breath to the same mournful complaint.

It is up-hill work! sighs the boy, turning his eye from the page of his lesson book, and gazing out beyond the pent-up school-room to the hills and woods that rise invitingly in the distance. It is up-hill work! says the youth, bending over his bench, and thinking of the time when his apprenticeship will expire, and he can be his own master and work for himself. It is up hill work! says the laborer, as he wipes the sweat from his brow, and gazes off upon the long stretch of ground yet to be subdued ere he can count upon the harvest. It is up-hill work! groans the poor debtor, bowing beneath the weight of a long score yet to be overcome.

Aye! so it is. It is up-hill work—all of it. Ah, me! This is up-hill work!

Albert Fairfield said so to me the second time. When he first spoke I dropped my eyes to the ground and thought. Albert was two-and-twenty years of age, and was by trade a machinist. He loved Sophia Winthrop, and Sophia Winthrop loved him. Sophy was an orphan, two years younger than Albert; she was my niece, and her home was beneath my roof. She was the only child of my sister, and I loved her as though she were one of my own. When Albert Fairfield asked me if he might have Sophy for his wife, I wanted time to consider. I knew that he was poor; but that was nothing against him, and then I gave him my answer. I told him that when he could pay for a home he should have my niece for his wife.

Said I—Sophy is willing to marry you now, but I do not think it best. I should prefer that you would at least own a house before you marry. If you will purchase the house, Sophy shall furnish it from top to bottom—so her expenditure will be about equal to yours, and you may then commence your life with a good start.

With another I might not have made this stipulation; but I knew Albert's weakness, and I sought to overcome it; I knew that he had powers enough, but they were not self-reliant ones. He had yet a lesson to learn in life, and I thought he had better learn it before than after marriage. When I first gave this conditional consent to his marriage with my niece, he received it gratefully, and said he would go ahead. He thought then only of the prize to be won.

A year had elapsed, and Albert Fairfield seemed to feel weary and disheartened.

Ah me! This is up-hill work! And he leaned back and folded his hands upon his knees.

Of course it is, said I. Had I not known that it would be up-hill work, I should not have asked you to do it.

He looked up at me enquiringly.

How steep is the hill? I asked him.

He still gazed upon me and I repeated the question.

How steep is the hill?

It is steep and long, he replied.

But you are part the way up, I suggested.

He shook his head. It will take me a long time to climb to the top.

Others reached the top before you.

Yes.

Thousands of them?

Yes.

And they were no stronger than you are?

But said Albert, after a little hesitation, they may have had more help.

Ah, my boy, I returned, with an admonitory shake of the head, you are showing me your weakness. Do you remember, a year ago, the conversation we had?

Yes.

You asked me for the hand of my niece. I intimated to you that she could pay as much towards furnishing the house as it would cost you to build it. I believed that it would be better for you both if you could commence on the same level. As far as means were concerned, Sophy was in advance. Circumstances had placed her upon the top of the hill. I showed you where she stood, and you promised me that you would go at work to reach her. Has your heart failed you?

Albert made no reply.

Do you love Sophy less?

He answered me quickly: No, no, I love her better than ever.

And yet you would sit down and fold your hands upon the hill-side. Albert, I did not think this of you. With such a prize upon the top, I had supposed that you would push on without faltering. Look—look, and see the work you have before you—see how many have gone up in advance. Look, Albert, from where you stand. Look up and look down. Will you join those at the top, or will you fall back, heart faint and weary, and join those at the bottom?

He bowed his head reflectingly.

Up hill work! I cried, resting my hand for a moment upon his shoulder. What is Life but a hill? There may be a state of existence for drones and sloths, down in the ceaseless valley; but the life of the living, acting man, is up the hill—up, up—the higher the better. Do you tell me that you have met with disappointments? Then overcome them. Don't let them overcome you. If you have lost the path, go back and find it, and look out more sharply next time. If you have found the path choked up by some impediment, move it out of your way. If you cannot move it, then work your way over it, or around it as may be best. Look up, Albert, and see who stand highest in the world. See who have most honor and most respect. You shall find them to be those who have met and overcome the most misfortune in their way up the hill. Look up, look up, my son, and behold the proud conqueror. See the man whom all delight to honor. See what he did in his journey up the hill. What did he do with misfortunes? He bent them to his will, and changed them into blessings. He made them into stepping-stones of experience, and pushed his way upward with renewed energy.

Do you call it up-hill work, Albert?—Aye, it is up-hill work; glorious, honorable work. And what will you do? You are on the hill even now. The prize is about you. What will you do? Will you go back to the valley of shades; will you summon your manhood and move up? Answer me.

The young man bowed his head for a little while upon his hands, and then gazed up into my face. I saw that the current of his feelings had changed. His lips were set more firmly; a manly flush was upon his cheek—and a new fire was in his eye. He arose to his feet; he swept his hair away from his brow, and presently he said:

Wait. You shall see.

I knew what he meant—I knew how strongly his resolution had been fixed; but I could not suffer him to depart without one more word of counsel.

Albert, I said, taking his hand, suffer me to speak once more. In your upward march you will meet obstacles; and the most perplexing of obstacles will be such as result from your own oversight and indecision. Utter no more complaint. Every moment of repining is a step backward; every thought of regret is a barrier thrown across your path; and every feeling of envy spent upon those who are ahead of you, makes an additional load which you must bear with you, as you go.

He said that he understood me; and he told me again to wait.

I did wait patiently, and with growing hope. I watched the youth, and I saw that he had commenced the up-hill work in earnest. From a hesitating, dreaming, wishing man, he grew to be a living, acting, working man. He walked the streets no longer with his head bent; but he walked erect with his gaze fixed straight before him. He grew stronger and stouter; I could see it in the firmness of his step, in the outgrowing of his chest, in the healthier tone of his face.

Two years more, and Albert Fairfield came to me again; and this time he claimed his wife.

You have your house? I said.

He handed me a deed by which was conveyed to him one of the prettiest cottage residences in the town.

I should have built, he explained, but the owner of this was about to leave the country, and he gave me a grand bargain—so grand a bargain, sir, that I have paid for the property, and have some three hundred dollars left.

You shall have your wife, I told him. She is ready to marry you, and she has been ready this long time—been ready with her love and changeless devotion. Go to her, Albert, and make such arrangements as you please.

Albert and Sophy were married, and when they were settled down in their new home, I went to see them. After tea—after I had seen what a paradise of earthly bliss that home was—I drew Albert aside and asked him if I had not been right.

He told me that I had.

You had to work, I suggested.

Yes.

And you have met with trials?

Yes.

And now in this hour, how do you regard the labor of the past?

He caught me by the hand, and while his face flushed with deep feeling, he said:

In this hour, standing as I do upon the top of the first grand eminence of life, I look back upon the past as a pleasant scene of hope and of useful labor. I have met with trials, and I have met disappointments. In the hour when they came they seemed dark and thankless; but now, looking back upon them from the hill of success, I find them to be really so many blessings, made so by the effort of my own will. Ah, sir, you were right. The only true life is that which moves onward and the only effective labor is that which leads us up the hill. The beacon, to be a safe one, must be above us. Yes, yes—you were right, and I thank God that I have had the strength to follow your counsel.

Not the Lord, but Burgoyne.

The Rev. James Gallagher used to tell the following anecdote with great zest.

During the Revolutionary war, reports were circulated, as they are now, either wholly false or greatly exaggerated. In passing from one to another, something was sure to be added, until the story would hardly be known to the author of it. The people in certain sections of New York were in great consternation from a report that Burgoyne was marching down from the Lakes with an immense army, and going to sweep over the whole country, bringing utter desolation to the inhabitants. An old lady heard the report, and understood it that Burgoyne was to open the Lakes and let the water out, and drown the whole region. Full of the terrible vision, she ran to a neighbor's to tell her the latest news about the war. Do you know that we are going to be drowned? Burgoyne is going to let the water out of the Lakes, and make a great flood and we shall all be drowned. Oh! what shall we do? Her neighbor with more intelligence and more piety, did not seem to be greatly disturbed, but calmly replied—That certainly must be a mistake. It cannot be true, for God has promised in his Word that he will no more destroy the inhabitants of the earth with a flood. Ah, honey! I know that, but it's not the Lord who is going to do it—it is Burgoyne!

Cash and Credit.

It is an important element of success in life to acquire the habit of being beforehand with whatever you undertake. I can, perhaps, better illustrate what I mean by an example taken from another branch of the subject. There are two friends, gentlemen of large means, whose estates and whose annual income are about equal. One of these is always short of money, buys everything on credit that he can command, often when traveling he has to borrow money to take him home, and really has to make as many turns and shifts to get along as if he were poor—all simply because he lives twelve months on the wrong side of his income. The other man, whose annual income and expenses are about the same as those of his neighbor, never has an open account, buys everything for cash, always has a plenty of money in his pocket, and a plenty more in the bank, and is apparently without a care in the world, so far as money is concerned—all simply because he lives twelve months on the right side of his income.

Complimentary.

The Cincinnati Commercial tells a good story. It says:

How often it is that a rosy-cheeked man, who never indulges in the use of ardent spirits is suspected of taking a drop now and then. An occurrence which took place recently verifies this fact.

Our old friend William Luck was passing along Fourth Street, early after breakfast, when his progress was politely arrested by a well-dressed, well-fed gentleman from the country, with,—

Sir, can you inform me where I can procure a few gallons of fine old brandy? I wish to take it to my place for private use.

Well, sir, said Mr. Luck, I am informed that Mr. S——, of the Bank Exchange, is au fait in those matters, and will supply you.

So, after showing the stranger where Mr. S—— was to be found, he continued: You have the advantage of me—I don't know you.

Nor do I know you, replied the stranger, but you look like a man who knows where the best brandy in town is to be found.

Mr. L. bowed to the stranger, and passed down the street, muttering that he did not know which excelled, the man's politeness, or his impudence.

The Bottom of the Sea.

The process of sounding the depths of the Atlantic ocean for the purpose of ascertaining the character of the bottom, and arriving at a knowedge of where to put down the telegraphic cable, is most interesting. The sounding apparatus is so arranged that it brings up samples of the ocean's bed. An examination of these samples has disclosed an abundance of the most fragile forms of shells, so delicate, and yet so perfect as to afford a guarantee of the entire absence of an undercurrent, or movement of water at these great depths. Not a single rock has been met with, nor a particle of gravel or sand has been brought up, but it appears as if nature had provided a bed for the express purpose of receiving a telegraphic cable.

Rambles Abroad.

LEAVES FROM A TOURIST'S JOURNAL—NO. 7.

Mrs. M., and her daughters, stood waiting in the doorway—77 Connaught Terrace, Hyde Park,—being attracted thither, as they told us, by the sight of a Yankee trunk on our cab, which to them was an infallible evidence of the arrival of their expected guests. Here let me advise my readers not to carry trunks abroad. They are a source of annoyance and expense continually. On leaving Boston, my only luggage was a carpet bag and an umbrella. My friend took a trunk. He found before many weeks that the trunk took him. In other words, he had to ride for the trunk's sake, when comfort, convenience and pleasure might have been enjoyed if he had been free from incumbrances.

Our boarding place, to which a kind friend at home had directed us, was pleasantly located at the "West End" of London, but a few minutes' walk from Buckingham Palace. Expenses were moderate. Room and breakfast half a crown per diem, if I recollect right. Dinner and tea extra. Those meals most usually were taken elsewhere—perhaps at a chop house or out of town, wherever our rambles led us. The first day after our arrival was the Sabbath. In the morning we heard Rev. Dr. John Cumming preach, and in the afternoon, Rev. Dr. James Hamilton, both of whom are widely known in America by their numerous writings. It was my privilege to enjoy an interview with the latter, the gifted author of the "Royal Preacher" and similar works, and to receive from him his assurances of respect and sympathy for Christians in the United States. We also attended worship at other times at Westminster and St. Paul's, both of which places have too often been described by travelers to need notice here. The British Museum and the Crystal Palace, at Sydenham, each worthy a week, were "done up" by us in a single day. Notwithstanding this, the most vivid impressions were left upon our minds by these noble exhibitions of art and science. The day following we enjoyed a visit to the Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons. Here was shown us a collection of twenty-five thousand specimens and preparations illustrative of morbid anatomy, physiology and surgical science generally. Here, too, were ancient instruments with the rust of two hundred years upon them, and dingy mummies of unknown age, partially uncovered, regular "copperheads," we thought.

The Tower of London is a place of almost unequalled historic interest, and is one of the first sights an American wishes to visit. Having presented a shilling each, we received tickets and were ushered into the inclosure in charge of a lordly-looking warder, decked in scarlet and gold-lace. On our right was the Thames and the gateway through which the wretched criminals and state prisoners were formerly carried to execution. On our left, was the Bell Tower, where it is supposed Queen Elizabeth once was incarcerated; further on, the Bloody Tower where the young Princes were smothered by order of Richard III. In the first hall we visited, were numerous equestrian figures arrayed in the armor of various kings, from Edward I. to James II. How vividly do these objects recall the scenes of Falkirk, Bannockburn, Agincourt, Poitiers, Flodden Field and other places memorable in the civil and foreign wars of those reigns. In this room too, were specimens of ancient guns and other weapons, from the curious little pistol, which shot round a corner, to the huge musket, pike and battle-axe. Here were horrible instruments of torture—the iron collar, the thumb-screws and the "scavenger's daughter,"—an infernal machine, which crushes the victim that falls into its embrace. The walking cane of Henry V. was shown us, in which were inserted three pistols and a bayonet, with which the king used to perambulate the streets of London by night, incognita.—I tried my neck across the "heading-block," which was so shaped as to aid the headsman in giving the coup de grace, and which bore the marks of long usage. At this block Anne Boleyn and scores of others knelt at the despot's beck. I sat in Raleigh's dark cell; read on Dudley's dungeon wall the name of Jane, his loved wife; looked on the bloody garments taken from the dying hero of Quebec, General Wolfe; with the warder, smiled incredulously when pointed out the place where the Duke of Clarence enjoyed his reputed immersion in a butt of Malmsey wine; and finally, in the White Tower, stared with the crowd, at fifteen millions worth of jewels, sceptres, crowns, bracelets and other royal toys.

It is interesting for an American to look at all these insignia of monarchy, if for no other reason than their historic significance. But he loves his own land and his own country all the more. With Montgomery, he says:

"There is a spot of earth supremely blest,
A dearer, sweeter land than all the rest.
Oh, thou shalt find, howe'er thy footsteps roam,
That land thy country, and that spot thy home."

Questions for a Wife.

Do you recollect what your feelings were immediately after you had spoken the first unkind word to your husband? Did you not feel ashamed and grieved, and yet too proud to admit it? That was, is, and will be, your evil genius! It is the temper which labors incessantly to destroy your peace, which cheats you with the delusion that your husband deserved your anger, when he really most required your love. This is the cancer which feeds on those unspeakable emotions you felt on the first pressure of his hand and lip. Never forget the manner in which the duties of a wife can alone be fulfilled. If your husband is hasty, your example of patience will chide as well as teach him. Your violence may alienate his heart, and your neglect impel him to desperation. Your soothing will redeem him—your softness subdue him; and the good-natured twinkle of those eyes, now filling, beautifully with priceless tears, will make him all your own.

A Sharp Witness

A witness in court who had been cautioned to give a precise answer to every question, and not talk about what he might think the question meant, was interrogated as follows

You drive the Rockingham coach?

No, Sir, I do not.

Why, man, did you not tell my learned friend so this moment?

No, Sir, I did not.

Now, Sir, I put it to you—I put it to you on your oath—do you not drive the Rockingham coach?

No, Sir, I drive the horses.

After Icebergs.

Rev. Louis L. Noble, who accompanied Mr. Church, the painter, on his tour "After Icebergs," has selected this title for an entertaining and interesting narrative. We copy the following passages.

WHAT ICEBERGS LOOK LIKE.

As we approach the Bergs they assume a great variety of forms. Indeed, their changes are quite wonderful. In passing around a single one we see as good as ten, so protean is its character. I know of no object in all nature so marvelously sensitive to a steady gaze. Sit motionless and look at one, and, fixture as it appears, it has its changes then. It marks with unerring faithfulness every condition of atmosphere, and every amount of shadow. Thus manifold complexions tremble over it, for which the careless observer may see no reason, and many shapes, heights and distances swell and shrink it, move it too and fro, of which the mind may not readily assign a cause.

The large Iceberg for which we bore away this morning resembled, at one moment, a cluster of Chinese buildings, then a Gothic Cathedral, early style. It was curious to see how all that mimicry of a grand religious pile was transmitted into something like a Coliseum, its vast interior now a delicate blue, and then a greenish white. It was only necessary to run on half a mile to find this icy theatre split asunder. An age of ruin appeared to have passed over it, leaving only the two extremes, the inner cities of one glistening white; of the other a blue, soft and airy as the July heavens.

In the neighborhood were numbers of blocklike Bergs, which when thrown together by our perpetual changes of position, resembled the ruins of a marble city. The play of the light and shadows among its inequalities was charming in the extreme. In the outskirts of this Palmyra of the waves, lay a Berg closely resembling a huge ship of war, with the stern submerged, over which the surf was breaking finely, while the stem, sixty or seventy feet aloft, with what the fancy easily shaped into a majestic figure-head, looked with fixed serenity over the distant waters. As we ran athwart the bow it changed instantly into the appearance of some gigantic sculpture, with broad surfaces as smooth as polished ivory, and with salient points cut with wonderful perfection. The dashing of the waves sounds like the dashing at the foot of rocky cliffs indicative of the mass of ice below the surface.

THE SPLENDID ICEBERG AT ST. JOHNS.

We are bearing up under the big Berg as closely as we dare. To our delight, what we have been wishing and watching for is actually taking place; loud explosions with heavy falls of ice, followed by the cataract-like roar, and the high, thin seas, wheeling away beautifully crested with sparkling foam. If it is possible, imagine the effect upon the beholders. This precipice of ice, with tremendous cracking, is falling toward us with a majestic and awful motion. Down sinks the long water-line into the black deep; down go the porcelain crags and galleries of glassy sculptures, a speechless and awful baptism. Now it pauses and returns; up rise sculptures and crags streaming with the shining, white brine; up comes the great encircling line followed by things new and strange--crags, niches, balconies and caves; up it rises, higher and higher still, crossing the very breast of the grand ice, and all bathed with rivulets of gleaming foam. Over goes the summit, ridge, pinnacles and all, standing off obliquely in the opposite air. Now it pauses in its upward roll; back it comes again, cracking, cracking, cracking, groaning out harsh thunder as it comes, and threatening to burst like a mighty bomb into millions of glittering fragments. The spectacle is terrific and magnificent. Emotion is irrepressible, and peals of wild hurra burst forth from all.

The effect of the sky-line of this Berg is marvelously beautiful. An overhanging precipice on this side, and steep slopes on the other, give a thin and notched ridge, with an almost knife-like sharpness, and the transparency and tint of sapphire, a miracle of beauty along the heights of the dead white ice, over which the sight darts into the spotless ultra-marine of the heavens. On the right and left shoulders of the Berg the slopes fall off steeply this way, having the folds and strange purity peculiar to snow drifts. One who has dwelt pleasantly upon draperies in marble—upon those lovely swellings and depressions—those sweet surfaces and lines of grace and beauty of the human form, perfected in the works of sculptors, will appreciate the sentiment of the ices to which I point.

At the risk of being thought over sentimental and extravagant, I will say something more of the great Iceberg of Cape St. John, now that we are retiring from it and giving it our last look. Of all objects an iceberg is in the highest degree multiform in its effects. Changeable in its colors as the streamers of the Northern sky, it will also pass from one shape to another with singular rapidity. As we recede, the upper portions of the solid ice have a light and aerial effect, a description of which is simply impossible. Peaks and spires rise out of the strong and apparently unchangeable base with the light activity of flame. A mighty structure on fire, all in ice.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

DONATION. On Friday evening of last week, the friends of Rev. Mr. Heath, pastor of the Universalist Society of this town, assembled at Mechanic's Hall, and went in a body to his residence; each bearing a goodly burden of the good things of earth, besides unitedly, a well-filled purse, containing the more substantial testimony of their friendship. The bell was rung and the door opened, when one after another stepped forward for admittance, till the cozy dwelling of the amazed divine was crowded with donors, wishing to be relieved of their gifts, to the utmost astonishment and pleasure of the household. Upon presenting the gifts, Joseph G. Brackett, Esq., in behalf of the assembly, made an appropriate speech, to which Mr. Heath very affectingly responded, although somewhat embarrassed, having been taken entirely by surprise.

UNFORTUNATE. George S. Blaisdell, youngest son of Mr. Gilbert Blaisdell, of this town, fell on the 6th inst., and broke his left arm, between the elbow and wrist. The bones were immediately set and he is now doing well. This is the third time within twelve or fourteen months, that this lad has met with a mishap to this arm. The first was a bad sprain, which took weeks for recovery; and was considered worse than a break. The second time, he had the misfortune to break it near the wrist; and lastly a similar accident, happening nearly in the same place, although far enough to show that the healed parts were the strongest.

MILITARY ITEMS. On Saturday last, we were taken by surprise, by a short visit from Capt. Benj. F. Messervey, of Co. K., 18th Mass. Regiment. He had just returned from the seat of war, and appeared somewhat fatigued, also quite pale and sickly. We learn from the Captain that he has been indisposed nearly all the time since he returned to his company. Probably he never fully recovered from the wound he received on the forehead, from a piece of shell, some months since.

Charles N. Hunt, Captain of the Dorchester Company, belonging to the 39th Mass. Regiment, arrived in this, his native town, on Sunday last, on a short furlough.

2d Lieut. Charles H. Porter, of the Quincy Company, 39th Regiment, has been promoted to 1st Lieutenant, of another company in the same Regiment.

FURLOUGHS. Gen. Hooker designs to rest and recruit the Army on the Rappahannock by allowing a limited number of furloughs to the officers and men till they have all had opportunity to recuperate. This does not look like an early fight in that quarter.

REV. MR. THWING will lecture to Young Men to-morrow forenoon on Skeptical Philosophy and in the afternoon on the Bible as a literary production.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, FEBRUARY 19, 1863.

TRANSATLANTIC NEWS.

The desire of intervention in American affairs appears on the wane in England. But monster demonstrations are going on in London in behalf of the Emancipation policy of our Government. In France things are different. The Emperor has offered mediation, and it is boldly asserted, if refused, the recognition of the Confederates will follow, whether Old England joins or not. The present position of our Government with France is very delicate; an embroilment seems not far distant with the two powers. In the mean time, the evil effects of the rebellion are felt in many portions of Europe—business is at a stand—great suffering exists in Ireland and the manufacturing districts of England and France.

THE WAR.

There is a more cheerful feeling with regard to military and naval operations, than has existed for some time past, as accounts of a favorable character reach Washington from all quarters The country is not lost yet, though many fear that we are near the jumping off place. The contest is going on—there is no half-way, halting-place—all American citizens are actors in it—there can be no neutrals. The rebellion must be put down, not with a view to elevate the negro, to the injury of the white race, but to restore the Union as it was, and protect and sustain that Union as our Fathers did by a sacred observance of its constitutional provisions, the sheet anchor of our liberties.

CONGRESS.

Financial matters are now the all-absorbing questions before Congress. Some plan must of necessity be adopted immediately. The Secretary of the Treasury considers the passage of the Uniform Currency Bill and Bank Bill as indispensable for the workings of the financial hopper. Mr. Chase is evidently treading hard upon the interests of our State banks. If left alone as they now are, there must follow an indefinite increase of legal tender notes, or to make loans by receiving the issues of suspended banks ad infinitum. At least these appear to be his views. It is evident, however, that the issue of United States Bonds to meet the wants of the Government will create a permanent basis for a National currency, and will put a check on the prices of necessaries and gold. Some kind of a Conscription Bill is likely to pass before the Fourth of March, and we judge of a stringent character.

STATE HOUSE MATTERS.

The afternoon sessions of the Legislature continue very unexciting. The ascendant party being largely in the majority, have things all in their own way. Irrespective of party, there is much talent both in the Senate and House, and as the debatable part of the session draws near, we may reasonably expect eloquent speeches from both sides. Hon. Caleb Cushing is the ablest member of the opposition in the House—but so far, he has maintained "dignified silence." The Republicans are not lacking in smart men, particularly the Lowell delegation. The Senate is mostly of new members, but quite a working body. Seven-eighths being of Republican politics, undisputed sway reigns in their midst. Mr. Chamberlin from Quincy, in the House, is on an important Standing Committee, respected and influential, and will be found faithful and vigilant to the interests of his constituents. Mr. Johnson of the Senate, likewise of Quincy, is on the Finance Committee; very industrious, works hard on Committees, and though one of the youngest members of the Senate Board, his clear and practical knowledge of financial matters makes him highly useful.

LOCALS.

The aspects of business are not very bright. The falling off in trade is occasioned by the ample supplies manufactured by the New England trade to our armies. Gold, the regulator of prices, has ascended to $1 60, making the markets firm for all kinds of produce and breadstuffs. It takes a good deal of paper money to buy little. Board has gone up here about one third, compared with last summer. Wearing apparel is costly, and with the fictitious prices of the day, it is hard with many "to live and let live."

Who Can Tell?

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

What has become of "COUNT SCHWABE," the great philanthropist, seems to be a question of general interest among the trading community, occasioned by the sudden disappearance and doubtful whereabouts of the above-mentioned gentleman.

His name has appeared many times in public print, as the liberal benefactor of sick soldiers; but his sudden departure, leaving unsettled his accounts with Messrs. A. B. and C., for the sundry articles of which his donations were made up, to follow his profession, perhaps, in some other unsuspecting community, seems to spoil the philanthropy of his noble calling—for, if it still be philanthropy, we, the interested parties cannot see it.

JUSTICE.

He has Gone to His Rest.

The following touching and affectionate allusion to the memory of Assistant Surgeon Smalley, of this town, whose death was caused by fatigue and exposure on the battle fields of Virginia, we copy from the Bridgewater Gazette of the 17th instant.

"Mr. George L. Smalley, of Quincy, a graduate of the Fifty-First class in the Normal School, of this place, (Bridgewater,) and three years Principal of the High School in Groton, though in delicate health, impelled by a true Christian patriotism, joined one of our Regiments as Assistant Surgeon, and on that terrible night after the battle of Antietam he was indefatigable in his efforts to relieve the wounded and dying; he forded the stream to reach them, and worked in his wet clothing till he sank from exhaustion to sleep in the open field; his strength was gone; he came to his home in Quincy, where he lingered seven weeks, and went to his rest; his last words were: "I forded the creek at Antietam. I am fording another river now, but my Saviour is with me." A noble sacrifice upon the altar of freedom,—may we hallow their memories and emulate their virtues!"

Particulars of the death of Frank L. Nott.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, JAN. 9, 1863.

MRS. NOTT: Through the mercy of God I am spared to perform the sad duty of communicating to you the distressing intelligence, that must cast a gloom over your life, but as Captain of the Company to which he belonged I must perform it. Your husband was injured by a piece of shell in the side, and lived about five hours. He had every care and attention; suffered but little pain—and had his senses perfectly—and gave his last thoughts to his wife and children. He was buried in the Cemetery at Galveston Island. I promised him if it was possible his body should be sent home—which promise I shall keep if I can do so.

He was a brave, noble, watchful soldier, and died as he had lived—beloved by his Company and respected by his officers. With the hope that you will find relief in your desolation, in looking to Him who directeth all things well for our highest good.

I am, yours truly, A. N. PROCTOR.
Captain Co. G. 42d Reg. M. V. M.

Justice to Past Collectors.

To the Publisher of the Patriot.—

I was very much surprised on reading your paper on the 14th inst., to see a statement made so far from the truth, and doing injustice to other parties.

We would like to know where you obtained your information in regard to the Taxes of 1861, and previous. We think, had you taken the trouble to enquire from a "reliable source" you would have found none remained unpaid previous to 1861, and but $507.56 of 1861. JUSTICE.

Supreme Judicial Court—Feb. Term, 1863.

NORFOLK COUNTY.—CHAPMAN J.

Robt. M. Todd v. Old Colony & F. R. R. Co.

This was an action of tort for alleged negligence of the defendants in the conduct of a train in which the plaintiff was a passenger; and was the third trial of the cause. At the first trial a verdict was rendered in his favor, and damages in the sum of $2000; at the second, the same result, with $2600 damages; at the third, he was defaulted, for want of evidence to show that he was using due care, and that no part of his person was negligently exposed. The suit was instituted by the plaintiff to recover damages for injuries received in the arm, while a passenger on the Old Colony and F. R. R. Co., July 13, 1858 by coming in collision with a freight car standing on the track of the Worcester R. R.

J. J. Clarke and N. F. Safford for plaintiff; J. G. Abbott and H. C. Hutchins for defen't.

GODEY FOR MARCH is already upon our table. With unprecedented punctuality we are thus early put in possession of this most excellent magazine. So long have we enjoyed its companionship it is looked for even in advance of the time; a single omission would be felt, in our domestic circle, as a serious affair. We all want to examine Mr. Godey's budget of the latest fashions which he presents to us in so attractive a form; to run over the great variety of patterns in embroidery and dress, for examples to direct us in our little household; to select from the culinary department receipts for our future use; and to garner from the well filled pages lessons of virtue and instruction. No, no, in its absence we should feel the loss of a dear friend. We pity the head of any family who think they can do without it.

The number before us opens with the fashions of the approaching season; for such matters and others of importance, it will be sought after with interest. The plate of a new sewing machine, is also presented—a companion to the old one—to which particular reference is directed. The frontispiece—"The Expected Letter"—is another of those fine line engravings, in which the creations of the artist, by his magic genius, have taken the form, and appear to be endowed with the attributes of life; it is illustrative of a pathetic story, of love, trials, treachery, remorse and retribution.

PUBLIC DOCUMENTS. We have received from Mr. Chamberlin, our worthy Representative to the General Court, some valuable Documents, which have emanated from that Body during its present Session, for which he will please accept our thanks, and our best wishes for eminent success in his Representative career.

LIEUTENANT RICHARD T. LOMBARD.—This gentleman, who came North on a short furlough to visit his friends, left on Thursday morning last, to resume his position in the army of the Potomac. His visit must have been a pleasant one—friends and favors rolled in upon him from all quarters; while here, his appointment was confirmed, and commission tendered him by the military authorities, and he was made the recipient of a beautiful sword and sash, with other testimonials, from old and tried friends, who honored the man and the soldier.

A WARNING TO SKATERS. We are indebted to the Hingham Journl for the particulars of the following accident. It appears that as a lady and gentlemean, were enjoying themselves a few evenings since, in the exhilirating sport of a race over the ice, on one of Abington's charming lakes,—clad with No. 1 skates, the gentleman, in a whirling gyration, was caught in the crinoline of the lady, thrown heavily upon the ice, breaking his nose, dislocating his shoulder, and receiving divers other injuries. This of course, brought the pleasures of the evening to a close—and the fair object of the sad mishap, upon her knees beside the fallen man, to weep, like her mother Eve, for the mischief she had done. The finale we may conjecture; that she saw him home—and that her deep sympathy will ripen into an undying friendship. We all may gather wisdom from the above—in our approaches to a fashionable crinoline, to give them a wide berth, if we would avoid entangling alliances, and their consequences.

NO WINTERS. So say the weather-wise; and their predictions sometimes come true. We have conversed with a gentleman direct from the Lakes, who assured us that on his journey he saw but little snow, and that at Canada the earth was bare as with us, with the same kind of weather.

EFFECT OF CONTINUED PAPER MONOPOLY. The New York Herald says that, provided the paper monopoly is continued, before six months are gone half the journals and publishing houses in the country will be broken up, and with them half the papers-makers, and that then the latter will feel very much like the man who killed the goose that laid the golden eggs.

A NEW FRACTIONAL CURRENCY PROPOSED. In view of the flimsy character of the postal currency a proposition has been made to coin the fractional parts of a dollar of zinc as a substitute therefor. It is suggested that the mints might thus be afforded employment, and a more acceptable currency than that now in use be readily furnished.

RANDOLPH ITEMS. The Advertiser reports that Mr. Charles Belcher had a horse and wagon stolen Monday evening last week, and that Mr. Josiah Clark had a market wagon smashed to pieces at the Braintree station by the steamboat train one evening last week.

"CAT TAIL" PAPER. Paper made from the swamp flag, called "cat tails," is now manufactured upon a somewhat extensive scale in this State, and the demand for it is greater than can be supplied. We have examined a sample of this product, and it appears to be well adapted for card-board and paper-hangings, for which purposes it is now used.—Scientific American.

CONTRABANDS. There are some 6000 sick, dirty and shivering contrabands living at Craney Island. They are fed, kept and clothed by the Government, without earning one dime towards their support.

CONTRABANDS. Col. T. W. Higginson writes Gov. Andrew encouragingly concerning the contraband regiment under his command. He thinks they will make the best soldiers in the service.

EXEMPT. A new exemption bill, introduced in the Confederate Congress, exempts telegraph operators, not to exceed four at any place except the rebel capital; one editor of every newspaper and necessary printers.

A BUSHEL OF SOILED STAMPS. One of the Eighth Avenue Railroad Companies in New York sent a bushel of soiled postage stamps to the Post Office there for redemption. It took the clerks nearly a week to examine it. The value was $8400.

FRENCH DIPLOMACY. It is reported that Count Mercier, the French Minister, has sent Mr. Durand, one of his assistants, to Richmond again, for the third time within six weeks. This frequent intercourse with Richmond looks as if something was in the wind.

BOOTS. The balance of the winter stock of men's, boys' and youths' kip and cowhide boots for sale low at Cummings' new boot and shoe store.

LUNCH. There will be a free lunch at the Mariposa Saloon this evening.

PROBATE COURT. The February term of this Court will convene at the Selectmen's Room, Town Hall, on Tuesday next, at ten o'clock. JUDGE WHITE presiding.

The U. S. Senate passed Secretary Chase's Finance Bill. It taxes bank-notes one per cent. during the ensuing year, and two per cent. afterwards.

The New England Pin Company, of Winsted, Conn., is making pins of iron instead of brass. They are also made at Seymour in the same State.

On the 12th inst., Professor Agassiz, the eminent naturalist, took the preliminary steps to become a naturalized citizen of the United States.

A letter from Col. Burrill of the 42d has been received, in which he represents himself and the other prisoners well treated, though there is a scarcity of the luxuries of life in Galveston He believes that his men were needlessly deserted by the gunboats, and says they fought as long as there was hope left for them.

There is a prospect that the rebel Congress will not second Jeff's proposition to hang Federal officers—the number of captive officers being largely in our favor.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 15th inst., Miss Anna H. eldest daughter of Mr. Horatio N. and Mrs. Martha T. Glover, aged 31 years.

At North Weymouth, 13th inst., widow Mary Torrey, aged 74.

In Dorchester, 18th inst., Rev. Richard Pike, aged 40 years and 8 months.

In South Braintree, 18th inst., Mrs. Rhoda Severns, aged 82 years and 10 months.

THE ALL SUFFICIENT THREE
The Great "American Remedies,"
Known as "Helmbold's"
GENUINE PREPARATIONS, VIZ.:
HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT "BUCHU,"
" " SARSAPARILLA,
" IMPROVED ROSE WASH.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATION,
"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND
Fluid Extract Buchu,
A Positive and Specific Remedy
For Diseases of the
Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATERY OR CALCEROUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU
FOR WEAKNESSES
Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.
ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS,

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power, Difficulty of Breathing,
Loss of Memory,	Dryness of the Skin,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body, Eruption of the Face,
Hot Hands,	Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes soon follow
IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC FITS,
In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases,"

Insanity and Consumption.

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess. The records of the insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Females,

Old or young, single, married, or contemplating Marriage—in many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhea, or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the Decline or Change of Life.

No family should be without it.

Take no Balsam, Mercury, or Unpleasant Medicine for Unpleasant and Dangerous Diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU
CURES SECRET DISEASES
In all their stages; at little expense; little or no change of diet; no inconvenience, and no Exposure. It causes frequent desire, and gives strength to Urinate thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying pain and inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling POISONOUS, DISEASED, AND WORN-OUT MATTER.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the victim of Quacks, and who have paid Heavy Fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the Poison has, by the use of Powerful Astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage.

Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu
For all Affections and Diseases of
THE URINARY ORGANS,
Whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing.

BLOOD! BLOOD! BLOOD!
Helmbold's Highly Concentrated Compound
Fluid Extract Sarsaparilla Syphilis

This is an affection of the Blood, and attacks the Sexual Organs, Linings of the Nose, Ears, Throat, Windpipe, and other Mucus Surfaces, making its appearance in the form of Ulcers. Helmbold's Extract Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and removes all Scaly Eruptions of the Skin, giving to the Complexion a Clear and Healthy color. It being prepared expressly for this class of complaints, its Blood-Purifying Properties are preserved to a greater extent than any other preparation of Sarsaparilla.

Helmbold's Rose Wash.

An excellent Lotion for Diseases of a Syphilitic Nature, and as an injection in Diseases of the Urinary Organs, arising from habits of dissipation, used in connection with the Extracts Buchu and Sarsaparilla, in such diseases as recommended

Evidence of the most responsible and reliable character will accompany the medicines.

CERTIFICATES OF CURES,

Extract Buchu, $1 00 per bottle, or six for	$5 00
" Sarsaparilla, 1 00 " "	5 00
Improved Rose Wash 50 " "	2 50

Or half a dozen of each for $12 00, which will be sufficient to cure the most obstinate cases, if directions are adhered to.
Delivered to any address, securely packed from observation
☞ Describe symptoms in all communications. Cures guaranteed. Advice gratis.

AFFIDAVIT. Personally appeared before me an Alderman of the city of Philadelphia, H. T. Helmbold, who, being duly sworn, doth say, his preparations contain no narcotic, no mercury, or other injurious drugs, but are purely vegetable.
WM. P. HIBBARD.

Beware of Counterfeits.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

Henry A. Holden, 13th Mass. Reg't.

BY MRS. J. H. HANAFORD.

He went because his country called,
Beneath her banner fought,
And to Manassas battle-field,
His patriot fervor brought.

While fast the deadly missiles flew,
His courage never failed,
Undaunted he trod Duty's path,
As by no foe assailed.

Hark! to our ears the tidings come,
The hero is no more,
His battles fought, his victory's won,
He rests where strife is o'er.

Oh mourning Mother! to whose home,
His precious dust, came not,
Thine is indeed a grief severe,
With mournful, memories fraught.

Look up fond Mother! through thy tears,
God's mercy paints the cloud;
Thy son so dear, for freedom died,
Of this thou may'st be proud.

Yet even this, cannot assuage
The grief thine heart must know,
As memory marks his vanished smile,
Which gleams no more below.

God only can thy bleeding heart,
In this dark hour, console,
As Faith his handmaid, lifts the veil,
And Hope points to the goal.

His victor, crown is gleaming there,
All bright with stars, whose rays
Shine, in the night of thy despair,
To thy young Martyr's praise.

A little while—and ye shall meet,
Where sorrow comes no more;
Where sweetest Peace each soul may share,
Upon a brigher shore.

Beverly, Mass. Jan. 13th, 1863.

If We Knew.

If we knew the clouds above us,
Held by gentle blessings there,
Would we turn away all trembling
In our blind and weak despair?
Would we shrink from little shadows
Lying on the dewy grass,
When 'tis only birds of Eden,
Just in mercy flying past?

If we knew the cares and crosses
Crowding round our neighbor's way,
If we knew the little losses,
Sorely grevious, day by day,
Would we then so often chide
For his luck of thrift and gain—
Leaving on his heart a shadow,
Leaving on our lives a stain?

If we knew the silent story
Quivering through the heart of pain,
Would our womanhood dare doom them
Back to haunts of guilt again?
Life hath many a tangled crossing,
Joy hath many a break of woe,
And the cheeks tear-washed are whitest;
This the blessed angels know.

Let us reach into our bosoms
For the key to other lives,
And with love toward erring nature,
Cherish good that still survives;
So that when our disrobed spirits
Soar to realms of light again,
We may say, "Dear Father, judge us,
As we judge our fellow men."

Anecdotes.

If I were so lucky, said an officer, as to have a stupid son, I would certainly by all means make him a parson. A clergyman who was in company calmly replied:

You think differently, sir, from your father.

A sixty-nine pounder shell burst near an Irishman in one of the trenches. Pat coolly surveyed the ruins the fragments had made, and exclaimed:

Be jabers! them's the fellows to soften the wax in a man's ears!

A young conscript fell sick and was sent to a military hospital. A bath was ordered. It was brought into the chamber where the invalid lay. He looked at it hard and for some time, then threw up his hands and bawled:

Good Heavens! Doctor, I can't drink all that!

Papa, said a little boy to his father, the other day, when a fellow strikes another, haint he got no right to strike back?

Certainly he has, replied the father the law of self-defence sanctions it.

Well, then, I'll tell you what it is, said the boy, next time you box my ears, I'll hit you a confounded poke under the fifth rib!

Pat where is the whiskey I gave you to clean the window with?

Och master, I just drank it and I thought if I breathed upon the glass it would be all the same.

I say, friend, your horse is a little contrary, isn't he?

No, sir'ee!

What makes him stop, then?

Oh, he's afraid somebody'll say whoa and he sha'n't hear it.

An Irishman who had commenced building a wall around his lot, of rather uncommon dimensions, namely, four feet high and six feet thick, was asked the object by a friend.

To save repairs, my honey. Don't you see then, if it should ever fall down, it will be higher than it is now?

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical Cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Emissions, Sexual Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally, Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c.—By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in his admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands.

Bury Me in the Morning.

BY MRS. HALL.

Bury me in the morning, mother—
Oh! let me have the light
Of one bright day on my grave, mother,
Ere you leave me alone with the night;
Alone in the night of the grave, mother—
'Tis a thought of terrible fear—
And you will be here alone, mother,
And stars will be shining there.
So bury me in the morning, mother,
And let me have the light,
Of one bright day on my grave, mother,
Ere I am alone with the night.

You tell me of the Saviour's love, mother,
I feel it in my heart—
But oh! from this beautiful world, mother,
'Tis hard for the young to part;
Forever to part, when here, mother,
The soul is fain to stay,
For the grave is deep and dark, mother,
And Heaven seems far away.
Then bury me in the morning, mother,
And let me have the light
Of one bright day on my grave, mother,
Ere I am alone with the night.

Never unclasp my hand, mother,
Till it fades away from mine—
Let me hold the pledge of thy love, mother,
Till I feel the love divine;
The love divine—oh! look, mother,
Above the beams I see—
And there an angel's face, mother,
Is smiling down on me.
So bury me in the morning, mother,
When the sunbeams flood the sky—
For death is the gate of life, mother,
And leads us to the light on high.

Scraps.

Bury Me in the Morning.

BY MRS. HALL.

Bury me in the morning, mother—
Oh! let me have the light
Of one bright day on my grave, mother,
Ere you leave me alone with the night;
Alone in the night of the grave, mother—
'Tis a thought of terrible fear—
And you will be here alone, mother,
And stars will be shining there.
So bury me in the morning, mother,
And let me have the light,
Of one bright day on my grave, mother,
Ere I am alone with the night.

You tell me of the Saviour's love, mother—
I feel it in my heart—
But oh! from this beautiful world, mother,
'Tis hard for the young to part;
Forever to part, when here, mother,
The soul is fain to stay,
For the grave is deep and dark, mother,
And Heaven seems far away.
Then bury me in the morning, mother,
And let me have the light
Of one bright day on my grave, mother,
Ere I am alone with the night.

Never unclasp my hand, mother,
Till it falls away from thine—
Let me hold the pledge of thy love, mother,
Till I feel the love divine;
The love divine—oh! look, mother,
Above the beams I see—
And there an angel's face, mother,
Is smiling down on me.
So bury me in the morning, mother,
When the sunbeams flood the sky—
For death is the gate of life, mother,
And leads us to the light on high.

Miscellaneous.

Tom Skinner.

Tom is a trial. Tom at school gets through the Geography by boring a hole through the middle. That is his royal road to learning—or rather past it. He holds the smaller boys up by the heels and stands them on their heads. He melts up all the inkstands into bullets. He curses and swears, and says the minister on Sunday talks in that way. He plays truant, gets into trouble, and when he can, lies his way out. When the teacher tries to correct him, he kicks her and bites her alternately. This is Tom at School. He lounges the streets, insults passengers, and goes down and stones the school house windows. This is Tom in Vacation. He takes other boys on pleasure excursions, such as stealing pears, apples and melons. This is Tom on a Farm.

The other day Tom's father called upon the school committee, looking much like an injured and persecuted man. (Mark this: If a boy lies every day worse than Ananias and Sapphira, especially if it is about the school, his mother will believe every word of it. And if his mother believes it, of course his father will.) So in comes Mr. Skinner the injured father:

My son has been turned out of school, sir.
For what?
Nothing in the world but missing a word.
Indeed! How did you ascertain that?
He says so, and all the other children say so.

All the other children were two or three smaller ones, who had to be Tom's echoes under penalty of standing inverted.

Now, Mr. Skinner, I know a little of Tom's antecedent proclivities. I was in the school two days ago, and he didn't spell but one word right—and that one he guessed at. He won't study, and he seldom answers a question rightly except by accident.

Why, sir, he says he's got through most of his books.

Yes, sir, he gets through his books as a worm gets through an apple, or a rat gets through a meal-chest—he digs through with his jackknife.

Well, I ain't unreasonable. I'm willing Tom should be punished, but his mother don't want him turned out of school. We want him to have a good eduiation. The teacher can whip him if it's necessary.

You seem to think, it must be a great privilege to whip your boy. It strikes me that is asking a good deal of a young lady, and that such little jobs as these you ought to do yourself. Parents are bound to send their children to the school room in such condition that they will neither kick nor bite, and if they neglect this duty they ought to forfeit their privileges.

Mr. Skinner went home with new views But for Tom's sake I did not let the matter rest there. I gave a prescription which I thought suited exactly to Tom's case, and which I have never known to fail; and as it works with boys of the Tom Skinner stripe as charmingly as Rarey's does with wild horses, I give it for the benefit of all parents and school committees,—thus:

"Take Tom out of school for one week, don't leave him any leisure wherein to torment the cat or stone the neighbor's hens; take him out into the field, make him work at your side from morning till evening, so that he will be sure to sleep o'nights; never strike him or whip him; work him seven days in succession, at the end of which time you may reasonably expect all the bad spirits have worked out of him, at the rate of one devil per day. Then let him go back to the school, and if the evil possessions comes again, repeat the exorcism till it is effectual and complete."

Tom is now under this regimen. It works beautifully, and I am persuaded we shall have a new and better edition both of Tom at School and of Tom on the Farm.—Religious Magazine.

Not a Bad Excuse.

Those who go round with the contribution box in California churches plead and argue the case at the pews as they go along. In one instance the following dialogue ensued:

Parson L—— extended the basket to Bill, and he slowly shook his head. Come, William, give us something, said the parson.

Can't do it, replied Bill.

Why not? Is not the cause a good one?

Yes, good enough, but I am not able to give anything.

Poh! Poh! I know better; you must give a better reason than that.

Well, I owe too much money; I must be just before I am generous, you know.

But, William, you owe God a larger debt than you owe any one else.

That's true, parson; but then he ain't pushing me like the rest of my creditors. The argument was conclusive.

Rambles Abroad.

LEAVES FROM A TOURIST'S JOURNAL—NO. 8.

Bank of England: Zoological Gardens: Excursion to the Isle of Wight: Departure for the Continent: Arrival in France.

Ten million dollars in my possession—yes, in my own hands; a gift right from the vaults of the Bank of England! I never dreamed of such a streak of good fortune, when, invited by a Leadenhall street merchant, I went to visit with him the temple of Plutus, Threadneedle street. Such generosity quite overcome me. It is true, a little while before, the same large-hearted official had slipped into my hand a small bag containing five thousand dollars in gold; but that seemed comparatively nothing, when he put into the other the above mentioned sum in bank notes, filled, signed and ready for use, at the same time assuring me that they had remaining two hundred and forty millions besides, which were safely stowed away in a lower room. Remembering, however, that I was about to perambulate still further the crowded thoroughfares of London, it seemed on the whole, the wisest thing for me to leave the money for the present at least, in his charge. He kindly consented and has ever since, doubtless, securely kept or safely invested it.

In another room there was a wonderful apparatus for weighing sovereigns, so delicately adjusted as to show the sixteenth part of a hair's weight. Into a sort of a hopper, a pile of coin was poured. As they issued below, those of full weight were tossed into one heap, those which were "found wanting" in the slighest degree were by the same instrument placed in another pile. Why could'nt the apparatus be so enlarged and graduated as to be of material use in this country in determining the value of certain aspirants for office and trust?

If you go to the Zoological Gardens, as you will of course, go in the afternoon, when the feeding of the carnivorous animals takes place, and you will get a better idea of those scenes which have been witnessed in the Coliseum, when hungry lions and other ravenous beasts were let loose on Christian martyrs. The travelling menageries in this country give but a poor idea of what can be seen at Regent's Park, from the humblest little zoophite to the huge Behemoth, described in the book of Job, who "esteemeth iron as straw, and brass as rotten wood; his teeth are terrible round about."

But a volume instead of a column, is needful to describe London. Even then you know not half, till you have been there and seen for yourself. Climb to the dome of St. Paul's and look up and down that city of two and a half millions; or take a cab and ride eighteen miles from one end of it to the other. Stand on Smithfield where the martyrs were burned and think of what Christian heroism once accomplished; or go as I did, with city missionaries to the vicinity of Old Bailey, and among the thieves and courtesanes of Wellclose Square, and see what Christian philanthropy is now doing by day and by night among the degraded and abandoned. But I pass over these and other topics, omitting any further account of the city or of its charming suburbs, Greenwich, Windsor and other places visited during our brief stay. Our summer months were flying and I wished, before going to France and Germany, to spend a few days with friends at the Isle of Wight, whom I had never seen, but long loved and respected. This balmy island is well termed the "British Madeira." With many of my readers it doubtless is associated with the descriptions of Legh Richmond in the "Dairyman's Daughter" and "African Servant." Landing at Ryde,—not far from Osborn, where her Majesty the Queen was then residing,—I took a carriage to Newport, thence on the following day to Carrisbrook Castle and thence to Afton, where at the mansion of B C——, Esq., I was most cordially received. Here in this charming retreat, I spent four days most delightfully, and enjoyed the best of English hospitality. Excursions by land and on the water—quiet strolls through the magnificent grounds belonging to the estate; or rambles to Freshwater Bay and other interesting localities, with not less attractive employments in doors, made the visit one of the "sunny memories of foreign lands."

Several routes to the Continent invite the traveler's attention. You can go from London to Paris in twelve hours via Boulogne. Others prefer to go via Calais or Dieppe. Convenience and comfort led me to choose the Southampton route to Havre. Eight hours by steamer brought us to the shores of France. What a change do you at once experience. While in England you feel very much at home; her people, language and customs are so similar to our own. Not so on the Continent. As you approach the landing pier gend'armes march up with drawn swords. The vigilant police place a guard and your passport and luggage are examined. You are now in the land of the guillotine, the hot bed of revolutions; a land which though fair and beautiful to the eye, has long been blighted by infidelity, Romanism and despotism. We first repaired to the hotel de Normandie. Now begun my awkward attempts to converse in French. My friend knew not a word, and was continually beseeching me to say this or that to the waiter for him. One request, however, I was wholly unable to interpret, and he was forced to go through a ludicrous pantomine, before our bewildered attendant could divine the secret and supply his wants.

For the Patriot.

British Sympathizers.

The late Emancipation Proclamations is sometimes called a brutum fulmen, a harmless thunderbolt. The following extracts will show that it has not been unproductive of good results in one quarter at least.

"Perhaps no speech could be more eloquent than the patience with which the Lancashire operatives have borne a calamity directly due to the American war, notwithstanding the attempts that have been made to stir them up to demand action against the Government of the United States. But as a part of the nation they would be heard. The sympathizers with the slave oligarchy will not find much to please them in what was said or what was applauded, (at the meeting of workingmen in Manchester) The cause which our governing classes delight to honor in their literature, in their public appearances, and in society, the attempt to organize on the American Continent a nation having slavery as its basis, is one for which they express their strong detestation. And although they had been strongly counselled not to meet and encourage the North in attempting to 'subjugate' the South, they were not to be made the dupes of words. They saw the absurdity of pretending that a war to restore a Union of self governing and equal States was a war of subjugation.

"The Manchester workmen were not content to dwell in abstractions, but declared in a resolution their 'profound sympathy with the efforts of the Government of the United States to maintain the Union in its integrity,' and also objected as an address to President Lincoln."—London Daily News, Jan. 2, 1863.

"More than two months ago Lord Russell expressed to Mr. Adams his belief that English sympathy, as tested by popular meetings, would still be found to be upon the side of the United States. The belief did credit to his Lordship's sagacity and knowledge of his countrymen. He might have made the statement in much stronger terms, and yet have fallen short of the truth. He might have said that in all public assemblages an overwhelming preponderance of sentiment would be manifested for the North. The experiment has been made, and with a degree of success that must have surprised some of its promoters. Wherever a vote has been taken upon the question, the sympathizers with the South have numbered about one in a hundred. In most instances, and in assemblies of the largest dimensions, the cause of the North has been sustained with absolute unanimity and enthusiasm. There were three such meetings on Wednesday night—the eve of the day on which the proclamation of freedom was to take effect. The great Free Trade Hall at Manchester, the Temperance Hall at Sheffield, and one of the largest places of public meeting in London, were crowded with workingmen, who adopted by acclamation addresses to President Lincoln in support of his anti-slavery policy. Nearly every day for the last month or two we have had to record some similar demonstration of opinion.—These meetings have been held in various parts of the country,—in the suffering cotton districts as well as in the prosperous towns of the midland of the southern counties,—and there has been not a single exception to the pervailing sentiment. No where have the advocates of the Confederacy obtained as many supporters as there are slave States."—London Morning Star, Jan. 2, 1863.

Add to these the following extracts from the letters of an American merchant, now in England. The letter is dated London, Jan. 21, 1863.

"Since the receipt of the Emancipation Proclamation, England has changed her sympathies to a great extent. The London Times has got itself into a fearful scrape. It is now pretty well understood. After the receipt of the Proclamation the Times came out with a labored article endeavoring to justify slavery by proofs from the Bible.

"This article has made people furious against the Times. The clergy, their flocks the anti-slavery society, and many, many others, are in a great ferment. The say the entire clergy will preach on the subject next Sabbath. Now that England is waking up her heart will come out as it should.

"On Thursday a great mass meeting is called at Exeter Hall, to congratulate on this proclamation. The speakers are to be the Rev. Baptist Noel, Rev. Newman Hall, John Stuart Mill, Thomas Hughes, &c., &c.—Great guns indeed.

"Sentiments favorable to the Northern cause seem to be gaining ground every day, and although the Times is still in its darkness and fury, its repeated lying cries of "Wolf! Wolf!" have ceased to be heeded. The Star and the News speak boldly for the North, and each edition contains some strong article favorable to the cause. If the North will now be true to herself, she will not again claim sympathy from abroad in vain. The South now stands before Europe as the advocate of slavery, the North of freedom. As such, which should succeed? No doubt seems now to exist in the minds of the people here."

Although America should never depend on the aid and sympathy of foreign powers, still it is gratifying and cheering to know that the workingmen of England, notwithstanding the great suffering which the war has caused them, and others of their countrymen as sensible as they, hold to, and will morally support the cause of Truth and Right in the great struggle now going on in our land.

A Voice from the Navy.

U. S. STEAMER VT., PORT ROYAL, (S. C.)
JANUARY 7TH, 1863.

The following article upon "naval affairs," appeared in the Philadelphia Sunday Transcript of January 18—and was copied from that paper, and appended to a letter, by a Quincy Boy, one of the crew of the Vermont, which was recently received by his parents in this town, with the request that it should be published. He was an eye witness of the scenes depicted, and vouches for their accuracy. The idea of taking negroes into the army and navy, and putting them on an equality with the white man, he says, is demoralizing to the service, and will be the ruin of both.

"Dear Transcript: The crew of the Vermont beg leave through the columns of your valuable paper and your own kindness to lay before the public a true statement in regard to the treatment of sailors since this war broke out. It used to be that a sailor was thought something of in the navy if he conducted himself as most Americans do; but now it don't make a particle of difference what you do, you are not thought half so much of as the "contrabands" with which this ship abounds. It is an every day occurrence that one or more of these negroes are guilty of some misdemeanor or violation of the laws and regulations of the navy; and when such is reported to the captain, he says he don't believe a word of it. But on the other hand, should a white man be reported by a negro, he is at once condemned and punished. We only mention this to show our fathers, mothers, wives, and all concerned, how we are treated. It used to be that if a man was reported, his case was investigated properly; and if he could prove his innocence, he was acquitted there and then—and if found guilty, he was punished for his offence according to the crime; but I must say it is not so now.

"Here is a case that came to the captain's notice on Sunday last. All hands were called to muster on the quarter deck, and the Articles of War were read to us, which is customary on the first Sunday of every month; this being over, two "holy-stones" were exhibited to the Ship's Company by the captain, that were thrown at the negroes the night previous by some malicious person or persons; and for the same, he has condemned us all as "cowards and blackguards;" and we think it very hard we should be thus underrated—for as sons of this great Republic, we entered the navy to fight the battles of our beloved country, and not to disgrace the Stars and Stripes which we have so long sailed and served under.

"After this, a Mr. Gray, an Acting Master's Mate, who is as green as a cabbage as regards duty on board of a Man-of-war, reported the Chief Boatswain's Mate—a good man and a good sailor, which can't be denied by any man on board of this ship, from the captain down to the smallest messenger-boy—for insolence and using profane language; and for the same, he is now in solitary confinement on bread and water. Things would not be carried on in this manner if we were subject to the regular naval officers. But at present this ship is governed by a lot of Acting Masters, with the exception of the captain, who is a regular commander, but has been on the retired list for some time past. Our forward officers, boatswain, gunner and sailmaker, are regular navy officers, and perfect gentlemen in every respect.

"Our carpenter, whose name is Babbit, holds prayer meeting every evening with the "contrabands" on the Orlop deck; he lately sent five dollars to a tract society to buy tracts for his colored brethren; and afterwards took up a collection from them, the proceeds of which he put in his own pockets. We think this an act of charity indeed, and his name deserves to be recorded.

"We are now forced to sleep and mingle with the blacks, much to our own mortification, and we expect to have to eat in the same messes with them ere long. Some of the "white trash," as we are called, had to give up their places where they have slept since the ship went into commission, for the accommodation of the almighty negro, and seek billets else where, or lie on deck. Now we ask the public and the heads of Government if the "Ram" were to come here from Savannah, as is expected, who would they look to for the defence of this ship? Would they depend on the Contrabands? If not, let them treat us as white men—and we will prove ourselves gallant and true, should we have the opportunity, in defending our Country's Banner.

Difference in Wives.

It is astonishing to see how well a man may live on a small income, who has a hardy and industrious wife. Some men live and make a far better appearance on six or eight dollars per week, than others do on fifteen or eighteen dollars. The man does his part well, but the wife is good for nothing. She will even upbraid her husband for not living in as good style as his neighbor, while the fault is all her own. His neighbor has a neat, capable and industrious wife, and that makes a difference. His wife, on the contrary, is a whirlpool, into which a great many silver cups might be thrown, and the appearance of the water remain unchanged.

Who is Hit?

An exchange paper, speaking of the fact that the city papers, charge for the insertion of deaths and marriages, says that that is but a small item in the large amount gratuitously done by the publisher of a country paper for the benefit of his neighborhood. There are some who can be satisfied with nothing but a New York or Boston paper, while a paper printed at their door, laboring for the public interests of their locality, giving them importance in the community, recording the marriges of themselves or their children, and telling when their nearest and dearest have been gathered to the common resting place of mankind—gets no support from them. A man who despises a local paper has not sense to realize its value, or is hardened enough to spit upon the grave stone of his mother. One day a paper publishes the death of a child, the next day, perhaps, the father comes into the office and stops his paper, because he can get a Boston paper for fifty cents less on a year! How thoughtless persons are who refuse to sustain home newspapers.

Repartee.

Robert Hall was unhappy in his courtship of Miss Steel. When he was perhaps smarting beneath the disappointment, he when out to tea. The lady of the house said with no very good taste:

You are dull, Mr. Hall; we have no polished steel here to entertain you.

O madam, that's not the slightest consequence; you have plenty of polished brass.

His genius for happy retort never slumbered. One of his congregation, a sickly, querulous old mortal, met him in the street:

Ah, Mr. Hall, you have—never—been to see me—sir. I've been—very ill—I've been at—Death's door—Mr. Hall.

Why didn't you step in, sir? Why didn't you step in.

How to Predict the Weather.

The colors of the sky at particular times, afford wonderfully good guidance. When you see a rosy sunset, you may calculate on fair weather, and a ruddy sunset, foul weather. A bright yellow sky in the evening foretells wind; a pale yellow, wet; a neutral grey sky in the evening is favorable, in the morning unfavorable. When the clouds are soft, undefined and feathery, it will be fine; if their edges are sharp, hard and defined, it will be foul. Deep unusual hues betoken wind or rain; but delicate tints bespeak fair weather.

A Twenty Dollar Husband.

A country girl desirous of matrimony received a twenty dollar bill as her marriage gift. Her mistress desired to see the object of Susan's favor, and a diminutive fellow, swarthy as a Moor and ugly as an ape, made his appearance.

O, Susan! said the mistress, how small! what a strange choice you have made!

La, ma'am, answered Sue, in such times as these, when all the tall and handsome fellows are off to the war, what more of a man than this could you expect for twenty dollars?

Speak the Truth.

Always speak the truth. Never equivocate. You will then relate things and events with confidence, feeling assured that you are believed. You will never have occasion to say for effect, "It is certainly so," "I declare it is the truth," which always throws suspicion upon the speaker, and weakens instead of strengthens the force of his words. No, if you are habituated to always speak the truth, you will never have occasion to add to the truth you have spoken. You will sustain a good character among your friends. All will have confidence in what you say, and feel safe in your society, knowing that no deception is in your eye, or malice in your heart. This confidence will greatly add to your usefulness, not only to your friends, but to the world in which you live.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

THE ENTERTAINMENT. There was a grand good party and time at the Town Hall, on Friday evening of last week. The entertainment, which was given for the benefit of the Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Association, was excellent, and was thought by many the best of the season. The net profit from this gathering was about one hundred and fifty dollars. This amount together with other sums that have been raised by similar entertainments during the winter, must be nearly five hundred dollars, we should judge. A good pocket full, and if judiciously used ought to be of great benefit to the soldiers from this place.

COUNT SCHWABE. As there has been some mystery in regard to the whereabouts of Mr. Schwabe, we would inform our readers that we received a letter from him, dated East Abington, Feb. 26th, yesterday morning. He wishes us to present his compliments to the citizens of Quincy, and says that he will be happy to see them at the Hancock House, in this town, to-day, and if there are any claims against him, he will be happy to settle the same; those indebted are invited to call and settle.

ANNUAL ELECTION. On Monday next our annual spring election comes off, for the choice of Town officers, and the transaction of other business. From appearances, there will be two regular tickets in the field—the "Union," or Democratic and Peoples', and the Republican. Both parties will bring forth their best men—each, no doubt, eminently qualified to fill the different posts of honor; but what the result will be, the most sanguine cannot discover. Monday evening will tell the story.

A MONSTER HOG. We saw in Boston last Tuesday, a Leicester hog, whose live weight was one thousand three hundred and thirty pounds! as to his lateral dimensions, the old Elm on the Common will give an approximate idea. This porcine monster was raised by P. W. Jones, Amherst, (N. H.)

MINISTERS AND PARISHES. Rev. Mr. Broughton of East Bridgewater, week before last, was visited by his people and presented a roll of bank bills. The children the same day brought their gift in silver to Mrs. B. Rev Mr. Parker's parishoners, East Cambridge, on Thursday of last week, surprised their pastor with a visit and a "roll" of $132. Rev. Mr. Brown, recently of Quincy, now at South Malden, has had a similar bill-ious attack; so also, his predecessor, Rev. Mr. Cruikshank, now at Spencer. These things are as they ought to be.

WINTER—with its short days, interminable nights and cold storms, we part with without regret—notwithstanding the reign of the hoary monarch has been mild in the extreme, even with such clemency, that with our dry streets, and warm southerly breezes, we might have fancied ourselves in the springtime of our desires, if we had not been reminded on Sunday last, that his sceptre was not yet laid aside, and that we were not to be let off so easy. The storm on that day was severe; the air was piercing cold, with a stiff breeze, and the snow that fell was caught up by the wind, and formed into the most fantastic forms and shapes. There was not enough came, however, for the purpose of a general blockade, but sufficient to prevent the Horse Cars from running on Monday—but they came up the next morning in grand style, just as the Depot Master, Mr. G., stepped in, with a countenance radiant with smiles, to inform us, much to our relief, that there was no difficulty on the Old Colony this time—that all obstructions had been removed, and the road was open for travel as usual.

DEMOCRATIC TOWN COMMITTEE. The Democrats of this town, on Wednesday evening, made choice of the following gentlemen, to constitute their Town Committee for the ensuing year:

William B. Duggan, John Chamberlin, Jonathan Jameson, William S. Pattee, Geo. Cahill, Patrick McDonald, Arthur P. Hayden.

RETURNED. William H. Follett, who was a few months since promoted to 2d Lieut. in the 3d Mass. Battery arrived in this, his native town, on Wednesday last on a short furlough.

Sergeant Horace A. Derry, who was recently promoted arrived in this place some days since, on sixty days furlough.

Free Bridges.

We are informed by N. F. Safford, Esq., Chairman of the County Commissioners, that they, as Trustees, have extinguished the franchises of the Corporations which owned the Braintree bridge and the Neponset bridge.—The Corporations have been paid—bought out—and both bridges have been put in excellent repair; the Braintree bridge has been built new within four years.

The County has received back five thousand dollars, which they paid out at the original purchase. But there were several thousands expended by the County in the original purchase, and in repairs, for which they make no claim. They have also a fund invested of $7,224 72, on January 1st, 1863, the income of which is to be applied to keep the bridges in repair.

It is thought by the Commissioners that the time has come to take some legislative action to make the bridges FREE. It can be easily done, and be no burden to either town. With good new bridges, or bridges in excellent repair, and a fund of $7,224 72 out at interest, there ought to be no opposition to making the bridges free at once.

The Trustees discontinued the taking of tolls on the Quincy Avenue in this town, because they thought it was time the road was free. They see no reason why they should be obliged to take tolls there again, as some would compel them to do. As to the Neponset bridge, they think with a moderate additional fund, gathered by subscriptions, and added to the $7,224 72, that that bridge also could be made free. If so, it should be done—the sooner the better.

It is hoped that the Legislature will pass the act at once, as the Trustees have petitioned for it. The County has been liberal we think, in its appropriations for the purpose, and we see no good reason to object to making the bridge free.

A GOOD SUGGESTION. The thanks of the citizens and pedestrians generally on the line of Washington street, are due our estimable and enterprising friend, W. M. French, for his liberality in clearing the side-walk of snow after the storm of Sunday night, February twenty-second, with his celebrated Plow, called the "Snow-king," which we think he is entitled to letter patent from the Government, from the admirable manner in which it accomplishes its work. In returning the homage due Mr. French, the idea suggests itself of the propriety of the Town purchasing one of those celebrated machines, and with the use of the horse kept at the Almshouse, would keep our sidewalks in passible condition after a fall of snow.

"UNION TICKET." At their respective meetings on Wednesday evening, the Democratic and Peoples' parties united, and made choice of the following persons as candidates for Town officers, to be supported at the election on Monday next:

Moderator: Dr. William B Duggan.
Town Treasurer: Elbridge Clapp.
Town Clerk: John Chamberlin.
Selectmen: Ebenezer Adams, Daniel Baxter and William B. Duggan.
School Committee: William S. Pattee, William Chesley, for three years; and Geo. W. Prescott, for two years.
Constables: B. F. Corliss, Luke Rideout, James O'Neil, Joseph W. Lombard, Washington M. French, William Walker, and Albert Hayden.

The Old Board.

At a large and enthusiastic meeting of many friends of the present Board of town officers, held on Thursday evening, comprising representatives of all political parties, the following resolve was unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, the present Board of town officers, having proved themselves faithful to their trust, by their judicious management of town affairs, are again entitled to our suffrages, more especially so, as party and selfish cliques are at work to defeat them in party caucuses.

Resolved, that the following ticket be presented at the polls on Monday next, for the consideration of the legal voters, and we will use all fair and honorable means to elect it."

Town Clerk—George L Gill.
Town Treasurer—Wyman Abercrombie.
Selectmen and Assessors—Ebenezer Adams, Ensign S. Fellows, vice Noah Cummings, who positively declines a re-nomination, and Albert Thayer.
School Committee—Rev. John D. Wells, William Chesley, three years; Rev. J. G. B. Heath, two years.
Constables—W. M. French, Albert Hayden, Samuel Ames, George Savil, Peter B. Mead Charles H. Kimball, A. S. Sawtell. B.

A HUNDRED TONS OF GOLD. During the past year there was received at San Francisco forty-nine millions of dollars in gold. This amount of the precious metal would weigh a hundred tons, and would make the freight of a train of fourteen cars on a railroad. A country which produces gold in such quantities only needs the adoption of a correct financial and mercantile policy to have its currency upon a sure foundation, and in sufficient quantity for all useful purposes.

SAYINGS AND DOINGS IN WASHINGTON.

It is said that the Secretary of War expresses abundant satisfaction at the condition of our military establishment and has confidence of success as soon as active operations can be resumed. According to his statement, we have eight armies in the field, numbering all told, a goodly half million of effective soldiers. As the enlisting period of many of the soldiers will close within a few months, it is currently reported in Washington that after the President shall have signed the Conscription Bill, there will be a new call for six to eight hundred thousand men. The new act organizing the Territory of Arizona, formerly a part of New Mexico, is one of much importance. This Territory contains an area of one hundred and twenty thousand square miles, and is therefore larger than three States the size of Ohio. It is represented by those who have lived there many years, as containing more and richer silver and copper mines than any Territory under Government. Gold is also found there in many parts of the Territory. The debates in both Houses of Congress for some ten days past have been unusually interesting and often exciting. Party lines being drawn to the utmost tension. The Republican party identifying slavery emancipation in their movements as cardinal to all points of legislation—often denouncing their opponents as wanting in loyalty and patriotism. On the other hand it is maintained that the Democratic party are and have been for a vigorous prosecution of the war; insisting that it shall be carried on within the perview of the Constitution and Laws of the country, and that the negro question shall be set aside until the rebellion is conquered. Nearly sixty days having passed since the President's Proclamation was issued, and not an hundred negroes have joined the army in consequence of what the President has done. Among the on dits in the circles of the National capital is one that General McClellan is to be recalled to the command of the army of the Potomac and that Mr. Lincoln's Cabinet is to be re-modelled conservatively, with Secretary Seward at its head. Very like, very like.

LOCAL ITEMS.

Major General Wool is on a visit to Boston, looking quite well for a veteran of seventy-threey ears. The object of his visit is to ascertain the condition of our coast defences in Boston harbor, having inspected these, he will proceed on his tour to Maine. Washington's Birth Day was appropriately noticed on Monday last. It was quite a gala day in Boston, the Custom House, Courts, Banks, and other public places, besides any number of stores were closed. x.

Army Correspondence

Chestnut Hill Hospital,
Philadelphia, Penn. Feb. 18, 1863.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

I thought, as I had nothing to do, I would write you a few lines. I am now at the hospital, having received a wound in the right leg, just below the knee, at the battle of Fredericksburg, but I am getting along nicely. I see by the papers that Sergeant Horace A. Derry, of Quincy, has been promoted to 2d Lieutenant. I am very glad to hear it, for it is no more than he deserves. Lieut. Derry was in the battle of Ball's Bluff and was taken prisoner, after being confined in Richmond prisons for months he was exchanged. Since then he has been in all the battles on the Peninsula excepting at Williamsburg; and in the battles of Antietam and Fredericksburg; all of which he came out without a scratch, until the last, where he was wounded in the right leg, just below the knee. He has a furlough of sixty days, and started from here on the 16th inst., for home, sweet home. I hope soon to see him in command of Co. D, 20th Mass. Regiment, to which Company I have the honor to belong.

From your friend,
ALDEN H. HOLBROOK.

CONSOLIDATION. The New York Times dispatch says a plan has been submitted to the Military Committees for consolidating the regiments in the field, or for filling them up to the maximum number, and keeping them full from troops to be raised under the new conscription law. The plan does away with the present state of affairs, in which a wasted regiment, perhaps hardly containing 150 muskets, has the full compliment of staff, line and field officers for 1000 men. It proposes to make such a change as will consolidate parts of regiments in whole ones, thereby disposing of supernumerary officers, then forming them into brigades with a Brigadier each, and then into divisions with a Major General to command. It gives the President power to muster out of the service officers whom the consolidation may leave without commands, always discriminating in favor of those oldest in the field and most noted for services and ability.

SLEIGHING AT THE CAPITOL. About five inches of snow fell in Washington on Sunday last, the 22d instant, making good sleighing; the first of the season.

The New Banking Law.

The Banking Law that has recently passed Congress affords unusual facilities to the community, as will be seen by the following statements:

This bill grants corporations or individuals the privilege of going into banking business with a capital of $50,000, or upwards, on the following system, viz:

A corporation, individual, or individuals, can purchase of the Government $50,000, or more, if they choose, of their Bonds, on which amount they allow six per cent. interest, payable in coin. Now let us see how this will work. You obtain of the Government $50,000 in Bonds, on this amount they pay you $2,000, which is four per cent., having deducted two per cent., which is the Government tax; the $2,000 in coin, at fifty per cent. premium, (which is a low figure at the present time,) would increase the surplus $2,000 to $3,000, making six per cent. on the capital invested. So you would have six per cent. profit at the commencement of business, which would be so much the advantage over the common circulating banks.

Banking houses under this law, are allowed all the immunities, rights and privileges of State banks, such as circulation, discounts, deposits and exchange. If they are smart, and shave close as the old banks, they can make the ordinary profit of banking, which is from ten to twelve per cent.—this added to the amount received from Government, would make the handsome sum of eighteen per cent.

These free banks are relieved from the unpleasant task of log-rolling and expense of procuring a State charter, and are also exempt from the State tax, and the arbitrary scrutiny of the Suffolk bank, which are points of considerable importance. The terms of payment are liberal. Fifteen per cent. to be paid down, and ten per cent. every sixty days until the whole amount of the capital is paid, which would take about ten months.

We would advise all those who have stock in old banks to sell them while they bring a good price, before they decrease in value, and invest in Government securities. We are not friendly to such an amount of paper money being thrown abroad over the country, but as it is a necessity, we prefer this, to the old system of banking, as it is more Democratic, and nearer the reach of the people, and will establish a more uniform currency throughout the States. P.

Mistake in the Auditors' Report.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

I find on examining the Auditors' Report an omission in making up the Town Debt, which makes quite a difference in the result. Among the outstanding Town Notes should be added one Note payable to Mr. Wallaston Bank in two months from December 9th 1862, for $6 000,00. WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.

Diptheria—Dr P. Clark.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:—

For the benefit of the public, I wish to make through your columns, a brief statement of facts, concerning the cure of that fearful malady, known as "Diptheria," (or more properly, Diphtheritis) I have recently lost, by that disease, a beloved daughter, of five years and four months. Before the funeral was over, an elder daughter was attacked with symptoms like those which prostrated the first. I had heard from a neighbor, that Dr. P. Clark, of Quincy, had treated the disease with remarkable success. My neighbor's child in the next door, had been very sick with it, and had been cured by his prescriptions. I immediately went for him, and placed my elder daughter under his medical care, and also a son, who began to exhibit symptoms of the same disease. In a few days, both were entirely well. Knowing the anxiety a parent must feel to do the best thing for his child, when attacked with this alarmingly rapid and dangerous disease, and to do it in the shortest time possible, I feel it a duty to the public to state the success which has attended Dr. Clark's treatment of this disease in my own family and in that of my neighbor; for I verily believe that his course of treatment is adapted to ensure a safe and speedy cure of this malady, if the patient be taken in season.

Yours respectfully,
CHARLES F. HOUGH.

THE CONSCRIPTION BILL. This Bill of the Senate, which passed the House on Wednesday, includes in those liable to be drafted into the army to serve for the term of the existence of the rebellion, not, however, exceeding three years, Congressmen, Assemblymen, Aldermen, Quakers, Clergymen, Indians and Negroes. The Bill as it stands allows Conscripted persons to either procure substitutes or pay three hundred dollars to the War Department and be exempted.

It is stated that, with 125 presses, the Treasury Department is just able to print enough green backs in two-thirds of a day to pay the expenses of the Government for one day.

A GENTLEMAN, recently arrived from Canada, states that a fee of $1.500 was paid to him the other day in Quebec, wholly in American silver. He didn't want the stuff, but was compelled to take it. Poor fellow!

The whole number of persons committed to prison in Massachusetts, during 1862, for crime, was 9705.

A few days ago a lady on the New York and New Haven cars had her pocket picked of $5. On her return home she found a ring which had evidently dropped from the hand of the thief. She took it to a jeweller who pronounced it a diamond, worth $500, and gave her that sum for it.

The Portland Argus thinks it matters little that dentists have raised the price of putting in teeth, for if prices of food continue to rise as they have been doing, there will be very little use for them.

Albert Dickerman of Stoughton has been appointed Trial Justice of criminal cases within and for the county of Norfolk.

New York Central Park has already cost about $7,000 000! It is the life, health and pride of the city.

Mrs. Deborah Duane, grand daughter of Benjamin Franklin, died in Philadelphia last Thursday.

The failures of 1861 were one hundred and seventy-eight millions; the failures in the year just expired were but twenty millions.

A LECTURE
TO
YOUNG MEN!

Just Published in a Sealed Envelope.

Price, - - Six Cents.

Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical Cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Emissions, Sexual Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally, Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c.—By ROBERT J CULVERWELL, M D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable lecture, clearly proves from his own experience the awful consequences of Self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This Lecture will prove a boon to thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on the receipt of six cents, or two post-stamps, by addressing,

THE ALL SUFFICIENT THREE

The Great "American Remedies,"

Known as "Helmbold's"

GENUINE PREPARATIONS, VIZ.:

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT "BUCHU,"
" " SARSAPARILLA,
" IMPROVED ROSE WASH.

HELMBOLD'S

GENUINE PREPARATION,

"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"

COMPOUND

Fluid Extract Buchu,

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the

Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATERY OR CALCEROUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

FOR WEAKNESSES

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS,

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Dryness of the Skin,
Horror of Disease,	Trembling,
Dimness of Vision,	Wakefulness,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Pain in the Back,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
	Eruption of the Face,
	Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases,"

Insanity and Consumption.

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess. The records of the insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Females,

Old or young, single, married, or contemplating Marriage—in many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhea, or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the Decline or Change of Life.

No family should be without it.

Take no Balsam, Mercury, or Unpleasant Medicine for Unpleasant and Dangerous Diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

CURES SECRET DISEASES

In all their stages; at little expense; little or no change of diet; no inconvenience, and no Exposure. It causes frequent desire, and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying pain and inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling POISONOUS, DISEASED, AND WORN-OUT MATTER.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the victim of Quacks, and who have paid Heavy Fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the Poison has, by the use of Powerful Astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage.

Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu

For all Affections and Diseases of

THE URINARY ORGANS,

Whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing.

BLOOD! BLOOD! BLOOD!

Helmbold's Highly Concentrated Compound

Fluid Extract Sarsaparilla Syphilis

This is an affection of the Blood, and attacks the Sexual Organs, Linings of the Nose, Ears, Throat, Windpipe, and other Mucus Surfaces, making its appearance in the form of Ulcers. Helmbold's Extract Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and removes all Scaly Eruptions of the Skin, giving to the Complexion a Clear and Healthy color. It being prepared expressly for this class of complaints, its Blood-Purifying Properties are preserved to a greater extent than any other preparation of Sarsaparilla.

Helmbold's Rose Wash.

An excellent Lotion for Diseases of a Syphilitic Nature, and as an injection in Diseases of the Urinary Organs, arising from habits of dissipation, used in connection with the Extracts Buchu and Sarsaparilla, in such diseases as recommended

Evidence of the most responsible and reliable character will accompany the medicines.

CERTIFICATES OF CURES,

From eight to twenty years standing, with names known to SCIENCE AND FAME.

To Horse Owners.

DR. SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LINIMENT for Horses is unrivaled by any, in and all cases of Lameness, arising from Sprains, Bruises or Wrenching, its effect is magical and certain. Harness or Saddle Galls, Scratches, Mange, &c., it will also cure speedily. Spavin and Ringbone may be easily prevented and cured in their incipient stages, but confirmed cases are beyond the possibility of a radical cure. No case of the kind, however, is so desperate or hopeless but it may be alleviated by this Liniment, and its faithful application will always remove the Lameness, and enable the horse to travel with comparative ease.

Every horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for its timely use at the first appearance of Lameness will effectually prevent those formidable diseases mentioned, to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses nearly worthless.

Poetry.

For the Patriot

Lines on the Death of Willie Marsh.

Willie has left us, angel boy,
Left us for a brighter home,
Where no sickness can destroy,
And where the spirit's free to roam.

Yes, Willie's gone, his form now rests
Beneath the snowy mound,
But his spirit basks in heaven,
And he wears a seraph's crown.

Oft he'll visit, his earthly home,
To watch o'er those parents he loved;
And pour o'er their sad hearts a balm,
And bid them e'remore look above.

The wintry winds sweep o'er his grave,
The birds have hushed their songs;
But naught disturbs his peaceful sleep,
For he has joined the throng.

Oh, angels! in the summer land,
Where chilling blasts ne'er come,
And where the birds of Paradise
Forever sings their songs.

Those flowers that decked, his lifeless form
Will soon with him decay;
But they will bloom afresh in heaven,
And shed a brighter ray.

His spirit was too bright for earth,
Too pure to mingle here,
Where so much sin and discord reign,
Within this earthly sphere.

There was a place in heaven, he said,
Prepared for him to dwell,
And when he left his earthly home,
He knew all would be well. H. W.

I Love the Happy, Merry Heart.

I love the happy, merry heart
That never yields to sorrow;
It bids the gloom of care depart;
Hopes better things to-morrow.
A heart like this, will taste of bliss
In spite of wind or weather;
With such a heart I'd play my part,
On, on thro' life together.

Oh! could I but that being find,
Who never yields to trouble,
To yield myself, I feel inclined,
In hopes our joys to double.
With such a mate I'd link my fate,
In spite of wind or weather;
From year to year, our course we'll steer,
On, on thro' life together.

I love the merry, smiling face
That wears no sign of sorrow;
'Tis from the heart's unfathomed space
The cheeks their beauties borrow;
With such a heart I'd play my part,
In spite of wind or weather;
We'd happy be, 'mid poverty,
On, on thro' life together.

A Valentine.

A girl, who has so many wilful ways,
She'd cause an angel's patience to forsake him,
Yet is so rich in all that's girlhood's praise,
Did old Sathanas on her goodness gaze.
Out of a devil she'd an angel make him.

But with Sathanas she has nought in common,
And is (thank Heaven!) no angel yet, I trow;
Her faults, her sweetnesses, are purely human;
She is more beautiful as simply woman
Than any one diviner that I know.

Therefore I do not wish that she may keep
This womanhood, and change not, only grow;
From maid to matron, youth to age, may creep,
And, in a quiet blessedness, aye reap,
On every hand, of that which she doth sow.

Anecdotes.

A gentleman having engaged a bricklayer to make some repairs in his cellar, ordered the ale to be removed before the bricklayer commenced his work.

O, I am not afraid of a barrel of ale, sir, said the man.

I presume not, said the gentleman; but I think a barrel of ale would run at your approach.

Before temperance societies came in fashion a person who had a most resplendent red face, was one day rebuking his son for playing with gunpowder.

Gunpowder! said he, I will set my face against it.

Oh, father, do not for the world, answered his son, if you do we shall all be blown up.

A Western editor announces the death of a lady of his acquaintance, and thus touchingly adds:

In her decease, the sick lost an invaluable friend. Long will she seem to stand at their bedside, as she was wont, with the balm of consolation in one hand, and a cup of rhubarb in the other.

The subject of impressions at first sight was being talked over at tea table, when the lady who presided said that she always formed an idea of a person at first sight; and that idea, she found, was generally a correct one.

Mamma, said her youngest son, in a shrill voice that attracted the attention of all present.

Well, my dear, said the fond mother, what do you want?

I want to know, said young America, what you thought when you first saw ME.

Remember, madam, that you are the weaker vessel, said an irate husband.

Exactly! said the lady, but do not forget that the weaker vessel may have the strongest spirit in it.

DR. LA CROIX'S
PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES
— ON THE —
Physiological View of Marriage.
250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, blushings, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c, &c. It is a truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.
YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATMENT.
We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled physicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the many NEW AND EEFICACIOUS REMIDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of professional Practice, for the past twenty-five years.
FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. De Laney's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box,) though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.
Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.
TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.
THE "ELECTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.
The SECRETS of YOUTH UNVEIL'D
A Treatise on the Cause of Premature Decay—A solemn warning. Just published, a book showing the insiduous progress and prevalence among schools, (both male and female,) of this fatal habit, pointing out the fatality that invariably attends its victims, and developing the whole progress of the disease, from the beginning to the end.
It will be sent by Mail on receipt of two [3] cent Stamps.

Bend Beneath the Blast.

When sorrow's tempests round us roar,
And overwhelm the soul;
O, trust thou not in worldly pride,
Or seek the tempting bowl;
But with a firm and trusting heart,
Bend low beneath the blast;
And He above who chasteneth thee
Will raise thee when 'tis past.

The lofty oak, the mountain pine,
So stately in their pride;
Must bend or break before the storms
That on the night winds ride;
While the meek willow lowly stoops
Before the raging blast,
And lifts its head in beauty decked,
When storms and clouds are passed.

So thou, O, man, must lowly bend,
When sorrows round thee press;
They may be angels in disguise
To lead to happiness;
O, trust to Him who rules above,
And bend beneath the blast,
And he will raise thy drooping soul
When storms of life are past.

A Receipt for a Wife.

As much of beauty as preserves affection,
As much of cheerfulness as spurns dejection,
Of modest deference as claims protection,
Yet stored with sense, with reason and reflection,
And every passion held in due subjection,
Just faults enough to keep her from perfection;
Find this my friend, and then make your selection

Scraps.

SUGAR GINGERBREAD. Two cups of butter, four of sugar, two teaspoonsful of saleratus, one egg, two teaspoonsful of ginger, and flour to roll out.

NANCY CAKE. Two [illegible] sugar, three cups flour, two eggs, one cup milk, one teaspoonful cream tartar, half teaspoonful saleratus.

"Revenge is sweet" as the boy said while stealing sugar from the grocer who had whipped him.

Good works are not the cause, but the fruits of righteousness. The tree maketh the apple, but not the apple the tree.

Jenny June says that "keeping a husband is quite as important as getting one." She names but one appliance, that of feeding him well.

Julius, whar did you get dat coat? Down here to Pull's. Whar's dat? Little ways down in Brattle street, whar it says "Pull" on the door. I pulled dis coat and run out.

We overheard a poor unfortunate get the following sockdolager the other day from his better half: You good-for-nothing fellow! said she, What would you have been if I had not married you? Whose was the baking kiver, whose the pig trough, whose the frying pan and iron-hooped bucket, but mine, when you married me?

Flowers are beautiful thoughts that grow out of the ground and seem to talk to us.

The progress of knowledge is slow. Like the sun, we cannot see it moving; but after a while we perceive that it has moved onward.

Many men make prayers which they would be ashamed to trust to the Lord except in strict confidence.

Lay up something against a rainy day; ergo, never lend your umbrella.

A verb is a word signifying to be, to do, or to suffer; a woman's life is a verb.

What is the first thing a young lady looks after in church? The HIMS.

When does a man die for his love? When he turns his red whiskers to brown.

Common sense has made more great men than book-learning.

Among the conditions of sale by an Irish auctioneer was the following: "The highest bidder to be the purchaser, unless some gentleman bids more."

A horse dealer, in showing off a spirited nag to a customer, received a kick in his ribs, though smarting under the pain, made up the best face he could, and exclaimed, "Pretty, playful creature!"

It is less pain to learn in youth than to be ignorant in old age.

Miscellaneous.

A Smash Up.

OR THE COUNTRYMAN SAVED.

It is surely a hard thing for a quiet old gent who has spent all his life back among the granite hills of New Hampshire, cultivating his farm and going to mill and the store with his slow old horse, with steady habits of twenty years trial, to think of exchanging it for the iron horse, going at the rate of forty or fifty miles an hour! and the bare thought made a cold shudder run down the back of Uncle Peleg.

Uncle Peleg had read the paper carefully for a long time, and had made up his mind that the cars were confounded ticklish things. Well, starting from the house, and with such thoughts as these permeating his brain, he arrived at the depot. Soon the bell rang, and men and women rushed into the cars. Uncle Peleg stepped on board with the fortitude of a Christian martyr in the bloody days of Rome

The Conductor may be a perfect gentleman, for but for all that, Uncle Peleg eyed him suspiciously, and whispers in his ear to be larnal keerful and not let the critter run off the track, as he felt as though something was going to happen.

They went bowling it along at the speed of about forty knots, when suddenly the fierce yell of the whistle was heard, startling the "still ear of night." The blood curdled in the veins of Uncle Peleg, and his hair seemed to stand on end. The scream of the whistle was followed by the grating jar of the breaks as they slowly succumbed to the frenzied pulls of the conductor and breakmen; a sudden concussion and then the train stopped.

The accident happened at the crossing of a country road, and the passengers at once rushed out of the cars, and among them Uncle Peleg, without hat, but clutching his valise with the energy of a drowning man. He rushed around among the crowd, till at last espying the conductor, he rushed up to him, exclaiming:

You tarnel, careless critter! I knew how it would be, letting him have so much slack rein. Now we are all gone to eternal smash.

The conductor informed him the damage was small, and that they would soon start again

It seems that the locomotive had run into a countryman's cart loaded with muck, and scattered it like a bomb-shell explosion. It was found, on examination, that the horses had gone off with the front wheels. The passengers at once began to search along the track for the driver. Every shovelful of the muck was removed, but nothing living or dead was discovered. Some of the men mounted the banks, holding lanterns aloft, endeavoring to penetrate the surrounding gloom. One of them thought he espied something in the distance, and hailed with all his power—H-u-l-l-o!

Hullo yerself and see how ye like it! came from the gloom, with the real nasal twang of a live Yankee.

Are you much hurt? brawled the conductor.

Jist a little, but alfired skeered—thought the day of reckoning had come—that I was pretty near that hot hole, parson Smith tells so much about—and dividing the sheep from the goats; and I felt as though as I was going among the goats—and I felt as though I was going among the goats amazing spry. I didn't have a chance to—

How came you on the track? asked the conductor.

Wall, I see you was coming along. I heard the whistle and the bell, but I thought I'd have time to cut across. 'Pears to me you must have been lettin' her out, squire. These engines ain't so dreadful slow, after all. Wal, I put on the braid some, but one o' them 'ere hosses is awful lazy—'taint no more use lickin' him than singing Yankee Doodle to an oyster. They didn't start up and the first thing I knowed—slam-bang! and I went flyin' about nine rods; but I struck on the dead run, and the horses came along and I nabbed them. I am pretty well skeered and some bruised, as I sed before.

Well, turn round and show yourself, said the conductor, holding up the lantern.

'Spect I'm better lookin' before than behind, said the Yankee, turning round like a statue.

Don't know what's got into me, but I feel hot and cold, like as if I'd got the fever'n agur.

All at once the cause of this peculiar sensation was soon explained. The poor fellow's clothes were completely torn off his back and hung in rags from his neck to his heels. His ragamuffin look, as soon as it was demonstrated that he was not hurt, caused roars of laughter among the passengers, in which Uncle Peleg so forgot his danger as to join.

Funny, ain't it? said the Yankee. 'Spect I can come on the corporation for damages; ought to get a new wagin and suit of clothes out of it.

Wal, now we're dun laffin, all un us, I 'spect we'd better go to work and pick up the pieces—

All aboard! shouted the conductor, and the passengers sprang into the car.

Hold on! said the Yankee; 'spect somebody'll have to hold a light here.

The train began to move.

Come back here, some of yeou! yelled the countryman; tarnation! can't ye hold a lantern for a feller that's in distress like a shipwrecked mariner that's run kerslam on the rocks?

Still the train moved on.

I'll sue ye for damages! I'll git Sam Jackson the hogreef to put yer in the pound, blast my pictur ef I don't! Dog rot it ye shan't cross my diggins agin, I tell ye!

But finding threats and remonstrances futile, he added:

Go to thunder with your old merchine! 'tain so tarnal swift and hosey, after all. Ef I only had my Witch-Eyer, I'd show yer how its done; she'd beat a chain of lightening, ef 'twant greased. But get along! I'll come out right, I reckon.

The train was out of sight, and the poor fellow was left alone in his glory.

Uncle Peleg swore if he ever lived to get home again among the hills of New Hampshire, you'd catch a weazel asleep before you'd catch him on the tarnal break-neck-cars again.

Rambles Abroad.

LEAVES FROM A TOURIST'S JOURNAL—NO. 9.

Paris and Suburbs: Brussels: A visit to the Rhine.

We reached the "world's drawing room"—as Paris has been termed,—after five hours ride from Havre. Our first enquiry was for chambres meubles—furnished apartments. Through the kindness of Dr. J.—well known here as "Malakoff," of the New York Times—we at once obtained pleasant rooms in Rue Neuve St. Augustin, near the centre of this gay and wicked city. The expense of rooms and lights was about a half dollar a day for each of us. In the lower stories the charges were much higher. Our meals we always took in the cafe or restaurant. The first day after my arrival, I dined with a reputed millionaire on Rue de la Paix. The house, servants and entertainment, were all in regal style. Dinner was served at six, P. M., and consisted of ten courses. Being the only guest, every attention possible was shown me—and who would not, under the circumstances, be favorably impressed?—M——'s carriage was then ordered, and we were driven through the brilliantly lighted streets, out to the new and splendid Bois de Bologne, the "Central Park" of Paris, returning by the way of the Elysian Fields, and Place de la Concorde, where the guillotine during the Revolution slew nearly three thousand victims. The following day, with my companion, I visited the "Great Exhibition," in the Palace of Industry. The Madelaine, the Palace of Luxembourg, the Louvre, with its magnificent display of paintings; the Pere la Chaise,—that quiet city of the dead, where lie Abelard and Heloise, Bellini, Weber, Molliere, and Depuytren, with others of equal worth; the Hotel Dieu, the Morgue—that sad commentary on the rottenness of social life—and the venerable Notre Dame, were in turn visited during our stay. We had the satisfaction, on one of our morning rambles, of seeing the Emperor, as he was walking in the gardens of the Tuileries, [twe-ler ees] in citizen's dress. One charming day we took an excursion along the beautiful valley of the Seine, St Cloud, Sevres and other interesting localities, to Versailles, and enjoyed a feast both in nature and in art. A volume would be required to describe the palace of Louis XIV, its contents and its surroundings. No tourist can well afford to lose this trip.

We spent one Sabbath in the gay metropolis of France. It gave us a striking and impressive picture of what a nation is without a Bible or a Sabbath; without the elements of permanent and healthful prosperity. The streets were crowded with innumerable pleasure seekers, old and young, on foot and in carriages, hastening to their diversions; whining mendicants; noisy lemonade venders, ringing their little bells; with bands of musicians, and in short, everything that would be needful to reproduce the picture of Bunyan's Vanity Fair. We stood awhile in a gorgeous cathedral and looked upon the pageantry and pomp of Romish worship. Priests and attendants were performing their genuflections, bowing and whirling before the altar; burning candles at noon-day threw their sallow light on images and pictures, while rich strains of music were wafted along the gilded arches of the temple. Beauty and fashion came and went. A superbly dressed verger with a golden staff, and a gend'arme, with cockade and sword marched up and down the central aisle—while a third attache held a sprinkler moistened with holy water, for the people to touch as they entered or left.

With infinite relief we crossed the street and took our seats in the English chapel, where the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ was preached and where we joined in singing the good old tunes of Boylston, Arlington and St. Stephens to hymns endeared to us by a thousand precious memories.

Leaving Paris at 10 A. M., you arrive in Brussels at evening. I was greatly pleased with the scenery all along the route.—The level fields of Belgium were covered with a rich verdure and promised abundant harvestings. "Belgium's fair capital," is styled Paris in miniature. We stopped at the Hotel de Regence, close by the house where the scene transpired which Byron has so graphically pictured in his poem, beginning:

"There was a sound of reveiry by night."

The field of Waterloo, we did not visit, although so near, as our plans for a visit to the Rhine would not admit of even a day's delay.

What we Hate to Learn.

One thing very slowly learnt by most human beings is, that they are of no earthly consequence beyond a very small circle indeed, and that really nobody is thinking or talking about them. Almost every commonplace man and woman in this world has a vague but deeply-rooted belief that they are quite different from anybody else, and of course quite superior to anybody else. It may be in only one respect they fancy they are this, but that one respect is quite sufficient. I believe that, if a grocer or silk-mercer in a little town has a hundred customers, each separate customer lives on under the impression that the grocer or the silk-mercer is prepared to give him or her certain advantages in buying and selling which will not be accorded to the other ninety nine customers. "Say it is for Mrs. Brown," is Mrs. Brown's direction to her servant," when sending for some sugar; "say it is for Mrs. Brown, and he will give it a little better." The grocer, keenly alive to the weaknesses of his fellow creatures, encourages this notion. This tea, he says, would be four-and-sixpence a pound to any one else, but to you it is only four-and-threepence. Judging from my own observation, I should say that retail dealers trade a good deal upon this singular fact, in the constitution of the human mind, that it is inexpressibly bitter to most people to believe that they stand on the ordinary level of humanity—that in the main they are just like their neighbors. Mrs. Brown would be filled with unutterable wrath, if it were represented to her that the grocer treats her precisely as he does Mrs. Smith, who lives on one side of her, and Mrs. Snooks, who lives on the other. She would still be more angry if you asked her what earthly reason there is why she should in any way be distinguished beyond Mrs. Snooks and Mrs. Smith. She takes for granted she is quite different from them, quite superior to them. Human beings do not like to be classed—at least, with the class to which they in fact belong. To be classed at all is painful to an average mortal, who firmly believes that there never was such a being in this world. I remember one of the cleverest friends I have—one who assuredly cannot be classed intellectually, except in a very small and elevated class—telling me how mortified he was, when a very clever boy of sixteen, at being classed at all. He had told a literary lady that he admired Tennyson. Yes, said the lady, I am not surprised at that: there is a class of young men who like Tennyson at your age. It went like a dart to my friend's heart. Class of young men, indeed! Was it for this that I outstripped all competitors at school, that I have been fancying myself a unique phenomena in nature, different at least from every other being that lives, that I should be spoken of as one of a class of young men? Now, in my friend's half playful reminiscence I see the exemplification of a great fact in human nature.

Old Hickory on Sweet Temper.

I cannot forbear pointing out to you, my dear child, said General Jackson once, to a young lady in whose welfare he felt a deep interest, the great advantages that will result from a temperate conduct and sweetness of manner to all people, on all occasions. Never forget that you are a gentlewoman. And all your words and actions should make you gentle. I never heard your mother—your dear, good mother—say a harsh or hasty thing to any person in my life. Endeavor to imitate her. I am quick and hasty in my temper, but it is a misfortune, which not having been sufficiently restrained in my youth, has caused me inexpressible pain. It has given me more trouble to subdue this impetuosity than anything I ever undertook.

An Indignant Landlord.

A short time ago one of our citizens, who loves his jokes as well as folks generally do, had occasion to visit one of the small towns in the interior of the State, and knowing that he would have considerable walking over muddy roads, he took with him a pair of long rubber boots. He arrived at his destination about nine o'clock in the evening, and upon enquiry found that the only tavern in the place was half a mile from the station. No conveyance was to be had, and the road was muddy in the extreme. Congratulating himself on having his long boots, he set off, and found the mud in some places so deep his boots were barely long enough. He reached the hotel at last, looking rather soiled about the feet. After supper he enquired the charge of lodging.

We usually charge, said the landlord, who also had some fun in his composition, twenty-five cents; but if a man goes to bed with such boots as them on, (pointing to his customer's feet) we charge him fifty cents.

A very good idea, I should think, returned the traveller.

After half an hour's conversation, the landlord showed him to his room, and they parted for the night, mutually pleased with each other. The next morning our friend arose late, and enquiring for the landlord, learned that he had gone from home to attend to some business. After breakfast he handed a dollar to the landlord's wife, saying:

There is fifty cents for my supper and breakfast, and fifty cents for my lodging.

Twenty five cents is all we charge for lodging, said the landlady,

Yes, returned the stranger, under ordinary circumstances; but in this case fifty cents is not too much.

The stranger departed, and the landlady was deep in conjecture as to what could be the circumstances which required a man to pay double price for lodging. When her husband returned, he asked:

Has the man who slept in the front room come down yet?

Yes, answered the wife, and he has gone away. He paid fifty cents for his lodging, and said, under the circumstances, it was right.

The landlord rushed up stairs. His wife followed to learn the meaning of such strange proceedings, and found her husband with the bed clothes turned down, and her best bed looking more fit to plant potatoes in, than it did for any human being to sleep in.

You saw that man when he came here last night.

Yes.

You saw his boots, didn't you?

Yes.

Well, said the landlord, the scamp slept in 'em.

A few days after, the traveller, on his return home, put up at the same tavern. Neither himself nor the landlord said anything about the boots, which were about in the same condition as on the previous occasion; but the landlady looked daggers at him, and eyed his boots with much anxiety. About ten o'clock he said he would retire. And, by the way, landlord, he said, with a merry twinkling in his eye, what do you usually charge for lodging?

We charge, answered the landlord, with a tremendous emphasis, twenty-five cents, and we don't allow folks to sleep in bed with their boots on.

I'm glad to hear it. Show me to my room—and the traveller went to bed.

A Clever Boy.

I heard an old German lady telling how a little boy, whose religious education had been somewhat neglected, got over the following stumper:—

"Who made the world? said his teacher to him the first day he entered the village school. No answer. Again the question was repeated, but in a sharper tone. Still no answer. The teacher, never doubting that it was pure stubbornness of little Hans, now threatened to whip him soundly unless he immediately told him who made the world. This threat had the desired effect; an answer must be returned, and the trembling boy, not knowing, what was meant by the world, but thinking, doubtless, it was something wrong he had been unconsciously making, broke forth, "Well, master, I made it—but I will never do it again!"

General Washington's Toast.

At the close of the Revolutionary war, when the American army disbanded, General Washington took an affectionate leave of his officers, and at a public dinner on the occasion, he gave the following toast:

"The American soldier of freedom—may he at all times secure a good and plentiful ration, and when he has finished his tour of duty on earth, may he pitch his tent in the Elysian fields, and there receive his reward from the right hand of the God of battles."

Origin of the Hat.

We owe the hat, as we owe most of our manufactures, to Asia. It was in Asia that men first learned the art of felting wool, so as to compose the substratum of the fabric. Wool, so long as it contains the natural yolk, or animal grease, refuses to felt—that is, its fibres will not mat together into a compact and close-grained mass, such as constitutes felt. When the yolk has been extracted by a chemical process, the wool has a tendency to interlace its fibres, and to adhere firmly to the union thus formed; and from a very remote period, this secret was possessed by the Orientals. The hats which are constantly alluded to in the Scripture—those, for instance, which where bound upon the heads of Shadrack, Meshach, and Abednego, when they were cast into the Assyrian furnace—were genuine hats, but probably adorned by turban cloths wound about them. I have seen the self same hats—tall, narrow cylinders of gray felt, surrounded by a handkerchief or cloth, on the heads of the Jews of Asia. Nor was the use of the hat a Hebrew monopoly. The Kurds, Persians, Armenians, and some tribes of Turks and Tartars, wear the hat, as their fathers did in Saladin's day. The high lamb's wool bonnet of the Persian is but a brimless hat, with nap of exaggerated roughness. The Nestorian Christians of Kurdistan wear hats exactly similar to a battered Irish caubeen, only of a brown or dirty white color. Throughout the East, the dervishes and wandering fakirs may be known by the tall, narrow hat of light-hued felt, adorned by a greasy rag, and towering upwards like a chimney-pot.—Chamber's Journal.

Valuable Receipts.

Is your son bright? And did he take the first prize in the school? Then take him out of school at once and set him at work.

Is he dull and lazy, overfed and sleepy? Stop his meat, and other rich food, make him get up earlier, bathe more thoroughly, drink no coffee, encourage him in active plays, and make certain that his lessons are not neglected.

Is your wife nervous, unhappy and fretful? Try upon her the tenderness and attentions of your honeymoon. Remember that love is the best of all medicines for women, and that no wife's brow ever corrugates, while she lives in the sunshine of her husband's heart. Her thousand and one little vexatious cares are exceedingly exhaustive, and you must not forget that new carriages and dresses will fail to support her. If she be a true woman, these things she will ever regard as mere toys, when compared with the affectionate attentions of the husband of her choice.

Rules for the Journey of Life.

The following rules from the papers of Dr. West were, according to his memorandum, put together as general waymarks in the journey of life:

Never ridicule sacred things or what others may esteem such, however absurd they may appear to be.

Never show levity when people are professedly engaged in worship.

Never resent a supposed injury till I know the views and motives of the author of it, nor any occasion to retaliate.

Never judge a person's character by external appearance.

Never think the worse of another on account of his differing from me in political or religious opinions.

Never dispute if I can fairly avoid it.

Progression.

People long ago must have had an inconvenient time of it. No railroad, no steamer, no friction match, no telegraph, no express, no sewing-machine! Crawling along in stage coaches, scratching the masts for a breeze, snuffing tallow dips, exercising over a tinder box, waiting for messages, pestering friends to carry packages, puncturing fair feminine fingers with needle points, with other attendant, unenumerated infelicities, how on earth did they get along? Truly, if our children increase the amount of social comfort in an equal degree, with morals to suit, blessed will they be in their generation.

A Sister in a Tight Place.

At ——, one Saturday evening, fatigued with his long journey, a wagoner, with his son John drove his team into good range, and determined to pass the Sabbath, enjoying a season of worship with the good folks of the village.

When the time for worship arrived, John was set to watch the team while the wagoner went in with the crowd. The preacher had hardly announced his subject before the old man fell sound asleep. He sat against the partition in the center of the body slip; just over against him, separated only by a very low partition, sat a fleshy lady who seemed all absorbed in the sermon. She struggled hard with her feelings, but unable to control them any longer, she burst out with a loud scream, and shouted at the top of her voice, arousing the old man, who, but half awake, threw his arms around her waist, and cried very soothingly:

"Wo, Nancy! wo, Nancy! wo! here, John," calling his son, "cut the belly band and loose the breeching, quick, or she'll tear everything to pieces."

Voted, To assess the sum of $24,000 on the Polls and Estates of the Town according to law.

Voted, That all Poll Taxes be due and payable in fourteen days after demand; that the tax on Estates be due and payable on the first day of November next, and a discount of four per cent. be allowed on all taxes paid on or before the first day of September next, and that the Collector be required to pay interest on all taxes not paid or abated by the first of December next; that no abatement or drawback be allowed by the Assessors after the first day of January next, and that the names of all persons whose taxes are unpaid on the first of February, 1864, be printed with the Auditors' Report.

Voted, That the Collector of Taxes be required to pay to the Treasurer the amount of taxes by him collected on the Fourth day of every month, and that the Treasurer furnish the Collector money to pay the County Tax when due.

Voted, That the Collector of taxes have all the powers conferred by law on Town Treasurers when acting as Collectors.

Voted, That the Town Treasurer be instructed to borrow money in anticipation of taxes under the direction of the Selectmen.

The collection of taxes was bid off by Lewis Bass at three (3) mills on the dollar.

Chose, Lewis Bass Collector of Taxes.

Voted, Not to abolish the School Districts.

Voted, That Act 13, relative to By Laws in regard to Truant Children, be referred to the General School Committee.

Voted, To accept the Report of the Selectmen on Guide Posts.

Voted, That the Report of the Committee chosen in 1861, relative to the unsettled accounts of the late Charles A. Cummings, Collector of Taxes, be laid upon the table.

Voted, That this meeting be dissolved.

APPOINTMENT. Henry F. Barker, Esq., of this town, has been appointed by Gov. Andrew, with the advice and consent of the Council, Notary Public, within and for the County of Norfolk.

THE SPECULATION IN GOLD. Just now gold has lost its character of a measure of value and become an article of merchandise, for the possession of which there is a competition. Those who are scrambling for it are much in the state of mind as bidders at an auction, when they become excited and bid against each other in a sort of frenzy. Nobody would take the bids made under such circumstances as determining the real value of the objects put up at auction. No more are the quotations of the money market at the present time a true indication of the value of gold. The bidders are too numerous and too much excited; we must wait for the fever to subside and the market to become quiet before we shall know the real difference between the value of the coin and the paper currency.—New York Post.

ANNUAL REGISTER of the Executive and Legislative Departments of the Government of Massachusetts for 1863: by James H. Allen: press, Wright & Potter, Boston.

We have received through the mail a copy of this little work; those curious in such matters may here find every officer connected with the Government regularly classed and registered; with their names, residence, birth, native place, occupation, and term of service given. From a table on page nineteen, the following appears in relation to the Legislative Department: whole number of Senators, 40—Representatives, 240—Total, 280 Merchants, 42; farmers, 41; lawyers, 36; manufacturers, 21; boot and shoe manufactures, 15; clergymen 12, embracing other occupations and professions — not omitting an editor and a printer.

A UNITED STATES TUN. The Treasury Department has decided that the measure of a tun, in making assessments for the internal revenue, shall be two thousand two hundred and forty pounds, in all cases, under the excise law, unless the contrary is specified.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, MARCH 5, 1863.

FOREIGN INTERVENTION.

This is no idle gossip to the American people. So far as an impartial sentiment can be gleaned by the latest advices from the Old World, the belief there is universal, that we cannot conquer the Confederates and that the future history of the war stands recorded in its past history. The continuance of war for two years longer, would not only check the revival of trade, but would produce an increased pressure upon it, both here and Europe. Intervention is no new thing. Many a foreign army has entered countries at the request of portions of their inhabitants, and aided those struggling for the ascendency. England and France, powerful as they now are, have had their destinies decided by the action of foreign armies. The same thing may happen to us. "Did not France," (asks a writer) "interfere in our Revolution? Is she not our ancient ally? Are not her naval and marantime interests the same as ours? She would only come as a friend," (says he,) "and why should we not listen to her syren hints and suggestions?" The pride and patriotism of the loyal States demand hands off by France, England or any other power in our affairs. We ask them in plain words to let us alone and mind their own business. The evils of foreign intervention would be of untold calamity to us, and the only preventive, is the speedy success of our arms against the rebels, with a united Northern sentiment to prosecute the war, not for slavery abolition, but to restore the Old Constitution as it is, and our Glorious Union as it was.

CONGRESS.

The days of the popular branch of the Thirty-Seventh Congress have ended; not so the Senate; that upper branch, like the Sovereign of England, never dies; as two-thirds of the American Senate hold over. The past Session has been one pregnant with important consequences to the country. A National scheme of finance has been adopted, and a Conscription Act passed, whose details we cannot reach for several days. During the last hours of the action of Congress on Tuesday night, various amendments and changes were attached to many prominent bills, with as much rapidity as the flight of the weaver's shuttle; we must be content to wait until your next issue before we can safely point out the true features of the Conscript Bill, whose certain passage has trepidated the best part of all our male population, ranging within the vigorous years of twenty to thirty five. Loud complaint is made here against that part of the Act which exempts by the payment of three hundred dollars. One good result may grow out of it to the Government crib; for about one third of the conscripts will pay the fine. Now supposing six hundred thousand men are called into the field, and one third of that number—two hundred thousand dodges by the payment of three hundred dollars each as the price of exemption, the revenue would be immense—that is, the product of two hundred thousand multiplied by $300—200,000x300—$60,000,000.

THE NEWS.

A report that Fort McAllister is captured by our iron-clads; General Stevenson restored to duty; Charleston, (S.C.) to be attacked immediately; the sensation report of a rebel plan to capture the whole of our fleet in the Mediterranean, to be done by British iron clads; a great battle said to have been fought at Vicksburg, with heavy loss on both sides, but without any decided success; the gun boat Indianola captured by the rebels; Intervention or mediation by France becoming more serious; a Federal defeat before Charleston, Richmond and at Vicksburg, would be all day with us; the Southern Confederacy would be recognized by all Europe before July next. A settled opinion would rest on the American mind to let the rebellious go. Shall it be so? Where is our Government and Army? Where our Generals? We never, never can be defeated except by the jealousies of commanding Generals and political intriguers. Stand by the flag to the last. Later: All the important bills have been passed by Congress. Total amount of appropriations, two thousand, two hundred and twenty million of dollars! The Session closed free from excitement. A new tax has been put on dealings in gold, and an act passed rendering absolutely void of all loans in gold over par. The city and town elections in New York have resulted in the triumph of the Democrats.

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS MATTERS.

Well, winter has gone and the ide of March is near. The past three months have been warmer, with the exception of two or three winters, than any for thirty eight years past; and in many respects more remarkable for mildness, than any previous year within the memory of the "oldest inhabitants." A backward spring must be regarded as very probable. The business record of the present, does not vary materially from the last week. Money has been in better demand, not varying in the price of interest. Gold has vibrated from 171 to 162 within the week, and coming down in haste daily. The Loan market is shaking a little from fears as to the practical operation of the Finance Bill in gathering together the odds and ends of Government securities for safe investment. A large amount of dead capital will be sought after for Uncle Sam's paper, so that there are fears with some that a tight money market may follow. Mr. Chase's negotiations to be on a great scale; for money he must have by the tens of millions—and that right soon. With the opening of spring a re-action in trade must follow, but its beneficial effects, will be mostly in our larger cities. x.

THE HINGHAM MURDER. We have to record another of those appalling murders, which shocks the moral feelings, and sends the blood curdling with horrors through the veins. The particulars, as we glean them from a contemporary print, are as follows:

Mr. Asa F. Souther, a native of Hingham, with a wife and children residing in that place, and who had been absent a number of years in California, hearing of his wife's infidelity, hastened home to be confirmed in his worst fears, and to seek redress for his grievances with his own hands. Accordingly, on Saturday evening last, he took position in his own house, with closed doors, armed with a double-barrelled gun, to watch proceedings. Soon a carriage was heard to approach the dwelling, one of the occupants of which alighted—knocked at the door, enquiring for a female, who held head quarters there, to which, Souther responded from a chamber window. As they did not get satisfactory answers to their enquiries, and as they were preparing to leave, Mr. S. descended, and as the carriage moved off, fired into it, wounding a Mr. Richardson in the neck and side, causing almost instant death. Mr. Souther surrendered himself for trial, without a murmur; acknowledged the deed, referring to the cause of the provocation, which led to the unhappy consequences. Mr. S. is represented to be a man of about forty years of age, of a reputed good character, and a peaceable citizen; he has the sympathy of the place to carry with him into his solitude. His victim, Mr. Richardson, is said, to be a wild, and heedless young man, and has thus untimely paid the forfeiture of his folly. The wife, it is intimated, is about to make disclosures to shield the prisoner.

PERSONAL. Gen. Tom Thumb and lady arrived at the residence of the Bride's Father in Middleboro', on Wednesday last, which was the occasion of great excitement in that vicinity. People flocked from miles around, and the General and his wife were besieged as never before were an otherwise happy couple. Amid the drenching rain of Sunday there was no peace or rest for them, until the hero actually took his bed and refused longer to be exhibited. On Monday the grand reception took place, when cards and cake were distributed to the multitude of invited guests. There was a general turn out and the roads were lined with carriages, reminding one of a general muster. Everything was conducted in the most agreeable as well as recherche style, and the large party retired well pleased.

PERSONAL. Captain B. F. Pratt of Weymouth, of the 35th Massachusetts, arrived in Boston on Wednesday last, direct from Fortress Monroe and Newport News, and will return next week. The regiment musters 426 effective men, and are now in command of Colonel Carruth, who arrived out 23d February.

DEATH OF AN HISTORICAL WRITER. Mr. William S. Russell, a prominent citizen of Plymouth, and well known in different portions of the country for his chronicles of the old town and its traditions, died on the 18th ult.

A NEW BATCH OF OFFICERS TO BE CREATED. The Bill authorizing the President to add forty Major-Generals and seventy-five Brigadier Generals to the army has passed, and will largely increase the business of the Senate. The appointments have all been sent in, and differ from former batches of this kind, inasmuch as it includes the names of many officers who have seen service and deserve promotion, and are not untried civilians as heretofore.

The extra Session will be composed of Senators belonging to the new Congress—the Thirty-Eighth.

RETAIL PRICES. The Boston Traveller, in comparing the present retail prices in that city with those one year ago, says that the prices of meats have not increased. Butter and cheese are higher, owing to the large demand for export. Nearly all kinds of groceries are much higher—sugar about 3 1-2 cents per pound; molasses, 5 cents per gallon; tea, about 30 cents per pound; coffee, 12. Indian meal and oat meal have not changed materially. Flour is $2 1-2 per bbl higher. Spices are about 25 per cent. higher; raisins and figs, 50 per cent. higher. Tobacco has risen from 60 cents per pound to $1.30. Brandy has gone up 25 per cent.; ale, do.; gin, about 75 per cent.; alcohol, from 62 1-2 cents to $1; wine, about 72 cents per gallon. Oils are considerably higher.

A SMALL SPECULATION. Gov. Andrew sent Hon. F. B. Crowninshield, of Boston, to Europe, in the spring of 1861, to buy guns for Massachusetts. He was gone four months, and purchased arms to the amount of $350 000. The Governor offered him $2882 for his services and expences, but he demands a commission of 2 1 2 per cent. which amounts to 6189.—Exchange.

INTERNAL REVENUE. It is stated that the receipts of the government from the internal revenue now amount to thirty millions. As these receipts are in addition to the regular receipts from customs and are likely to treble the income of the government, the effect upon public securities must be important.

The Post Office Reform Bill.

This bill, which has passed the House, gives all the appointments where the compensation is $1 000 and under to the Postmaster General. The Post office compensations are divided into five classes, of four, three, two, and one thousand dollar salaries. All fees and perquisites are abolished. Postages must be prepaid on letters, transient printed matter, seeds, cuttings, roots, pamphlets, books, manuscripts, proof sheets, samples, &c, &c: upon all papers and periodicals published less frequently than once a week, (this last clause to take effect July 1, 1864)

Letter postage shall be 3 cents for all distances in the country for each half ounce or fraction of a half ounce.

Drop letters, not sent by mail, two cents, always to be prepaid by stamps, but no carrier's fee shall be paid for letters received or delivered.

Double rates are imposed on matter not prepaid. For publications issued once a week, five cents; twice a week, ten cents; three times a week, fifteen cents; six times a week, thirty cents; seven times a week, thirty-five cents; and in that proportion, adding one rate for each issue more frequent than once a week. For weight exceeding four ounces, and not exceeding eight ounces an additional rate shall be charged. For the greater security of valuable letters posted for transmission in U. S. mails, the Postmaster General is authorised to establish a plan for the registry of letters.

The bill contains an important provision authorizing soldiers in camp and hospital to send and receive letters free of postage.

The loss to the government from foreign postage is so great that the Senate recently passed a bill giving the Postmaster General authority to make rules governing it in future, whereupon the department will demand that it must be paid in coin.

CROCKERY. Many of our readers, when about to purchase a large supply of any article, think it wise and profitable to go to the city—particularly so for Crockery, China or Glass ware; for this reason we take pleasure in calling their attention to an excellent assortment at E. B. Mason's, No. 33 Hanover street, Boston. This is an old stand, and the name of the proprietor is undoubtedly familiar to most of our readers. His stock is large and well selected and of that quality that gives continued satisfaction to purchasers. Don't forget—33 Hanover street.

BANKS PAYING SPECIE. The Southwark Bank of Philadelphia pays specie for all the notes of that bank presented at the counter. By the redemption of its circulation, the Southwark will avoid the payment of a large tax, and this is in part the cause of the determination to call in the circulation. There are four banks in Pennsylvania that are now paying specie.

CITY SCUM. Among the diseased edibles confiscated by the City Inspector of New York week before last, were 550 pounds of beef, 200 of veal, 1000 of mutton, 1700 of fish, 250 of poultry, 170 of pork, 550 of tripe, 330 of sausages, and 200 eggs.

SKEDADDLERS. The statistics of Canada show that the number of skedaddlers from the United States who became frightened at the prospect of a draft, numbered 1942. These persons took with them an average of $1,000 each in American silver, making an aggregate of nearly $2 000,000.

SLY ROGUES. Mr. J. S. Taylor of Lynn, who had for some time missed postal currency and bank bills from his money drawer, and had tried various means to detect the thief, a few evenings since discovered that his "circulating medium" had been abstracted by roguish mice to make them a warm nest beneath his ice chest. Over $20 worth in a good state of preservation was found there, besides a good deal that had been destroyed.

THE CONSCRIPTION BILL. Even in the passage of this Bill by Congress, it is said there will be no conscription in New England until the delinquent States have furnished their full quotas. The first call will be made upon those States, and New York and Pennsylvania alone are deficient seventy-five thousand men.

AN INCIDENT OF TRADE. A few weeks since a merchant of Boston, bought a thousand barrels of alcohol for shipment to a foreign port, and had it put on board a vessel for that purpose, but meantime the market price of the article had rapidly risen, in anticipation of a further rise in the excise duty, and the purchaser soon ascertained that he could make more money by reselling in this market than in sending his venture abroad. The alcohol was accordingly discharged from the vessel and resold, the merchant making about $5000 by the transaction.

A SIX CENT MARRIAGE. A Mr. Stokes of Trenton lately sued Judge Nar of the True American, for damages, for having put his marriage among the deaths. Although the editor offered to make it all right by putting Stokes' death in among the marriages, the indignant Benedict would not accept the amende honorable. Damage six cents.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

A portion of Lower California is now covered with a luxuriant growth of wild cotton.

Two brothers have returned from the war to Newburyport, Mass., each with a leg amputated.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society is about to erect a new hall in Boston for its better accommodation.

The next flax crop will be the largest ever grown in this country, and we doubt not the most profitable one. Flaxseed is everywhere increasing in price on account of the great demand for sowing.

Umbrellas are property! The amended internal revenue law provides that they be taxed three per cent.

Nickles and coppers are now worth 16 per cent. premium. It is thought bank bills will follow.

New potatoes have appeared in the markets of Louisville, Ky.

Gen. Hooker has arrested thirty deserters, had them tried by court-martial, and sentenced to be shot. It is believed he will enforce the sentence.

Commissioner Boutwell has decided that certificates given by clerks of cities and towns, relative to the burial of the dead (Chap 21. Sec. 4. of General Statutes) must have the revenue stamp of ten cents affixed.

The order requiring the payment of postage in coin on letters received from abroad has been suspended. The order and the suspension both came from the General Post Office.

Paper collars have advanced from 25 cents to 40 cents per dozen.

The copper shoe-tips, now so extensively used for children's shoes, are manufactured at Lewiston, Maine. Three million pair of tips are turned out annually at the factory.

In France every steam boiler is required by law to be furnished with a safety plug of fusible metal. It is composed of tin, 3 parts; lead, 2; bismuth, 4.

There is no doubt but the Harriet Lane is shut in at Galveston. She has been taken up one of the rivers, and the rebels, it is believed, are making her an iron clad.

Letters from Matamoras, dated Jan. 25, give the information that flour is selling on the Nueces river at one hundred and thirty dollars, per barrel, and corn at twelve dollars a bushel.

Rebels captured in North Carolina recently were well shod with stout English shoes, and were provided with ammunition of an excellent quality.

An officer writes from the Army of the Potomac that most of the croakers have been weeded out, and all that is now wanted is a week of fine weather.

Professor Horsford of Washington has demonstrated a plan by which the army can always be supplied with fresh bread.

A man by the name of Gregg, an officer, was recently dismissed from the army for fraudently getting his pay seven times over, and he contrived to get pay for a month or two after his dismissal.

About a dozen New Hampshire papers have been stopped in consequence of the pressure of the times.

The Tobacco market is greatly disturbed, and likely to undergo a paper panic. Prices are rapidly advancing, and the Connecticut and Massachusetts farmers are making a good thing of it from the New York buyers who are out in great force.

BURRITGTON'S — DR. WORRINGTON'S — Vegetable Croup Syrup. This Medicine is pronounced an infallible remedy for that distressing and dangerous complaint. We had occasion to try its efficacy, in an alarming case of this disease, in our family, a few nights since, and found it to give immediate relief. Mothers see to it. For sale by Mrs. Hayden, on Washington street.

AN OLD COIN. The editor of the New Bedford Standard lately found in an old drawer which had not been opened for years, a remarkable silver coin, which had on one side a head with the word "Liberty," surrounded by thirteen stars, and the date 1829. On the opposite was an eagle, with the motto "E Pluribus Unum," and the words "United States of America," and the figures "10c."

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES.

Doctor Cheeseman's Pills.

The combination of ingredients in these Pills are the result of a long and extensive practice. They are mild in their operation, and certain in correcting all irregularities, Painful Menstruations, removing all obstructions whether from cold or otherwise, headache, pain in the side, palpitation of the heart, whites, all nervous affections, hysterics, fatigue, pain in the back and limbs, &c., disturbed sleep, which arise from interruption of nature.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS

was the commencement of a new era in the treatment of those irregularities and obstructions which have consigned so many to a PREMATURE GRAVE. No female can enjoy good health unless she is regular, and whenever an obstruction takes place the general health begins to decline.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS.

are the most effectual remedy ever known for all complaints peculiar to Females. To all classes they are invaluable, inducing, with certainty, periodical regularity. They are known to thousands, who have used them at different periods, throughout the country, having the sanction of some of the most eminent Physicians in America.

Explicit directions, stating when they should not be used, with each Box—the Price One Dollar per Box, containing from 50 to 60 Pills.

Pills sent by mail, promptly, by remitting to the Proprietor. Sold by Druggists generally.

A Friend in Need Try it.

DR. SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LINIMENT is prepared from the recipe of Dr. Stephen Sweet, of Conn., the great bone setter, and has been used in his practice for the last twenty years with the most astonishing success. As an external remedy it is without a rival, and will alleviate pain more speedily than any other preparation. For all Rheumatic and Nervous Disorders it is truly infallible, and as a curative for Sores, Wounds, Sprains, Bruises, &c., its soothing, healing and powerful strengthening properties, excite the just wonder and astonishment of all who have given it a trial. Over four hundred certificates of remarkable cures, performed by it within the last two years, attest this fact.

TO
YOUNG MEN!
Just Published in a Sealed Envelope.
Price, - - Six Cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical Cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Emissions, Sexual Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally, Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c.—By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This Lecture will prove a boon to thousands.

Poetry.

For the Patriot

The Traitor's Reward.

BY F. M. ADLINGTON—WEYMOUTH.

Lines suggested by reading Jeff. Davis's speech in Mississippi—his kick at the Southern sympathizers, alias Northern traitors.

"An open foe may prove a curse,
But a pretended friend is worse."

Some of our pretended unionists appear to be afraid of hurting the feelings of our Northern secessionists, either by word or deed: but, like Buchanan, when the Southron rats were knawing at the throat of our fettered Eagle, patted them on their backs and cried: My dear fellows, I can't bear to hurt you, I have no constitutional right to do so; but don't bite so hard, now don't. Old Jeff gives the double traitors a kick—he understands them and serves them right.

That's right, Old Jeff, put in the licks,
They merit well the blows;
These knaves deserve more sturdy kicks,
Than fair and open foes.

You're right to keep them from your camps,
For where the rascals may,
They're sure to act like dirty scamps,
And ev'ry cause betray.

Kick off the fawners at your feet,
They've been the partial cause
Of all the ills we've had to meet;
Of all our broken laws.

They filled the South with foolish pride,
By flat'ring on their knees;
And now would with the traitors side,
Their Country's purse to squeeze.

So kick them Jeff, and kick them well,
And drive them to the wall;
The knaves who would their country sell,
Are common foes to all.

Tell Saulsbury and Villianham,
And all their sneaking crew,
You wouldn't give a Tinker's d—m,
For all that they can do.

Too mean to be companion's meet,
For e'en our rebel foes;
So spurn the rascals from your feet,
And pluck them by the nose.

And let them find no resting place,
In all the land of ours,
But wear the badge of foul disgrace,
Accursed by all the powers.

The Soldier's Boy.

I am a soldier's little boy,
My father's gone to fight
For liberties we here enjoy,
For honor, truth and right.
Full many a danger must he share,
In hunger, cold and wet;
But, worse than all he has to bear—
He must his own forget.
And leave his homeless little sons
To fare the best we can;
We miss him, but I'm glad he's gone,
I'd go were I a man.

For all should something do or dare,
To save a land so dear;
He'll do his part by fighting there,
We ours by suffering here;
Bearing our wants with patient heart,
And praying morn and night,
That God would bid our foes depart,
And justice speed, and right.
And when throughout the land the bell
Of liberty shall sound,
Our woes will seem too small to tell,
Our joys will so abound.

We shall not want, we need not fear;
There's many a patriot heart
Still left at home the gloom to cheer,
And strength and hope impart.
They may not offer up their lives,
With heroism true.
But they can help the soldiers' wives,
And soldiers' children too;
And this they do with full supply
From out their ample store;
God bless their kind, brave hearts, we cry,
And give them ten-fold more.

Anecdotes.

You see, grandmamma, we perforate an aperture in the apex, and a corresponding aperture in the base; and by applying the egg to the lips, and forcibly inhaling the breath, the shell is entirely discharged of its contents.

Bless my soul, cried the old lady, what wonderful improvements they do make! Now in my younger days, we just made a hole in each end, and sucked.

A little boy, running, stubbed his toe and fell on the pavement.

Never mind, my little fellow, said a bystander, you won't feel the pain to morrow.

Then, answered the little boy, I won't cry to-morrow.

Then I'll bring a suit for my bill! said an enraged tailor to a dandy, who refused to pay him.

Do, my dear fellow, replied the imperturbable swell, pointing to his threadbare clothes, a new suit is just what I want.

A boarder was seen to pick something out of a sausage he was eating.

What is it, Ben? asked a boarded sitting opposite.

A piece of bark, I believe, replied Ben.

Well, old fellow, it's my opinion you'd better not hunt any longer, or you might find a grout pretty soon.

THE ALL SUFFICIENT THREE
The Great "American Remedies,"
Known as "Helmbold's"
GENUINE PREPARATIONS, VIZ.:
HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT "BUCHU,"
" " SARSAPARILLA,
" IMPROVED ROSE WASH.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATION,
"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND
Fluid Extract Buchu,
A Positive and Specific Remedy
For Diseases of the
Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATERY OR CALCEROUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU
FOR WEAKNESSES
Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS,

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Dryness of the Skin,
Horror of Disease,	Trembling,
Dimness of Vision,	Wakefulness,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Pain in the Back,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
	Eruption of the Face,
	Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes soon follow
IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC FITS,
In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases,"

Insanity and Consumption.

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess. The records of the insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Females,

Old or young, single, married, or contemplating Marriage—in many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhea, or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the Decline or Change of Life.

No family should be without it.

Take no Balsam, Mercury, or Unpleasant Medicine for Unpleasant and Dangerous Diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU
CURES SECRET DISEASES
In all their stages; at little expense; little or no change of diet; no inconvenience, and no Exposure. It causes frequent desire, and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying pain and inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling POISONOUS, DISEASED, AND WORN-OUT MATTER.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the victim of Quacks, and who have paid Heavy Fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the Poison has, by the use of Powerful Astringents, been driven up in the system, to break out in aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage.

Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu

For all Affections and Diseases of
THE URINARY ORGANS,
Whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing.

BLOOD! BLOOD! BLOOD!
Helmbold's Highly Concentrated Compound
Fluid Extract Sarsaparilla Syphilis

This is an affection of the Blood, and attacks the Sexual Organs, Linings of the Nose, Ears, Throat, Windpipe, and other Mucus Surfaces, making its appearance in the form of Ulcers. Helmbold's Extract Sarsaparilla purifies the Blood, and removes all Scaly Eruptions of the Skin, giving to the Complexion a Clear and Healthy color. It being prepared expressly for this class of complaints, its Blood-Purifying Properties are preserved to a greater extent than any other preparation of Sarsaparilla.

Helmbold's Rose Wash.

An excellent Lotion for Diseases of a Syphilitic Nature, and as an injection in Diseases of the Urinary Organs, arising from habits of dissipation, used in connection with the Extracts Buchu and Sarsaparilla, in such diseases as recommended

Evidence of the most responsible and reliable character will accompany the medicines.

DR. LA CROIX'S
PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES
ON THE
Physiological View of Marriage.

250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, blushings, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c, &c. It is a truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.

YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATMENT.

We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled hpysicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the many NEW AND EFFICACIOUS REMIDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of professional Practice, for the past twenty-five years.

FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. De Laney's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box,) though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.

Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.

TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.

THE "ELECTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.

The SECRETS of YOUTH UNVEIL'D

A Treatise on the Cause of Premature Decay—A solemn warning. Just published, a book showing the insiduous progress and prevalence among schools, (both male and female,) of this fatal habit, pointing out the fatality that invariably attends its victims, and developing the whole progress of the disease, from the beginning to the end.

It will be sent by Mail on receipt of two [3] cent Stamps.

☞ Attendance daily from 8 in the morning till 9 at night, and on Sundays from 2 till 5 P. M.

Medicines with full directoins sent to any part of the United States or Canada, by patients communicating their symptoms by letter. Business correspondence strictly confidential.

American Hymn.

Who, when darkness gathered o'er us,
Foes and death on every side,
Clothed in glory walked before us,
Leading on like Israel's guide?
'Twas Jehovah! He appearing,
Showed his banner far and wide.

When the trump of war was sounding,
'Twas the Lord who took the field!
He, his people then surrounding,
Made the strong in battle yield.
To our fathers, few in number,
He was armor, strength and shield.

In the God of Armies trusting,
'Mid their weakness void of fear,
Soon they felt their bonds were bursting
Saw the dawning light appear.
Clouds dissolving in the sunbeams,
Showed the land of freedom near.

Hark! we hear to heaven ascending,
From the voices of the free,
Hallelujahs, sweetly blending
With the song of liberty.
Power Almighty! we the victory
Ever will ascribe to Thee.

The tree of deepest root is found
Least willing still to quit the ground:
'Twas therefore said by ancient sages,
That love of life increased with years
So much, that in our later stages,
When pains grow sharp, and sickness rages
The greatest love of life appears.

American Hymn.

Who, when darkness gathered o'er us,
Foes and death on every side,
Clothed in glory walked before us,
Leading on like Israel's guide?
'Twas Jehovah! He appearing,
Showed his banner far and wide.

When the trump of war was sounding,
'Twas the Lord who took the field!
He, his people then surrounding,
Made the strong in battle yield.
To our fathers, few in number,
He was armor, strength and shield.

In the God of Armies trusting.
'Mid their weakness void of fear,
Soon they felt their bonds were bursting—
Saw the dawning light appear.
Clouds dissolving in the sunbeams,
Showed the land of freedom near.

Hark! we hear to heaven ascending,
From the voices of the free,
Hallelujahs, sweetly blending
With the song of liberty.
Power Almighty! we the victory
Ever will ascribe to Thee.

Attachment to Life.

The tree of deepest root is found
Least willing still to quit the ground:
'Twas therefore said by ancient sages,
That love of life increased with years,
So much, that in our later stages,
When pains grow sharp, and sickness rages,
The greatest love of life appears.

Scraps.

GIPSY PUDDING. Cut stale sponge cake into thin slices, spread them with currant jelly, or preserves, put two pieces together, like sandwiches, and lay them in a dish. Make soft custard, pour it over the cake while hot; then let it cool before serving it.

DELICIOUS TOASTED CHEESE. Cut two ounces of cheese in thin slices, put it into a saucepan, set on a fire, and add one gill of fresh milk; simmer it till the cheese is quite dissolved, then take it from the fire, and pour into a shallow dish; when cooled a little, add the yolk of an egg well beaten. Then place it before the fire and brown it nicely.

Be not angry that you cannot make others as you wish them to be, since you cannot make yourself as you wish to be.

We must look downward as well as upward in human life. Though many may have passed you in the race, there are many you have left behind.

A man's house should be on the hill top of cheerfulness and serenity, so high that no shadows rest upon it, and where the morning comes so early, and the evening tarries so late, that the day has twice as many hours as those of other men.

Don't live in hopes with your arms folded; fortune smiles only upon those who roll up their sleeves, and put their shoulder to the wheel.

We may owe it to our enemies to forgive; we owe it to ourselves not to forget.

Nobody is more certain to be overreached than your sharp fellow. If nobody else overreaches him, he is sure to overreach himself.

At a late Woman's Rights Convention held in the East, a resolution was offered and laid over till the next meeting, that if justice was not done the ladies, and that soon, they would stop the population of the country.

Read not books alone, but men; and chiefly, be careful to read thyself.

Philosophers tell us that Nature never errs. They certainly cannot mean human nature.

Penetration seems a kind of inspiration; it gives one an idea of prophecy.

The prayer of deeds is oftener answered than the prayer of words.

A modern tourist calls the Niagara River "the pride of rivers." That pride certainly has a tremendous fall.

In Ohio, they divorce husband and wife, if either party snores so loud that the other can't sleep.

The common opinion is that we should take good care of children at all seasons of the year, but it is well enough in winter to let them slide.

Miscellaneous.

Written for the Patriot.

The Soldier's Return.

BY WILLIE F. GILCHREST, ESQ.
[Of the Waverly Magazine.]

A merry group were collected beneath the wide-spreading elms, engaged in a dozen different amusements; some playing "hunt the slipper," others strolling arm-in-arm—the whole forming one of those pleasant assemblies—a "picnic" party. The party consisted of some dozen couples—bright, winsome, pretty girls, and stout, generous hearted young men, who were enjoying themselves to their hearts' content. But the queen of the picnic party was Jennie Somers. Young, witty and beautiful, she formed a perfect picture for the painters' canvas as she sat there in the swing laughing loud and merrily. So thought Frank Meadow, as he sat gazing on her, his affianced bride.

Come, girls, exclaimed Carrie Stanley, lets have a game of "Copenhagen."

To this proposition, all agreed, and in a few moments all were enjoying the luxury of snatching "kisses."

Boys, keep a sharp look-out, Jennie Somers has not been kissed yet, cried Harry Blake.

That's because Frank Meadow has not been inside the rope, archly replied Carrie Stanley, with a seeming forgetfulness, which gave Harry the desired opportunity of kissing her.

In the midst of the sport, a stranger parted the brush-wood and stood in their midst, regarding the sport. He was a gentleman of twenty five, arrayed in a fanciful shooting costume, holding in his hand a prettily mounted gun. At his appearance, there was a visible commotion among the girls. Dresses were smoothed, curly locks re-arranged, and the sweetest smiles put on, for the stranger was quite handsome.

Excuse me, said the new-comer, in a singularly musical voice, I was in quest of game, and came unawares upon this merry party.

Will you not remain and join us? asked Harry Blake.

If I were sure you did not consider it an intrusion.

Not at all, came from the male part of the assembly—while: Oh, no, was uttered with one breath by the ladies.

Placing his gun against a tree, Andrew Laroque joined the group, mingling in all their sports with the greatest ease, although it was more than once remarked that Jennie Somers occupied a greater portion of his attention.

The shades of evening warned the revellers that it was time to return, and accordingly bundles and baskets were collected, and preparations made to return home.

May I not have the pleasure of seeing you safely home? asked Andrew Laroque, of the blushing Jennie.

Certainly, replied the young beauty, highly pleased at the preference shown her.

Arm in-arm, the whole party started for home, singing gaily, songs of glee. All did I say? No, there was one who remained behind, and that was Frank Meadow.

Months before the opening of our sketch, Frank Meadow had wooed and won pretty Jennie Somers, and report said they were soon to be wedded. On the morning of the picnic, Frank had accompanied Jennie, and his pride received a severe blow when he found that she was returning with another. He sat leaning against a tree, with bitter thoughts passing through his mind. The merry songs of the returning party fell upon his ear, and high and clear, above all the others, he could distinguish the voice of his betrothed, while another, which he knew to be the stranger's, was joined with it.

Sing on, false one; once you sang thus for me, muttered Frank. She does not love me. She prefers the stranger. I know I am not so finely clothed as he—but yet—

The choking sobs prevented further utterance, and ashamed of his weakness, he started to his feet.

Let her go, he said, as he slowly wended his way to the village.

Although Jennie Somers loved, truly loved, Frank, yet the musical voice of Andrew Laroque for awhile charmed her, and she entirely forgot her lover.

Why, where is Frank? was her enquiry, as she stood at the gate, bidding her companions "good night."

No one had seen him, and Jennie's brow became clouded as she remembered her cruel neglect. She turned quickly to avoid betraying her tears, and abruptly entered the house, without even inviting Andrew Laroque to enter—much to the latter's chagrin.

Come, Frank, exclaimed a young man, we need one more to complete our company, and we start in the morning.

These words were uttered on the piazza of the village tavern, as Frank Meadow passed on his way home from the picnic party. The speaker was a recruiting agent.

The next moment the name of Frank Meadow was enrolled among the defenders of the Union; he had enlisted for three years or the war.

On the morrow, the news spread abroad, and it fell like a thunder-bolt on Jennie. She bitterly regreted her foolish pride, her preference for the stranger. She despatched a note to her lover, begging forgiveness, and asking an interview. It was in vain. Frank Meadow had made up his mind. He returned the answer that he could no longer put faith in her promises, but if she remained true until his return, he would forget and forgive. Two hours afterward she beheld him, with his comrades, marching away to join the army.

Would she be true? Sooner would the magnetic needle lose its mystic power, than she would alter. It was in vain Andrew Laroque sought an interview. She denied him admittance, and henceforward remained in seclusion.

The sanguinary battle of Antietam had been fought, and all over the land was heard notes of mourning. With eager, anxious eye, Jennie scanned the list of killed. Thank God, his name was not there; but lower down the page, among the wounded, appeared the name: "Frank Meadow, arm shattered."

Would he live? Such was the question that kept continually rising in Jennie's brain. It was a season of trial to the young girl, and she knew she was reaping the fruits of her foolish pride. Weeks passed; they seemed like years to Jennie; and then came the gratifying intelligence that Frank Meadow was coming home.

He came at last, pale and emaciated; but what seemed like a Heaven-sent boon to Jennie, alive.

She came softly into the room where he was sitting, and stood before him.

Can you forgive me, Frank?

It needed no answer to assure her that she was forgiven—and the next moment her head was pillowed on the soldier's breast.

Can you love a man with but one arm, Jennie? asked Frank, lifting up the shattered remnant.

A smile of love was the answer.

They were wedded soon after, and despite the loss of his arm, Frank made a handsome bridegroom. Jennie had learned a bitter lesson, and its teachings were never forgotten. Henceforth pride was laid aside, and love ruled supreme.

Leaving them in their happiness, we say, ADIEU.

Rambles Abroad.

LEAVES FROM A TOURIST'S JOURNAL—NO. 10.

Germany—its Language and Scenery: Voyage to Ireland: Return to America.

As you enter the German frontier towns, the smooth, French language, gives place to the rough, sibilant, jawbreaking dialect of the Teutonic race. Groups of lazy loafers appeared at the station houses, with long pipes dangling from their mouths, and enveloped in clouds of tobacco smoke of villainous odor. When shall our earth be rid of this loathsome plague of tobacco? Would that there were a George Trask in every town to cry aloud and spare not till this slovenly and abominable custom is utterly and forever banished—at least from respectable society.

Rhein-Dampfschifffahrt was the short and euphonious heading of our ticket to Coblentz, which we purchased in the old city of Cologne. We made now our third change in currency, using thalers, groschen and sieber groschen, instead of French or English money. Everything about us reminded us that we were "strangers and foreigners" there. I made but few attempts at conversation in German, and was fortunate enough to find English or French hotels. The knowledge of six or eight languages which a student gains in the University, is of but little use to him in conversation, unless he enjoys the opportunity of daily practice in speaking as well as in reading.

Of the beauties of Rhineland I will not speak in detail. Of those vine-clad and castle-crowned hills; those ancient churches in the midst of smiling villages; those odd looking windmills and curious specimens of architecture, and the numberless legends and ballads told of them—of all these, too many have already written. I should be but a gleaner after gleaners to write of Cologne and Coblentz, of Rolandseck and Ehrenbreitstein, with other scenes of interest on which our eyes had feasted. To tell the truth, when I had seen the Rhine, the Mecca, and Ultima Thule of our pilgrimage, my heart longed to get home. My young friend, too, who travelled with me, was quite ready to return to his counting-room again. By the way of Paris and Dieppe we returned to England the same day that her Majesty went to France. We were glad to escape the crowd, excitement and expense which would have attended a longer stay. A room for the night then cost five dollars; windows on the Boulevards along which she passed were sixty dollars, and even a seat was eight dollars. To crown it all, it was so dark when Victoria arrived that there was a difficulty in distinguishing the crowned heads from other kinds of heads. In some instances the crowd were chagrined and mortified when they discovered that they had been cheering subalterns instead of sovereigns.

The few days remaining before the Africa sailed were improved in making a flying visit to the Emerald Isle. Among the letters of introduction with which I was supplied—more indeed than could be used—was one to Rev. Dr. King of Dublin, the well-known Irish philanthropist. We reached the city after a short voyage of twelve hours by steamer.

Here we remained one Sabbath and the two days following, but not extending our rambles very far into the interior. Enough was seen, however, to impress our minds favorably of the place and people. There is much of culture and refinement in Dublin, mingled with that which is sickening and loathsome. Sackville Street, the Four Courts and Phenix Park invite the eye of the stranger, while on the other hand, the neighborhood of St. Patrick's Cathedral, on the score of filthiness, puts the Five Points of New York city—and even the Cow Gate of Edinboro' into the shade. Yet after all, we saw the most favorable part of Ireland. During the famine, as we learned at Dr. King's, the southern districts exhibited scenes of unparalleled distress. As he went from cabin to cabin, carrying provisions to each door, he often found the inmates too exhausted to answer his knock. Entering unbidden, two or three fainting, dying wretches would be seen extended on the floor, while perhaps in a corner were the unburied corpses of other members of the family, with only a little straw over their emaciated remains. Others who had come to town from villages to obtain food, fell exhausted and died in the street. Well does Charlotte Elizabeth call this fair, but down-trodden land, the

"Ruthless sepulchre of all
That weeping memory can recall
Of buried gladness."

It was a bright, September morning, when we bade our friends adieu at Liverpool and set sail for home. Sabbath afternoon, twenty-four hours from port, we lost sight of the shores of the Old World; the next week on Monday we came in sight of the shores of the New—only eight days out of sight of land. The following Wednesday morning we were delighted by beholding again the coast of Massachusetts. All was bustle now. Sea-clothes were replaced by new attire; the passengers' luggage hoisted from the hold; the ship's rigging and furniture put in order, and the guns loaded for a salute.—While at breakfast the pilot boarded us, and we made the welkin ring as we passed the forts and steamed up the bay, amid a number of vessels and pleasure yachts, whose snowy sails reflected the bright sunlight. As the spires and domes of the city, the monument and other familiar objects came in sight, we experienced emotions never before realized. We could understand those lines of Scott, in all their fulness:

"Breathes there the man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land?
Whose heart has ne'er within him burned
As home his footsteps he hath turned
From wanderings on a foreign strand?"

Five bells sounded—half past ten o'clock. The steamer touched the wharf! Warm, beating hearts, and eyes brimful of joy greeted us. Our journey was done. Ten thousand miles of travel seemed but a dream!

For the Patriot.

Noble Words.

The Sons of the old Granite State now in the field, have sent home an appeal which every patriot should seriously heed. We do not realize as they, the danger to which our Union is exposed from enemies in the rear. Read these noble words:

"The terrible realities of the hour demand unanimity of sentiment and of effort, and whatsoever tends to divide opinion or diminish zeal, must dishearten our armies and encourage our foes. There is a solemn warning in the illumination of Southern cities and the dull thunder of the two hundred guns that encircle Charleston harbor after the receipt of the news of the fall elections in the Northern and Western States.

"To rebel authorities those elections indicated a revulsion of public feeling in the North.

"They reasoned, and justly, too, that division in the counsels of their enemy would prove their strongest ally. On this, more than on victories in the field, have the rebel leaders relied from the commencement of the war. It was logical, then, that opposition to the Administration, on account of its method of dealing with defiant treason, should thrill the heart of rebeldom with joy, and nerve them to a more desperate resistance, and whatsoever of discouragement exists in our armies to-day, is the result, not so much of unsuccessful battles and disastrous campaigns—for our soldiers are as ready to-day as ever to encounter the foe—as of the coldness and open hostility to our cause on the part of Northern sympathizers with secession.

"It is no time to make issue upon the method of suppressing the rebellion. Discussion here is dangerous. When a ship is sinking her only safety is an implicit and unquestioning obedience to the commands of her captain. To cavil then, consigns both officers and crew to a watery grave. Those who profess themselves fastidious about the means of defeating the rebels, justly create a suspicion of their honesty in wishing them defeated at all. The primal object is the preservation of the Union. To accomplish this, let us accept the chosen plans of the Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy, and when the Union shall have become an accomplished fact, we can call our rulers to account for any misuse of power.

"But so long as great national peril impends, while war exists, while great armies are marshaled in the field, and the Government is straining every nerve to avert a final catastrophe, common sense teaches that the conduct of factious citizens at the North, whether combined in party organization or as individuals giving utterance to a fault-finding spirit, is monstrous treason.

"The memories of our many battle-fields, drenched with the blood of our noble slain, the sufferings and hardships of those who still survive, ready in defence of our beloved country to obey the soldier's summons to the deadly strife, plead trumpet tongued against the deep damnation of these Northern traitors. Our army has a claim upon the moral support of every man who remains at home, and that support will be most rigorously exacted. AMEN.

Management of Children.

It is a popular behest with mothers, that washing your children daily in cold water makes them hardy. This is a grave mistake; the feeble circulation of some children requires the aid and assistance of warm water and warm clothing. The greatest medical man who ever lived—John Hunter—recommended three rules for the management of children, and they expressed the substance of a volume: He says, "Give them plenty of milk, plenty of sleep, and plenty of flannel.

Selling a Watch.

Paddy, honey, is it you that will buy my watch?

And is it about selling your watch ye are, Mike?

Troth it is, darlin.

What's the price?

Ten shillings, and a mutchkin of the creature.

Is the watch a dacent one?

Sure and I've had it twenty years, and it never once desaved me.

Well, here's your tin; now tell me does it go well?

Bedad, and it goes faster than any watch in Connaught, Munster, Ulster, or Lienster, not barring Dublin.

Bad luck to ye, Mike, you have taken me in; didn't you say it never desaved you?

Sure and I did—nor did it—for I never depended on it.

Who is Old.

A wise man will never rust out. As long as he can move and breathe, he will do something for himself, his neighbor, or for posterity. Almost to the last hour of his life Washington was at work. So were Franklin and Young, and Howard and Newton. The vigor of their lives never decayed. No rust marred their spirits. It is a foolish idea, to suppose that we must lie down and die because we are old. Who are old? Not the man of energy; nor the day-laborer in science, art or benevolence; but he only who suffers his energies to waste away, and the springs of life to become motionless; on whose hands the hours drag heavily, to whom all things wear the garb of gloom.

Sailors and Temperance.

An officer of our navy tells a good anecdote of a couple of tars, one of whom was strictly temperate, while the other never missed his grog under any circumstances.—For some little misdemeanor the latter was sentenced to have his grog stopped for ten days—the most cruel punishment, probably, that could have been inflicted upon him.

Three days after the sentence expired, the temperance tar asked his comrade how he felt since his grog had been stopped.

Perfectly miserable, was the response.

But you will soon get over it.

Never, shiver my timbers, if ever I can beat to the windward of the bad feelings, I've had since they stopped my grog.

Yet your days will be lengthened, Jack, said the temperance tar, taking his comrade on a new track.

You're right there, for the days, since I have had nothing to drink, have been longer than a voyage round the world. Blast my eyes it seems as if there would be no end to them.

Restlessness at Night.

Sleeplessness in many cases is caused by nervous affections. Intense activity of the brain, over exertion, grief and other mental distractions also exert an influence over the body which prevents the nerves and muscles from relaxing sufficiently to produce that perfect quiescence of all its members necessary to healthful slumber. Various remedies have been proposed for it. The late Washington Irving was in the habit of getting up when afflicted with this malady, and either shaving himself or else slowly pacing up and down his room until nature was overtaxed and demanded rest. Artificial remedies, such as drugs, generally react upon the system, and much injury results from their employment. We have found a most efficacious cure in our own case to be the application of cold water to the body; beginning at the small of the back and continuing to bathe it and the legs until a healthful glow and reaction is produced. In the winter or summer this plan is decidedly agreeable and has the merit of simplicity at least. The blood which was sluggish in its circulation is stimulated naturally, and no relaxation is perceptible, as is the case with stimulants or narcotics of any kind. People of nervous temperaments know what intense suffering results from the want of sleep; and physicians and philosophers are also cognizant of the losses the world has sustained through bodily weakness and debility in great men, no matter what their profession may be. Any remedy, therefore, that promises immunity from this disease will be truly an acquisition to the world at large.

Original Anecdote.

A set of Irishmen had made up their minds to leave the "Old Sod," and wend their way to Ameriky. They were five in number—two Paddies, one Murphy, one Dennie, and one Teague. It so happened that the vessel they were going in could take only four of them.

At length honest Teague exclaimed:—Arrah! I have it. We'll cast lots to see who shall remain.

But one of the Paddies swore that it was not jonteel to do that thing.

You know, Teague, said he, that I am an arithmetician, and I can work it out by rule of substraction, which is a great deal better. But you must all agree to "bide by the figures."

All having pledged themselves to do so, Pat proceeded:

Well, then, take Paddy from Paddy you can't—but take Dennis from Murphy, and Teague remains.

By my soul, Teague, my jewel, and it's you that can't go.

The Language of the Eye.

The language of the eye is very hard to counterfeit. You can read in the eyes of your companion, while you talk, whether your argument hits him, though his tongue will not confess it. There is a look by which a man shows he is going to say a good thing, and a look when he has said it. Vain and forgotten are all the fine offices of hospitality, if there be no holiday in the eye. How many furtive invitations are avowed by the eye, though dissembled by the lips. A man comes away from a company; he has heard no important remark, but if in sympathy with the society, he is innocent of such a stream of life as has been flowing to him through the eye. There are eyes which give no more admission into them than blue berries. Others are liquid, and deep wells that men might fall into. And others are oppressive and devouring and take too much notice. There are asking eyes, and asserting eyes, and prowling eyes, and eyes full of faith—some of good and some of sinister omen.—Emerson.

Decidedly Cool.

An Arkansas volunteer in the Mexican war, riding on horseback, came across an Illinoisian who was shot in the leg. The Illinoisian told him he was wounded, and asked to be taken up and conveyed out of danger. Arkansas placed him on behind his saddle, and fastened him to himself with a leather strap. While they were hastening from danger, a grape shot took Illinois head off, but Arkansas thought he had only fainted from fatigue and pain. When a safe place was arrived at, he released his charge, and seeing his head was gone, exclaimed: "Well, these Illinoisians are the greatest liars. Here's a rascal with his head cut off, when he told me he was only shot in the leg. You can't believe a word these fellows say!"

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, March 14th, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

THE MERRY MUSIC OF THE SLEIGH BELL is again heard in our streets; the late storm furnished the material for quite decent sleighing—and our citizens are improving it as if they thought it might be their last chance. March is a blustering old fellow—a regular blow-hard; when he gets his Ebenezer up, there is no telling what he will do; he takes pleasure in squalls and in raising a breeze; on Sunday last he was as mad as a March hare; his pipe was pitched on a high key—and he blew a blast which chilled our fairest dreams, and carried them far back into winter. The scene on the following morning was entirely changed; a pale mantle covered the fair face of nature; the Horse Railroad was no where to be seen, but had buried deep beneath piles of drifted snow—which cost the proprietors days of anxious toil to exhume and brush up for future use. "Winter never rots in the skies," is a truism, that has an application at this time.

PERSONAL. We are gratified to learn that Mr. John B. Bass, who still remains a sufferer at the Massachusetts General Hospital from wounds received in the service of his country, although very low, has shown symptoms of improvement, and hopes are now entertained of his recovery.

TO RETURN. Captain Benj F. Meservey, of Co. K. 18th Mass. Regiment, returns to his command on Monday next. He has been recruiting his health for a few weeks, and from appearances has been very successful, and now looks quite robust.

18TH REGIMENT. Those wishing to send packages of eatables to their friends in the 18th Regiment, can do so, by sending their articles to the Lyceum Room, between twelve and four o'clock this afternoon.

SURPRISE PARTY. The Quincy Brass Band was very agreeably surprised at Mechanic's Hall on Monday evening last, by their friends. A bountiful table was spread with the choice things of earth. Also a pretty sum of money was presented to aid them in procuring a new uniform.

THE NEW POSTAGE BILL. We learn from the United States Mail, which is considered good authority concerning such matters, that the regulations respecting soldier's letters remain the same as heretofore; that is, soldiers can send letters home without paying postage, but it will have to be paid by the receiver. Letters sent to the soldiers must in all cases be prepaid.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY on Tuesday next, the 17th, promises to be an occasion of genral observance, and to receive a true Irish welcome.

"RAMBLES ABROAD" on our outside are brought to a close this week. We are happy to say that we shall in the future occasionally hear from the same correspondent over the nom de plume "Harvard."

"THE SOLDIER'S RETURN." On another page will be found the first of a series of articles which we are promised by that ready writer and happy delineator of human character, WILLIE F. GILCHREST, ESQ., whose productions have so often enriched the columns of the "Waverly Magazine." The kind manner in which he saw fit to notice us, and the generous assurance, as opportunities offered, his pen shall be devoted to our service, are treits characteristic of genuine friendship, which we gratefully acknowledge—gleams of sunshine to illume our path, and cheer us on in the performance of the arduous duties of our calling. Mr. Gilchrest is at present with the army at North Carolina; a rich field to gather materials for an exciting romance or interesting story.

NEW HAMPSHIRE ELECTION. The returns are not all in yet; but sufficient have been received to show large Democratic gains on the popular vote, and the election of one Member of Congress There is probably no choice of Governor by the people.

BRIDGEWATER. The town of Bridgewater is still true to itself and to the country. At its annual town meeting, March 9th, it was voted, by a large majority, to pay to all the soldiers who have enlisted into the United States service from this town, for the term of three years, the sum of $160 each, with interest on the same from the time they were mustered into the service, provided they shall receive an honorable discharge. Several of them have already received the amount.

☞ 'THE SEVENTH LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN' by Rev. Mr. Thwing, will be delivered to-morrow afternoon. Services 2 1-4 o'clk.

Municipal Election in Weymouth.

We are indebted to the kindness of Mr. Francis Ambler, Town Clerk, for the following particulars relative to the result of the late election in that place.

BOSTON, MARCH 12, 1863.

THE NEWS.

There has been nothing very decisive in war matters since your last issue—no great battles. The army of the Potomac is represented in a healthy condition—cheerful—in good spirits and well fed. General Hooker is a great favorite with the soldiers. Satisfactory accounts also reach us of our troops in North and South Carolina; the note of preparation is apparent for a movement of great magnitude. General Banks at New Orleans needs more troops; patient, unrepining and firm as a rock, it has been the peculiar fortune of General Banks since the war to be placed in hazardous positions with a small army. He has great military qualities, and give him the means will do himself honor in any station, as he always has heretofore. He needs large reinforcements to win success on the Mississippi.

The extra session of the United States Senate has nearly expired. The President's nominations have generally been confirmed. Among the important appointments is the selection of Stephen J. Field as associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States—a large batch of military officers has been made, too numerous to mention names. President Lincoln issued a Proclamation on Tuesday, ordering that all soldiers enlisted or drafted into the service of the United States, now absent without leave, shall forthwith return to their respective regiments, including deserters; and the day of probation extends to April 1st, and no longer; after that the absentees will be arrested as deserters and punished as the law provides. This act of clemency to old deserters will doubtless induce many to return to their Regiments before a worse fate befalls them. There is a rumor in the streets here that the President will forthwith call out a large force, so as to keep up the army to a million of men. A large camp of instruction is to be formed somewhere for a hundred thousand men, probably near Washington. The President is urged under the new act to issue Letters of Marque immediately; on this question, his Cabinet, backed by Hon. Charles Sumner, is divided.

BUSINESS.

The quivering in the price of gold, has, contrary to expectation rather increased than lessened the current rates of staple goods. Many articles have gone up by the jump.—Provisions, produce and groceries are higher without any advance in the price of labor; a danger that the consumers in the end will find themselves starved out by speculators whose name may be legion. In consequence of the continued depredations of rebel privateers, freights here are inactive for American vessels, but as a whole, business is opening briskly for spring trade. The oscillations in the value of gold for the week past will not soon be forgotten. But unless we are greatly mistaken in the signs of the times, gold is soon destined to touch the point of one hundred per cent. premium over paper money—Mr. Chase's Loan and Banking Bill to the contrary notwithstanding.

LOCALS.

The snow storm of Saturday and Sunday has caused a general suspension of Horse Railroad travel, much to the public inconvenience, as we can hardly do without this great and safe mode of getting around the city and to its suburbs. Our streets are in a bad condition. Pedestrians are seen everywhere wading through mud, slosh and snow, much to their discomfort, to say nothing of the snow-slides from the roofs of houses and stores, endangering bodily harm to the luckless traveller. The sleighing is improved by the public generally. Large parties are out every day and evening to various places in this vicinity, and they are having "good times." War matters continue to be discussed here with animation, and often with acrimony by all circles. In the dreadful contest before us there is no neutral ground. The solemn duty of every patriot is plain. Stand by the Government through weal and wo, in all efforts to crush the rebellion by a vigorous and determined prosecution of the war, to the end that our National banner, the symbol of our priceless liberties, shall wave in triumph over every State, and the Union be restored as before, to the joy and happiness of every loyal heart. X.

"THE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE ADJUTANT GENERAL, of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts," a copy of which has come into our possession through the kindness of our Representative, Mr. Chamberlin. This will be found a useful work for future reference; here are enrolled the whole available force of the State in actual service, for the year ending December 31, 1862; the respective corps or division to which each man is attached, is designated; a list of the killed and wounded, are given, and a brief synopsis of the various battles fought, up to that time, faithfully recorded. On page 207, we find the following high compliment paid to the patriotism and bravery of Quincy soldiers:

"Lieutenants B F. Meservey, Charles F. Pray, E. W. Everson, L. S. Bent, were wounded on this field, (second battle of Bull Run) all of whom distinguished themselves by their good conduct and marked bravery."

The total number of laws passed by the late session of the thirty-seventh Congress was 173—public acts 94, private acts 35 and joint resolutions 44.

From the 42d Mass. Regiment.

NEW ORLEANS, FEB. 26th, 1863.

Dear Father and Mother:—Once more the Flag waves over my head. I suppose you are anxious to hear from me, and learn all the particulars. I wrote you several letters while at Galveston, Texas, before I was taken prisoner. I will now commence an account from the first of January.

On that morning, about four o'clock, our pickets were drove in—we had been expecting the gentlemen for some days, so we were all prepared for them. Lieut. Newcomb said there would be music before morning, and it was so. We were woke up in a hurry and ordered to: "Fall in, quickly, the rebels are on us." We were marched out of the building to the wharf, and had scarcely reached there, when bang went a cannon on our right, and still another on our front; the boys gave them several volleys in return, and then were ordered to fall flat on the wharf, and a signal was given to the gunboats, and they opened on the rebels. The rebels tried several times to charge on us, but they found we were ready for them. A great many of them were killed, and it seems a wonder that so few of us were hurt. The balls were flying in all directions; the shells were bursting over our heads; and the air, in fact, was full of rebel compliments. Frank L. Nott laid beside me, near the edge of the wharf, at the time he was shot. He rolled over and I thought he was changing his position, when he cried: "I am a dead man," and would have fallen off if we had not caught him. Seeing he was wounded we carried him farther on the wharf and placed him behind a post, where he remained until after the battle. One poor fellow had one of his legs taken off by a cannon ball, and the other partly.

At that time the battle raged the fiercest; the air was full of smoke—the booming of cannon, the bursting of shell, the sing of grape and canister, and Shapnel's musketry, the cries of the wounded, made it a time when if a man has any courage, he will show it. The Colonel speaks high of the men, and the rebels say we fought nobly. The officers were cool and determined, with the exception of one, whom I will not mention. Lieut T. H. Newcomb showed himself a brave officer, and those at home who think him a coward had better enlist and get under fire, and show themselves. The Colonel is the man for me. He was all over the wharf, and doing his duty, and no braver man lives, than Col. Burrell, of the 42d Regiment. The General he surrendered too told him, as he offered him his sword, that he could not take a sword from so brave a man.

The officers are all kept as prisoners, and will be, the rebels say, until Gen. Butler is given up to them.

Out of twenty-two Quincy boys, only one, Francis L. Nott, was mortally wounded, who soon died; and one, in the arm, George R. Derry. He stood it like a soldier and a man. At the time he was wounded, he said: "I am wounded, I guess," but did not give up. He was with us till after the battle was over, and then had his wound dressed.

At the end of the battle, we were taken prisoners and carried to Houston; where we were kept three weeks in prison. While there we lived first rate. We had fresh meat, beans, rice, sugar and corn bread. The bread was made of corn, corn cobs and husks ground together. I spent my time in eating, reading, smoking, sleeping, and in making rings. I was well contented, and grew real fleshy.

On the 22d of January we left Houston for Vicksburg. (Miss.) and rode in open cars forty-five miles in the rain, to a place called Beamont, on the Natchez river. The river was so high, we could go no farther in the cars. We stopped a week at this place, and then took a steamer and went down the river and up the Sabine as far as Borr Ferry. We stopped three or four days and then took up our line of march for Alexandria. We went over hills, and through swamps where the mud and water were over our knees, and at last arrived at Alexandria, tired and sore, after a march of 125 to 130 miles, in five days—without anything to eat except a piece of corn bread, three inches long, two in width, and one and a half inches thick. We went aboard a steamer here and cooked up some meat and corn dorge. After stopping about two weeks, we started for Baton Rogue, at which place we arrived on the 25th of February, after stopping one night at Fort Hudson. We left Baton Rouge soon after our arrival for New Orleans, where we are now staying.

Two of our boys died on the journey; and when we buried them, there were very few but shed tears. The rebels that guarded us, fired three volleys over them when buried; and played a dirge when we marched to the graves.

Oh, mother! I have thought of home! Nights as I lay sleeping, I have been woke up, by the sick crying in their delirium for mother, mother, mother! sister, sister! and with pain see them throw their arms about, trying to catch them. Some people think that a man becomes corrupt by going to war; it may be so with some, but I think it will make me better. I know it; I feel it.

From your affectionate son,

ALBERT A. HOLT.

OUR CORRESPONDENT, "Rambles Abroad," it will be seen by reference to another part of our paper, has, with the present number, brought his travels to a close. We have followed him in his journey with no small degree of interest, and been highly entertained by his lively and pleasing descriptions of the literary and historic relics of the Old World, and share mutually, with our readers, the regret, that we are thus early obliged to part company.

ACCIDENT. Last Monday noon, as an express team was coming from the depot, a son of Mr. John Curran ran against a rod of iron which projected from the wagon, inflicting a severe wound in his forehead. He was near Dr. Howard's house when hurt, and was taken in there, and thence home where Dr. Howard dressed the wound.—Randolph Adv

DISHONEST RAILROAD EMPLOYEES. The Poughkeepsie papers say that quite an excitement was created there recently by the arrest of six or seven of the baggagemen, expressmen, and brakemen on the Hudson River Railroad, on a charge of stealing and plundering the baggage of passengers. One of the party was caught in the act some time since, and exposed his accomplices.

ROBBERY. The store of Mr. J. E Nash of Randolph, was entered last Saturday night, and about fifty dollars' worth of goods stolen. His more valuable goods were safely secured and were not obtainable by the prowlers. The store was entered by removing a large pane of glass.—Randolph Advertiser.

THINGS WHICH MAY HAPPEN. An exchange says, should the issue of paper money increase as rapidly for the next six months as it has during the last twelve months, we may see a return of the time spoken of by old Dr. Witherspoon, one of the signers of the Declaration: "When creditors were seen running away from their debtors, and debtors pursuing them in triumph, and paying them without money."

THE IMPORTANCE OF ONE MILE. By constructing a canal about three-fourths of a mile in length, from Big Stone Lake Traver, steamboats from St. Paul could navigate both the Minnesota river and the Red river of the North to Lake Winnipeg a distance of seven hundred miles! The country traversed by these rivers is surpassingly fertile, and capable of sustaining a dense population. Lake Winnipeg, is larger than Lake Ontario, and receives the Sas-katch-a-wan river from the west. The Saskatchawan river is navigable to a point (Edmonton House) near the Rocky Mountains seven hundred miles west of Lake Winnipeg, and only one hundred and fifty miles east of the celebrated gold diggings on Frazer river, in British Columbia.

The digging of that one mile of canal, would, therefore, enable a steamboat at New Orleans to pass into Lake Winnipeg, and from thence to Edmonton House, some 3000 miles!

Probably in the world there cannot be found a spot across which the digging of so short a canal would effect a result so prodigious. And, what is almost equally remarkable, the ground between the two lakes is so low, and so level, that, it is said, the water flows in times of freshets from one to the other.

ESSENTIAL TO BUSINESS. Two things are essential to success in any business these days—that a man should have a good thing to sell, which the necessity or convenience of the public requires, and that he should make the fact as widely known as possible, and keep making it known. If this be done, success is sure to follow in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred. The man who is satisfied with a fair profit and an honest system of trade will find every expenditure for making his business known to bring sure and speedy returns.

☞ "He made a few desultory remarks," said the schoolmaster. Mrs. Partington stopped suddenly in the bustle she was making around the table for tea, and gazed over her specs thoughtfully at him. Leaning on a plate edgewise, as if to enforce her views by the support it gave her. "I suppose it was because he was weak," said she, "but AYER'S PILLS will cure him. I never knew 'em to fail.—They are very solitary in such cases."—"Really, madam," replied he, "I cannot guess your meaning." "You said dysentery," said she, laying down the plate and putting a spoon in the preserves. "I said desultory," said he, smiling, "quite a different thing." "No matter," said she, looking up in time to box Ike's ears, who was putting paper down the chimney of the kerosene lamp. "The Pills are good for both, I dare say, for they cure almost all the diseases in the cornucopia."

LUNCH There will be a free lunch at the Mariposa Saloon this evening.

A proclamation from the President for more troops is anticipated within the next ten days.

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES.

Doctor Cheeseman's Pills.

The combination of ingredients in these Pills are the result of a long and extensive practice. They are mild in their operation, and certain in correcting all irregularities, Painful Menstruations, removing all obstructions whether from cold or otherwise, headache, pain in the side, palpitation of the heart, whites, all nervous affections, hysterics, fatigue, pain in the back and limbs, &c., disturbed sleep, which arise from interruption of nature.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS

was the commencement of a new era in the treatment of those irregularities and obstructions which have consigned so many to A PREMATURE GRAVE. No female can enjoy good health unless she is regular, and whenever an obstruction takes place the general health begins to decline.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS.

are the most effectual remedy ever known for all complaints peculiar to Females. To all classes they are invaluable, inducing, with certainty, periodical regularity. They are known to thousands, who have used them at different periods, throughout the country, having the sanction of some of the most eminent Physicians in America.

Explicit directions, stating when they should not be used, with each Box—the Price One Dollar per Box, containing from 50 to 60 Pills.

Pills sent by mail, promptly, by remitting to the Proprietor. Sold by Druggists generally.

THE peculiar taint or infection which we call SCROFULA lurks in the constitutions of multitudes of men. It either produces or is produced by an enfeebled, vitiated state of the blood, wherein that fluid becomes incompetent to sustain the vital forces in their vigorous action, and leaves the system to fall into disorder and decay. The scrofulous contamination is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered digestion from unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin it is hereditary in the constitution, descending "from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation;" indeed, it seems to be the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children." The diseases which it originates take various names, according to the organs it attacks. In the lungs, Scrofula produces tubercles, and finally Consumption; in the glands, swellings which suppurate and become ulcerous sores; in the stomach and bowels, derangements which produce indigestion, dyspepsia, and liver complaints; on the skin, eruptive and cutaneous affections. These all having the same origin require the same remedy, viz. purification and invigoration of the blood. Purify the blood, and these dangerous distempers leave you. With feeble, foul, or corrupted blood, you cannot have health; with that "life of the flesh" healthy, you cannot have scrofulous disease.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

is compounded from the most effectual antidotes that medical science has discovered for this afflicting distemper, and for the cure of the disorders it entails. That it is far superior to any other remedy yet devised, is known by all who have given it a trial. That it does combine virtues truly extraordinary in their effect upon this class of complaints, is indisputably proven by the great multitude of publicly known and remarkable cures it has made of the following diseases: King's Evil or Glandular Swellings, Tumors, Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches and Sores, Erysipelas, Rose or St. Anthony's Fire, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Coughs from tuberculous deposits in the lungs, White Swellings, Debility, Dropsy, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Syphilis and Syphilitic Infections, Mercurial Diseases, Female Weaknesses, and, indeed, the whole series of complaints that arise from impurity of the blood. Minute reports of individual cases may be found in AYER'S AMERICAN ALMANAC, which is furnished to the druggists for gratuitous distribution, wherein may be learned the directions for its use, and some of the remarkable cures which it has made when all other remedies had failed to afford relief. Those cases are purposely taken from all sections of the country, in order that every reader may have access to some one who can speak to him of its benefits from personal experience. Scrofula depresses the vital energies and thus leaves its victims far more subject to disease and its fatal results than are healthy constitutions. Hence it tends to shorten, and does greatly shorten, the average duration of human life. The vast importance of these considerations has led us to spend years in perfecting a remedy which is adequate to its cure. This we now offer to the public under the name of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, although it is composed of ingredients, some of which exceed the best of Sarsaparilla in alterative power. By its aid you may protect yourself from the suffering and danger of these disorders. Purge out the foul corruptions that rot and fester in the blood; purge out the causes of disease, and vigorous health will follow. By its peculiar virtues this remedy stimulates the vital functions, and thus expels the distempers which lurk within the system or burst out on any part of it.

We know the public have been deceived by many compounds of Sarsaparilla, that promised much and did nothing; but they will neither be deceived nor disappointed in this. Its virtues have been proven by abundant trial, and there remains no question of its surpassing excellence for the cure of the afflicting diseases it is intended to reach. Although under the same name, it is a very different medicine from any other which has been before the people, and is far more effectual than any other which has ever been available to them.

AYER'S
CHERRY PECTORAL,
The World's Great Remedy for
Coughs, Colds, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

This has been so long used and so universally known, that we need do no more than assure the public that its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do all it has ever done.

To Horse Owners.

DR SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LINIMENT for Horses is unrivaled by any, in and all cases of Lameness, arising from Sprains, Bruises or Wrenching, its effect is magical and certain. Harness or Saddle Galls, Scratches, Mange, &c., it will also cure speedily. Spavin and Ringbone may be easily prevented and cured in their incipient stages, but confirmed cases are beyond the possibility of a radical cure. No case of the kind, however, is so desperate or hopeless but it may be alleviated by this Liniment, and its faithful application will always remove the Lameness, and enable the horse to travel with comparative ease.

Every horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for its timely use at the first appearance of Lameness will effectually prevent those formidable diseases mentioned, to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses nearly worthless.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical Cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Emissions, Sexual Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally, Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c.—By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This Lecture will prove a boon to thousands.

Poetry.

To the Flag of our Country.

Float high, thou ensign of the brave, o'er mountain, dale and sea,
And let no ruthless tongue or pen ere dare to slander thee;
Let not a single star which has thy folds of beauty graced,
By foes within or foes without be from thee e'er erased.

The enemies of Liberty their guilty hands may raise,
To dim the lustre of thy stars the glory of thy blaze;
But Arnold's black and fearful fate or Rome's loathed Cataline,
Will surely be the fate of those who touch a star of thine.

Thou art our glory and our strength, our nation's hope and pride,
For thee our fathers bravely fought, for thee they nobly died;
Through years of toil, through seas of blood, they marched to plant thee high,
That thy translucent orbs of gold might kiss the very sky.

Oh, symboled eagle of the skies! within thy talons hold
Most firmly this dear legacy, bequeathed by sires of old;
Let not its precious folds be torn from Freedom's lofty height,
Let not a single star go down in Treason's dismal night.

So long as time to us shall be—so long as earth shall live—
So long as sun, and moon, and stars their varied light shall give—
So long we'll guard thee, precious flag, thou Beacon of our Laws,
And die, if needs be, to maintain the Justice of thy cause.

And palsied ever be the tongue, accursed be the hand,
Which strives, by either word or act, our stately ship to strand;
Upon her deck have we embarked our highest hopes—our all;
And with her, bearer of our fates, we either rise or fall.

Dear, sainted WASHINGTON; and souls of all the good and great,
Still guide, with thy protecting arms, the good old Ship of State;
From traitors' rude and blood-stained grasp, its precious helm release,
And lend it safely back again to ancient ports of Peace.

And Thou, our Father and our Friend, stretch forth thy mighty hand;
Disperse the fiery waves of woe which surge our native land—
From off the Nation's sky roll back the fearful thunder-cloud,
Which wraps its brightest destinies in one funeral shroud;

And chastened thus by fire and sword, may we united rise
To those conditions where our souls thy gifts shall better prize;
To worship thee, with truer zeal, as Thou, oh God! shouldst be,
And bow before thy shrine of Truth, in soul and body free.

Label for Your Books.

If this be borrowed by a friend,
Right welcome shall he be,
To read, to copy—not to lend—
But to return to me.
Not that imparted knowledge doth
Diminish learning's store,
But books I find, if often lent,
Return to me no more;
Now slowly read, and often pause,
Think much, the book keep clean;
And when returned to me, let not
The folded leaves be seen.

Anecdotes.

An old soaker being found in the gutter one rainy night, the water making a clear breach over him from head to foot, was asked what he was doing there.

Oh, said he, I agreed to meet a man here.

John said a stingy old hunks to his hired man, John do you know how many pancakes you've eaten?

No, I don't.

Well you've eaten fourteen!

Yes, yes, replied John, you may count and I'll eat.

Speaking of doctors recalls Rabelais, who was very severe on his brethren in his last moments. He saw several of them consulting, and raising his head from his pillow, with a sad smile he said:

Dear gentlemen, let me die a natural death.

An Irishman called at our office one day, with an advertisement, and, like a prudent man, enquired what it would cost. He was informed that for one insertion the price would be seventy-five cents, and for two subsequent insertions twenty-five cents each.

An faith, said he, I'll only have the two subsequent insertions!

Jake, said an old farmer one day to his mower, do you know how many horns there are in a dilemma!

Well, no, not 'zactly, replied Jake, but I know how many there are in a quart of good Monongahela.

THE ALL SUFFICIENT THREE
The Great "American Remedies,"
Known as "Helmbold's"
GENUINE PREPARATIONS, VIZ.:
HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT "BUCHU,"
" " SARSAPARILLA,
" " IMPROVED ROSE WASH.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATION,
"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND
Fluid Extract Buchu,
A Positive and Specific Remedy
For Diseases of the
Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel and Dropsical Swellings.
This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATERY OR CALCEROUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU
FOR WEAKNESSES
Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.
ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Dryness of the Skin,
Horror of Disease,	Trembling,
Dimness of Vision,	Wakefulness,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Pain in the Back,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
	Eruption of the Face,
	Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes soon follow
IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC FITS,
In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases,"

Insanity and Consumption.
Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess. The records of the insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Females,
Old or young, single, married, or contemplating Marriage—in many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhea, or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the Decline or Change of Life.
No family should be without it.
Take no Balsam, Mercury, or Unpleasant Medicine for Unpleasant and Dangerous Diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU
CURES SECRET DISEASES
In all their stages; at little expense; little or no change of diet; no inconvenience, and no Exposure. It causes frequent desire, and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying pain and inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling POISONOUS, DISEASED, AND WORN-OUT MATTER.
Thousands upon Thousands who have been the victim of Quacks, and who have paid Heavy Fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the Poison has, by the use of Powerful Astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage.

Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu
For all Affections and Diseases of
THE URINARY ORGANS,
Whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing.

BLOOD! BLOOD! BLOOD!
Helmbold's Highly Concentrated Compound
Fluid Extract Sarsaparilla Syphilis
This is an affection of the Blood, and attacks the Sexual Organs, Linings of the Nose, Ears, Throat, Windpipe, and other Mucus Surfaces, making its appearance in the form of Ulcers. Helmbold's Extract Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and removes all Scaly Eruptions of the Skin, giving to the Complexion a Clear and Healthy color. It being prepared expressly for this class of complaints, its Blood-Purifying Properties are preserved to a greater extent than any other preparation of Sarsaparilla.

Helmbold's Rose Wash.
An excellent Lotion for Diseases of a Syphilitic Nature, and as an injection in Diseases of the Urinary Organs, arising from habits of dissipation, used in connection with the Extracts Buchu and Sarsaparilla, in such diseases as recommended
Evidence of the most responsible and reliable character will accompany the medicines.

U. S. MARSHAL'S OFFICE, New York, Nov. 6, 1861.
WM. GRAY, ESQ.: DEAR SIR—Two months ago, my head was almost bald, and the little hair I had was all grey, and falling out very fast, until I feared I should lose all. I commenced using your Hair Restorative, and it immediately stopped the hair falling off, and soon restored the color, and after using two bottles my head is completely covered with a healthy growth of hair, and of the same color it was in early manhood. I take great pleasure in recommending your excellent Hair Restorative, and you also may refer any doubting person to me.

DR. LA CROIX'S
PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES
ON THE
Physiological View of Marriage.
250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, blushings, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c, &c. It is a truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.
YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATMENT.
We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled hpysicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the many NEW AND EEFICACIOUS REMIDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of professional Practice, for the past twenty-five years.
FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. De Laney's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box,) though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.
Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.
TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.
THE "ELECTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.
The SECRETS of YOUTH UNVEIL'D
A Treatise on the Cause of Premature Decay—A solemn warning. Just published, a book showing the insidious progress and prevalence among schools, (both male and female,) of this fatal habit, pointing out the fatality that invariably attends its victims, and developing the whole progress of the disease, from the beginning to the end.
It will be sent by Mail on receipt of two [3] cent Stamps.
☞ Attendance daily from 8 in the morning till 9 at night, and on Sundays from 2 till 5 P M
Medicines with full directions sent to any part of the United States or Canada, by patients communicating their symptoms by letter. Business correspondence strictly confidential.

The Countrie Lassie.

She blossomed in the country,
Where sunny summer flings
Her arms around the earth,
And brightest blessings brings:
Health was her sole inheritance,
And grace her only dower;
I never dreamed the wild wood
Contained so sweet a flower.

Far distant from the city,
And inland from the sea,
My lassie bloomed in goodness,
As pure as pure could be.
She caught her dewy freshness
From hill and mountain bower,
I never dreamed the wild wood
Contained so sweet a flower.

The rainbow must have lent her
Some of its airy grace;
The wild rose parted with the blush,
That nestled on her face;
The sunbeams got entangled in
The long waves of her hair,
Or she had never grown to be
So modest and so fair.

The early birds have taught her
Their joyous matin song;
And some of their soft innocence,
She's been with them so long.
And for her now if need be,
I'd part with wealth and power;
I never dreamed the wild wood
Contained so sweet a flower.

The Countrie Lassie.

She blossomed in the country.
Where sunny summer flings
Her arms around the earth,
And brightest blessings brings:
Health was her sole inheritance,
And grace her only dower;
I never dreamed the wild wood
Contained so sweet a flower.

Far distant from the city,
And inland from the sea,
My lassie bloomed in goodness,
As pure as pure could be.
She caught her dewy freshness
From hill and mountain bower,
I never dreamed the wild wood
Contained so sweet a flower.

The rainbow must have lent her
Some of its airy grace;
The wild rose parted with the blush,
That nestled on her face;
The sunbeams got entangled in
The long waves of her hair,
Or she had never grown to be
So modest and so fair.

The early birds have taught her
Their joyous matin song;
And some of their soft innocence,
She's been with them so long.
And for her now if need be,
I'd part with wealth and power:
I never dreamed the wild wood
Contained so sweet a flower

RICE BUNS. Take a quarter of a pound of loaf sugar, and beat well with two eggs; then add one quarter of a pound of ground rice, and flavor with any essence preferred. Bake in drop tins.

PLUM PUDDING. Pound six crackers, soak them over night in milk enough to cover them, then add milk, four eggs, half pound of raisins, and spice with nutmeg, and sweeten with sugar and molasses. Bake two houre.

QUEEN'S CAKE. One pound of flour, one of sugar, eight ounces of butter, one pound of raisins, one gill of cream, one gill of brandy, one gill of wine, four eggs and one nutmeg.

What strange creatures girls are. Offer one of them good wages to work for you, and, ten chances to one, if the old woman can spare any of her girls—but just propose matrimony, and see if they don't jump at the chance of working a lifetime for their victuals and clothes.

Miscellaneous.

Female Courage.

A striking trait of courage in a lady forms the subject of the conversation at present in the French metropolis. Madame Aubry lives in a solitary chateau, not far from the town of ——. The family consisted only of Mr. Aubry, his wife, a child about a year old, and one maid-servant, In the little town, every light is out by ten o'clock, and of course the most perfect solitude reigns at that hour in their houses which lies off the road and is completely hidden by trees. One night last winter, Madame Aubry was sitting alone, reading. Her husband had left her in the morning to visit a friend some six or eight miles off, and, as he had expected to bring home a considerable sum of money, he had taken the unusual precaution of arming himself with a pair of pistols. At about six o'clock, the lady went up to her room to put her child to bed. Her apartment was a large room on the first floor, filled up on one side by an old fashioned chimney, and on the other by a deep and spacious alcove, near which stood her infant's cradle. The night was a gloomy one, cold and dark, and every now and then a dash of rain beat against the gothic windows. The trees in the gardens bowed to the wind, and their branches came sweeping against the casement; in short, it was a night in which the solitude of the mansion was more complete and melancholy than usual. Madame Aubry sat down on a low chair near the fire, which by its sudden light cast an uncertain light over the vast apartment, throwing its antique carvings and mouldings by turns into brighter relief or deeper shade. She had her child on her lap, and just finished preparing it for the cradle. She cast her eyes toward the alcove to see if the cradle was ready to receive its little occupant, whose eyes were already closed. Just then the fire flashed up brightly, and threw a strong light on the alcove, by which the lady distinguished a pair of feet, cased in heavy nailed shoes, peeping out under the curtain in front of the bed. A thousand thoughts passed through her mind in an instant. The person hidden there was a thief, perhaps an assassin—that was clear. She had no protection, no aid at hand. Her husband was not to return till eight at soonest, and it was now only half past six. What was to be done? She did not utter a single cry, nor even start on her seat. The servant girl would not have had such presence of mind. The robber probably meant to remain quiet where he was till midnight, and then seize the money her husband was to bring with him; but if he should find that he was discovered, and that there was no one in the house but two women, he would not fail to leave his hiding-place, and secure their silence by murdering them. Besides, might not the girl be the robber's accomplice! Several slight causes of suspicion occurred to her at once, and all these reflections passed through her mind in less time than we take to write them. She decided at once what she should do, which was to send the girl out of the room.

You know that dish my husband likes, said she, without betraying her alarm by the least change in the tones of her voice, I ought to have remembered to have got it ready for his supper. Go down stairs, and see about it at once.

Does not Madame require my help here, as she generally does?

No, no, I will attend to every thing myself. I know my husband would not be pleased, if he was to come home after his ride, in such bad weather, and not find a good supper ready.

After some delays, which increased in the lady's mind that suspicion she was forced to conceal, the girl left the room. The noise of her steps on the stairs died away gradually, and Madame Aubry was left alone with her child, with those two feet, motionless at their post, still peeping out under the curtain. She kept by the fire, with her child on her lap, continuing to caress it and sing to it, almost mechanically. The child cried: it wanted to be put to bed, but its cradle was near the alcove—near those dreadful feet, and how could she find courage to go near them! At last, she made a violent effort. Come, my child, said she, and got up. Hardly able to stand erect, she walked toward the alcove, close to the robber. She put the child in the cradle, singing it to sleep as usual. We may imagine, how much inclination she had to sing. When the child fell asleep, she left it, and resumed her seat by the fire. She did not dare to leave the room; it would arouse the suspicions of the robber, and the girl, probably his accomplice Besides, she could not bear the thought of leaving her child, even if it was to purchase her own safety. The clock pointed to seven. An hour yet, a whole hour, before her husband would come! Her eyes were fixed on those feet, which threatened her with death at any moment, with a sort of fascination. The deepest silence reigned in the room. The infant slept quietly. We do not know whether even an Amazon, in her place, would have been bold enough to try a struggle with the robber. Madame Aubry had no arms; besides, she made no claims to valor, but only to that passive courage, founded on reflections, which is far the rarer of the two. Every few minutes she would hear a noise in the garden. In that noise, a ray of hope shone on her for a moment—it was her husband—it was deliverance! But no—it was only the wind and rain, or the shutters creaking. What an age every minute seemed to be. Oh, heaven! the feet moved! Does the thief mean to leave his hiding-place! No. It was only a slight, probably involuntary movement, to ease himself by changing his position. The clock strikes—only once, it is the half hour only—and the clock is too fast besides! How much anguish, how many silent prayers in these trying minutes! She took up a book of devotion and tried to read, but her eyes would wander from the page to fix on those heavy shoes. All at once a thought arose that chilled her to the very heart. Suppose her husband should not come! The weather is stormy and he has relatives in the village he went to. Perhaps they have persuaded him it was unsafe to travel at night with so large a sum of money about him; perhaps they have forced him with friendly violence, to yield to their urgent invitation to wait till morning. It is striking eight—and nobody comes. The idea we have alluded to, appears to her more and more probable. After two hours of such agony the unhappy lady, whose courage had been kept up by the hope of final rescue, feels her strength and hope fail her. Soon she hears a noise under the window, and listens, doubtfully. This time she is not mistaken. The heavy outer-door creaks on its hinges, and shuts with clamor; a well known step is heard on the stairs, and a man enters—a tall, stout man. It is he! it is he! At that moment, if he had been the worst of husbands, he would have been perfection in his wife's eyes. He had only taken off his wet cloak and put away his pistols, and delighted at again seeing what he loves most on earth, opens his arms to embrace his wife. She clasps him convulsively, but in a moment, recovering her self possession, put her finger on his lips, and points to the two feet peeping out under the curtain.

If Mr. Aubry had been wanting in presence of mind, he would not have deserved to be the husband of such a woman. He made a slight gesture to show he understood her, and said aloud, "Excuse me, my dear, I left the money down stairs—I'll be back in two minutes." Within that time he returned, pistol in hand. He looks at the priming, walks to the alcove, stoops, and while the forefinger of his right hand is on the trigger, with the other hand, he seizes one of the feet, and cries in a voice of thunder, "Surrender or you're a dead man!" He drags by the feet into the middle of the room a man of most ill-favored aspect, crouching low to avoid the pistol which is held within an inch of his head. He confesses that the girl was his accomplice, and had told him Mr. Aubry would bring a large sum home that night. Nothing remains now, but to give them over to the authorities. Madame Aubry asked her husband to pardon them, but the voice of duty is louder than that of pity. When Mr. Aubry heard from his wife all she had gone through, he could only say, "Who would have thought you so courageous!" But in spite of her courage, she was attacked that night with a violent nervous fever, and did not get over her heroism for several days.

Making Paper and Cloth from Wood.

A Bill has been introduced into the New Jersey Legislature to incorporate a Fibre Disintegrating Company for making cloth and paper out of wood. The works are situated near Elizabeth. The process of manufacturing is thus described:

"The wood is placed in a large cylinder, or steam gun, from which it is thrown with such force by a charge of steam, as to separate every fibre from its fellow, the disintegration being rendered so complete that the fragmentary remnants would hardly be recognized as having ever belonged to a solid body. These fibres are readily made into paper and cloth.

All Want to be Beautiful

We all like to be beautiful—to be objects of admiration either in mind or person. But the most valuable and lasting beauty is that which is least cultivated—and this is the beauty which is born of amiability—of genuine goodness of heart. This is indeed Beauty herself, and she is ever a favorite. She never seems to grow old. The longer she is known the better she is loved. She is prepared with comfort for every emergency; and the heart that is once wedded to her is bound in a bond of everlasting bliss.

From the Army of the West.

MURFREESBORO, (TENN.) MAR. 3, 1863.

Dear Father: I will write you a few lines. I hope you will forgive me for not writing to you before. I have no excuse for not writing. I have been somewhat unwell this winter, but I am improving, and can do my duty now with the rest of the boys; and there is enough of it to do, I assure you. Forage for the teams is quite hard to get, and some distance from the camp. We have a little fuss with the rebels every time we go out; the chickens, pigs, turkeys, &c., have to suffer at such times, although we have strict orders not to take anything. We also have considerable picket duty to do, which is no fun, as the rebels are dashing around most of the time, (cavalry.) We have also been using the pick and shovel, fortifying the city; this last duty goes hard with the boys; if this is a nigger war, and there are a plenty of niggers here, why not set them digging?

We are making a sad looking country of this. We are encamped about three miles south of Murfreesboro; we burn the rails for miles around. There is also pretty good timber which we are destroying at a great rate. We live pretty well while in camp; plenty of bacon and crackers—some flour, and now and then we pinch a turkey or some chickens while foraging. On the march, we don't live so well. We had some terrible hard times last summer in Kentucky; water was very scarce, as well as victuals. When a man has to carry blanket and rubber, canteen, cartridge box and forty rounds of cartridges and gun, on a forced march of thirty miles a day, he requires good food and a plenty of it; on occasions like these we have often at night (nine or ten o'clock,) gone into camp so tired, as not to stop even to make our coffee, but lay right down and sleep until the horn sounded about two or three o'clock in the morning—and then only fifteen or twenty minutes were allowed us to cook our coffee, eat our crackers, and be ready for a start.

It has just commenced to snow, quite hard; we have had most miserable weather for the last six weeks—rain, rain, every day and night. I suppose we shall be after those infernal rebels soon We received orders yesterday to fill our haversacks, and be ready to march at a moment's notice. I don't care how soon we go. We are all sick and tired of such a life. And such news as we have been getting from the North is enough to discourage any man. I wish, (no, I don't wish it,) but if this army could forage a few days up there among those (copperheads I believe they call them) I reckon they would keep their mouths shut, if they didn't go to fight themselves.

I hope we shall not have to stop here another winter. I think this war has been going on long enough; some folks have made enough out of it. The commissioned officers and generals' pay are too high; they don't care how long this war lasts—the most of them I mean. We have the best General in the field; and we all have the greatest confidence in him. I expect we shall have a big muss, somewhere here soon. We don't know anything, and ain't allowed to know anything, (it seems so.) We are kept in darkness a little too much, I think. Why not tell the soldiers, when and where they are expecting to have a fight. I don't know but what it is right enough, but I can't see it.

It is getting dark and I must close.

From your affectionate son, FRANK.

When to cut Wood and Timber.

The durability of wood, all admit, is more or less influenced by the time of cutting, but all are not so well agreed when is the best time. Every farmer must have observed that rails in some instances remain entirely sound for many years, and that there seems but little difference in the durability of the sap and the heart wood. All becomes hard. The bark in time comes off but shows no decay or worm holes. In other instances the sap wood soon becomes rotten and abounds in worms, and the whole of the rail soon perishes. So of shingles. In some lots the sap will last well; in others the first shower will show a difference of appearance. The time to cut timber is in June, and when felled it should be left with the leaves and branches untouched for some time. The withering leaves and twigs will draw the sap out of the wood, and thus the timber will be ripened.

Pretty Babies.

They had a kind of semi-public baby show in "Pooduc" (Cape Elizabeth) recently, and the mothers were requested to decide which baby should have the prize as the smartest and handsomest. When the ships containing the votes were examined, it was found that each mother had voted her own the handsomest. Natural, very.

Historical Sketch.

OF THE

Evangelical Congregational Church, Quincy.

This Church was organized on the 16th of August, 1832. During the previous winter, a course of Religious Lectures had been established by a few friends of Christ belonging to different churches. The Town Hall was engaged for that purpose. Clergymen from Boston kindly gave their services. Rev. Dr. Lyman Beecher there preached the opening lecture from the text: "God is love."

Unexpectedly, this place of meeting was soon closed, and the friends of the movement were forced to repair to a small hall over the present Post Office. Here they resolved to continue the course of lectures, and, also, to make some provision for the regular maintenance of worship and the preaching of "Christ and him crucified." To this end a religious Society was formed April 5, 1832, although its proper legal organization did not take place till some time afterwards.

Rev. T. Field was the first laborer in the new enterprize The blessing of God followed his efforts. A Sabbath school, and other means of grace, were put in successful operation. It was during his ministry that the church was formed, and received the usual recognition by an Ecclesiastical Council, Aug. 16, 1832 Rev. Dr. Warren Fay preached from the words, "Be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." and administered the Sacrament assisted by Rev. Dr Jenks.

At the close of Mr. Field's labors, Rev. Stephen S. Smith was engaged for six months, during which time a church edifice was erected, "the upper chamber," over the Post Office, having been used two years. On the 20th of August, 1834, our present meeting-house was dedicated, and on the same day Rev. Wm. M. Cornell was installed as pastor of the church. He continued his labors until July 8, 1839, when, at his request, he was dismissed on account of long protracted feeble health.

Jan. 28, 1841, Rev. Wm. Allen was settled as pastor. During his ministry the meeting-house was enlarged by the addition of twenty pews, and other improvements in it were made. A generous and timely gift to the society of property amounting to $3 500 was made March 24, 1848, by Mrs. Lucy Marsh, (one of the original members of the church,) as a permanent fund for the maintenance of Trinitarian Congregational preaching. At his own request Rev. Mr. Allen was dismissed Aug. 28th, 1849.

His successor, Rev. Nelson Clark, was installed Jan. 2, 1850. During his pastorate, the Society, by means of a Fair—the avails of which were $600—was enabled to make still further improvements in their place of worship. Mr. C. was dismissed in 1859.

Rev. J. H. Thayer labored, as stated supply, for upwards of a year, and was followed by Rev. Oliver Brown, who continued his labors until April, 1862.

On the 28th of July last Rev. Edward P. Thwing, pastor of the St. Lawrence street Church, Portland, was invited by the parish to labor with us with a view to permanent settlement. Oct. 30, the church extended to him a unanimous call to become their pastor, which was accepted. The services of Installation took place on Wednesday, Nov. 19th. Rev. Dr. Kirk of Boston, preached the sermon, and the exercises thoughout were of a deeply interesting character. The present state, both of the church, Sabbath school and congregation, appears to be eminently prosperous, and in view of all the providential dealings which the history of the past unfolds, we may well say, "Ebenezer! hitherto hath the Lord helped us."—Church Manuel.

The New Conscription Law.

The following section shows fully the exempts under the new Conscription Law:

SECTION 2 "That the following persons be, and they are hereby excepted and exempt from the provisions of this act, and shall not be liable to military duty under the same—viz: Such as are rejected as physically or mentally unfit for the service; also the Vice-President of the United States, judges of the various courts of the United States, the heads of the various executive departments of the Government, and the governors of the several States; and, second, the only son liable to military duty of a widow dependent upon his labor for support; third, the only son of aged or infirm parents dependent upon his labor for support; fourth, where there are two or more sons of aged or infirm parents subject to draft, the father, or if he be dead, the mother may elect which son shall be exempt; fifth, the only brother of children not twelve years old, having neither father nor mother dependent upon his labor for support; sixth the father of motherless children under twelve years of age, dependent upon his labor for support; when there are a father and sons in the same family and household, and two are in the military service of the United States as non-commissoned officers, musicians or privates, the residue of such family and household, not exceeding two, shall be exempt; and no persons but such as are herein excepted shall be exempt; Provided, however, That no person who has been convicted of any felony shall be enrolled or permitted to serve in said forces.

Dressing with Taste.

It is strange that with all the time American women bestow upon dress, so few know how to prepare a simple toilette with taste. To be well dressed, means, with most, to wear rich material, made up in gorgeous style, and with all the usual accessories of lace and jewelry, to add to the magnificence of the general effect. Never was a greater mistake. To be well dressed is only to have attire suited to time, place and circumstances, made in a becoming manner. This attire may be a shilling calico or a silk, and yet in either if it is adapted to the conditions we have mentioned, a woman may be said to be well dressed. Where household duties have to be performed, and the care of children devolves partly upon the mistress of the house, a neat dress fitted gracefully to the figure is much better for morning wear than the faded remains of a more pretentious costume.—Nothing looks more forlorn than to see a would-be lady performing household offices, of not the most refined character, in an old torn or dirty silk dress, or a soiled and draggled open wrapper. One of the secrets of dressing well is to dress appropriately,—another to be careful of the details, the minutia of the toilette. Thorough personal cleanliness, glossy well-brushed hair, neat shoes and stockings, are as essential to a good personal appearance as the material and fashion of the dress. Indeed, a lady who is particular in these minor matters can hardly ever be said to be ill-dressed. As this delicate refinement will not only excuse faults, but naturally show itself in the good taste which will guide her selection, no matter how small the cost may be. Some persons have an extreme horror of being 'caught,' as they call it, in a morning dress. Why they should be so sensitive on this point, it is difficult to say. If it is clean, and adapted to the work in which they are engaged there is no shame in wearing, and, above all, it ought to be remembered that no attire is good enough for mere acquaintances who may chance to favor you with their society. It is much better than to be caught very much over-dressed, as some unlucky individuals are, at a small evening party.

In one case there is cause for the mortification, in the other there is none. Mothers should carefully impress this lesson upon their daughters. Many a young lady has lost an eligible match through the discovery that the belle of the evening was the slattern of the morning, and that she paid more attention to the number of her flounces than the cleanliness of her person, more care on the brilliancy of her head-dress than the condition of her hair.

A Toad with a Cover.

An Irishman who had been but a few months in the country, and in the employ of a gentleman in the suburbs, being sent with a note, with orders to make all possible haste, found a garden tortoise, which he picked up, supposing it to be a pocket book. Determined to be faithful to his errand, he did not stop to examine his supposed prize, but placed it in his pocket—a rich reward when his errand was finished. Before he reached home, the tortoise made its way nearly out of his pocket, but Patrick quietly re consigned it. On his arrival at the house he took it out, and to his great disappointment, but full of excitement, rushed wildly into the kitchen, exclaiming to the cook:

"Bessie! Bessie! did ye ever see a toad with a kiver?"

The Friendless.

It is remarkable how a single word, unaffectedly uttered, will sometimes reveal to us, more fully and strikingly than could many books, the deep and long experience of a human heart. Not long ago, a friend of ours invited a small party of orphan children from an asylum, to spend an hour of a Wednesday afternoon at his house. They manifested, each in a way that nature prompted or education allowed, the most eager delight.

It was evidently a rich treat to them in their lonely state. It would have done anybody's heart good to see and hear them. As he was distributing among them the contents of a basket of oranges, he chanced to hear one of the little girls say to a companion who was sitting at her side—

I know why Mr. —— has invited us to his house; it is because we haven't any friends; I haven't had a friend come to see me for five years!

Merciful heaven! Only twelve years old, and have not seen the face of one friend for five long years!

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, March 21st 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

QUINCY AVENUE. We learn from the Chairman of the Selectmen that the turnpike and streets leading from Neponset Bridge, Dorchester, to the Braintree line, including what were formerly called Neponset turnpike, Hancock street and Braintree turnpike, have been named Quincy Avenue, and guide boards erected at each end bearing said name.

CAPTAIN EDWARD A. SPEAR, of Company D, 39th Masssachusetts Regiment, arrived in town, on a short furlough, from the Army of the Potomac, on Saturday last. The Captain looked remarkably well—he was enjoying his usual good health, except a slight indisposition from a rheumatic complaint. His Regiment is encamped at Poolesville, Maryland. He represents the health of his Company as excellent—in fine spirits, waiting impatiently for marching orders. The winter he represents as having been very severe and trying for new recruits, but the return of spring has revived new hopes and more buoyant feelings. The Captain made but a short visit; he left yesterday for Washington.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY. There was an ovation to the memory of the Patron Saint, worthy the sons of the Emerald Isle. The day was pretty generally observed, with true Irish enthusiasm, throughout the entire country. The St. Patrick's Society of this town met at their Hall on the morning of that day, and under the lead of Mr John Ring, as Marshal, accompanied by the Quincy Brass Band, made a circuit of the south part of the town, thence down Hancock street to the depot, where they took the cars for Boston. They mustered about a hundred members; and were a fine looking set of men, which would do honor to any community.

The Society on this occasion appeared with a new Flag, which floated gracefully by the side of the Stars and Stripes; it is of green silk, painted by Savory of Boston; on one side is the Irish Harp surmounted by the Sunburst—the ancient standard of Ireland, and enwreathed by Shamrocks; immediately over the Harp is the motto, "Invictus;" on a scroll on either side is the motto of the old Irish Brigade, "Semper et ubique Fideles;" on each side of the Harp is a representation of one of those old stone crosses which are still carefully preserved in Ireland; under the Harp is the name—

St. Patrick's Society Quincy.organized May,1858

On the other side is a Round Tower near the ruins of an old Abbey, on the shores of an inland lake—at the foot of the tower are two wolf dogs, couchant, with the legend—"Gentle when stroked, fierce when provoked." The Sunburst is also emblazoned over the Round Tower, and the motto, "Resurgam;" underneath is inscribed in old Irish characters—

"Ireland shall rise again unconquered."

The Society returned with the 6 o'clock (P. M.) train, and marched through Washington, Elm and Hancock streets to their Hall, where they were dismissed, and by eight, all was quiet, the company having dispersed for their respective homes.

EXCISE STAMPS. We have received from E. S. Beals, Esq., Assessor for this District, a copy of a decision concerning stamps upon instruments, from which it appears that certificates, orders, warrants and drafts, by one State officer on another, for government business, and also those of county, city, and town officers, together with messages transmitted by telegraph and railroad companies, over their own wires on their own business, are not taxable. In stamping instruments, two or more of a smaller denomination may be used. Stamps will be required upon every certificate which has, or may have, a legal value in any court of law or equity.

ANOTHER NATIONAL FAST DAY. Before the adjournment of Congress, the Senate adopted a resolution requesting the President to appoint a day of national fasting and prayer, and it is, therefore, probable that a proclamation will soon be issued in compliance with that resolution.

A SPICY SUBSTITUTE FOR CENTS Owing to the scarcity of "small change," the grocers of New Haven (Conn.) are issuing nutmegs [wooden ones?] representing one cent each, to their customers. We suggest that, for "coin of greater growth," they should issue nutmeg graters.

THE TAX ON LAWYERS. Three members of the Pittsburg bar have been stricken from the list of practicing attorneys because they neglected to take out licenses as required by the internal revenue law.

FLAX. In England and in this country machinery has been perfected for the manufacture of flax, and English papers often contain articles in relation to the cultivation of flax.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, MARCH 18, 1863.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The proceedings of the "Great and General Court," have been of much interest since my last. A Bill is before the House which provides for putting our State upon a war footing. By its provisions the able bodied male population of the State from eighteen to twenty-four years of age—firemen and all are constituted the active militia; and those from twenty-four to forty-five years of age are designated as the reserve. The former are to be organized into companies, and are to drill or parade three days in each year—one of these parades to be the usual May training, and shall do camp duty for three days, and drill by companies six hours in each month, from May to November, and three hours in each month for the balance of the year. The officers and non-commissioned shall do camp duty ten days in each year; the compensation for the non-commissioned officers and privates to be one dollar per day and rations, commuted at thirty cents each. Calls for active services shall first apply to those from twenty to twenty-five years of age, next from twenty-five to thirty, and next from thirty to thirty-five. Exemptions are based on the French military system. The entire Bill before us is very large and will be materially modified before its passage.

COAST DEFENCES.

The Bill making appropriations for our harbor and coast defences of $1,000,000 passed to a third reading in the House on Tuesday. Boston Harbor is in a beautiful condition to resist the entrance of an Iron-Clad foe—there being now but ONE gun mounted on the principal fort that could be safely fired. Salem, New Bedford and other sea ports are entirely unprotected. With this outlay an active business must follow in and around Boston in many mechanical branches. Indeed, the prospect is flattering, that large quantities of Granite will be wanted to build our fortifications.

NEPONSET AND BRAINTREE AND WEYMOUTH BRIDGES

This Bill embraces six sections; the first section is as follows:

"The fund accrued under the provisions of the two hundred and twenty-third chapter of the Acts of 1857, amounting on the first day of January, 1863, to the sum of $7,250 72, together with its future accumulations from tolls, contributions or other sources shall be applied, &c. When the sum reaches $15000 the bridges are to be free forever. The County Commissioners of Bristol County to apportian said $15000 between the towns wherein said bridges lie as they shall determine to be just.

"The Trustees shall thereupon pay over the money so apportioned to the towns respectively entitled thereto, and said towns shall thenceforth have the care, maintenance and repair of the bridges within their limits, and be subject to the same duties and liabilities in relation thereto, as exist in regard to other highways; and the Selectmen of said towns shall have and exercise within their respective limits, like powers in relation thereto, as have been heretofore reposed in the Corporations and Trustees: Provided, that said Bridges and Turnpikes shall be forever free from tolls."

The rights of the Quincy Railroad Corporation not to be affected, except that after said Bridge shall become free, said Corporation shall contribute towards the annual expense of tending the draw and lighting Neponset Bridge, in such sums as shall mutually be agreed upon between said Corporation and the Selectmen of the towns within which said Bridge lies. On the first of April next it is presumed there will be an accumulation of $8000 from tolls towards freeing the Bridge. Seven thousand dollars will then be wanted. Without any subscription the Neponset Bridge would free itself in two years.

THE HOUSE OF STEWART IN A NEW LINE OF SPECULATION. Provision dealers were not a little astonished the other day to find an operator in the butter market who made a clean sweep of every choice grade lot of that commodity offering, at the highest current rates. But they were still more surprised when they learned that this bold and persistent speculator was an agent of the dry goods house of Stewart, in New York city, and that the butter thus bought up was to be shipped to Europe to pay for importations, in lieu of exchange. Our market has since been left nearly bare of good stocks of Vermont and New York butter, and prices have materially advanced. This "cute" and characteristic operation beats the cotton goods monopoly. There is but one more chance for a "spec" left for Stewart in this quarter, and that is to go into the fish market. The cod and haddock have already taken the alarm and struck out for deep water.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

TUNS OF BULLETS. The army of the United States used, during the year 1862, sixteen thousand tuns of bullets. By an improvement in elongated bullets made by E. D. Williams, recently adopted and gradually being brought into the service, such a reduction in the weight is effected that it is calculated a saving of six million dollars a year will be made in the expense of metal and transportation. It will save to the army of the Potomac alone two hundred ammunition wagons.

Golden Opinions.

Quite a number of communications like the following, have, of late, found their way into our drawer. We had no idea, before, that our humble labors were held in such estimation. The kind words and friendly sympathy which breathes through every line of our correspondent's communication, were grateful to our feelings, and flattering to our pride—green spots, midst the trying duties which encompass the paths of those unlucky wights, who are recognized as the responsible head of a public journal. A correspondence thus happily commenced, we hope will be lasting. That "LECTOR" will still keep us company, to aid us with sage counsel, and to bear testimony, that, although we may have done well, there is room and a will to do better.

"DORCHESTER, MARCH 16, 1863.

"Every Saturday morning brings a welcome visit from the Patriot. It gives me pleasure to repeat what I know you will be glad to hear, that the Quincy Patriot is getting to be one of our best suburban papers. This is not my opinion only, but that of others capable of judging. While it serves its local uses as a newspaper, we are glad to find in its columns much of that which possesses some permanent value, such as is worthy a place in one's Scrap book. You would have smiled to have seen how, "small by degrees and beautifully less," last week's number grew under my usual scissoring. First, we took all your poetry—much obliged for that—then that pretty tale of the war, and those truly "Noble Words" about the war, not forgetting the "Rambles"—"Receipts,"—with other items too valuable to loose. You are fortunate, too, in your army correspondents. May an increased subscription list reward your efforts in making the Patriot the best journal in the County.

We have nothing specially noteworthy to communicate in the way of news. The address by the Rev. Mr. Johnson, at Neponset, commemorative of Washington's birth, was repeated yesterday, and is regarded as an able production. The Orthodox society have engaged Mr. J. for a year, at twelve hundred dollars salary. More anon.

Yours, LECTOR."

COLD WEATHER. The present month has had no parallel within a quarter of a century for such uniform and severe cold weather. With a foot or more of snow on the ground, our rivers frost-bound, and with every storm a new accumulation of snow, seed-time appears as distant as it did last February.

APPOINTMENT. Wyman Abercrombie Esq., of this town has been appointed by the Governor and Council, Justice of the Peace.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS. Number of births registered in Weymouth for the year 1862, 267; marriages 73; deaths 115.

The number of births in Randolph last year was 171, marriages 101, deaths 76.

THE ALABAMA MATCHED AT LAST. The captured steamer Bermuda, one of the fastest vessels sent from England since the war began, has been purchased by the Navy Department for $120,000. She is a prize to the Mercedita. It was on board this craft that the famous Oreto's battery was seized, and the splendid 100 pound gun, made for the Great Exhibition in London, but subsequently bought by the Confederates. The Bermuda can steam fifteen miles an hour, and would easily have got away from the Mercedita had she discovered her. She will soon be converted into an efficent man-of-war and sent after the Alabama. The owner of the cargo and his sons were on board when she was captured.

MILITARY AND MATRIMONY. The new Conscription Law is expected to create a rise in the matrimonial market. All unmarried men below forty-five years are to be placed in the first class, which will be drawn upon before the turn of family men comes. Of course there will be a good many bachelors anxious to get into the second class, and clergymen may expect to get their emolument from this source largely increased for the next few weeks. But a fellow at our side, whose habits are too confirmed ever to be broken, says that before many months most of the hasty husbands will be sighing for the time when a draft will be made from the second class. What shall be done with such a wretch?—New Bedford Standard.

SPECULATION IN CENTS. While searching a house in Jersey City the other day in pursuit of a suspicious character, the police found two large sacks full of nickel cents, which had undoubtedly been collected with the view of obtaining a large premium for them. It was found necessary to prop up a building in the lower part of New York a few days since, as it was settling at a dangerous rate, and on investigating the cause two huge tierces full of nickel cents were found in one of the upper stories. Their great weight had made the building settle.

THE NEW REVENUE CURRENCY. Designs have been prepared for the fractional currency authorized by the recent Finance law. The notes are to be about the same size of those of the postal currency, but of a totally different character, and prepared in such a way as to avoid as far as art can devise any counterfeiting.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

There are now nine thousand two hundred and thirty sick and wounded soldiers in the military hospitals in and around Washington.

The State tax for the current year will not be less than $2,000,000. The tax last year was $1,797,516.

Gen. Hooker has caused the issue to the army rations of vegetables. Onions and potatoes are now in every camp.

One dress of the Princess of Wales cost eight thousand dollars. It is made almost entirely of the finest lace.

Abington has contributed one hundred and fifty-six boxes, barrels and packages of every conceivable article useful to soldiers, to be forwarded to Co. G, 12th regiment, now shattered by two years hard service.

An American merchant brings intelligence of a new monster which is in process of construction for the rebels in the vicinity of London. It is 350 feet long, iron clad, with a formidable prow, and will be provided with four engines.

Boston's proportion of the State war tax will be about $819,650.

Cotton to the amount of 137,757 lbs. from Liverpool was entered at the Custom House in Portland recently.

The Government tax men have decided that a pig becomes a hog at six months old; and slaughtered hogs are taxed, while assassinated pigs are not.

Gen. Hunter has ordered a draft of the negroes in the department of the South, to garrison the forts with acclimated men.

For six consecutive mornings the thermometer at Manchester, N. H., ranged from eight to seventeen degrees below zero.

Of the ministers to England since the formation of the Government, New York has had 5, Massachusetts 5, Pennsylvania 4, Virginia 3, Maryland 2, New Jersey 1, and South Carolina, 1.

The Portland Advertiser says that potatoes are now selling for 35 cents a bushel, with a downward tendency, "down east."

The appropriation bills of the last session of Congress amount to about $100,000,000.

England has reduced her navy, during the last six months, very materially, laying up 90 vessels, and discharging 13,000 men. This is strong evidence of her wish to live at peace with all nations.

The price of paper is moderating. That for newspaper use is now offered at sixteen cents. Holders of rags and other stock might as well "stand from under."

The ice dealers everywhere took advantage of the recent cold weather and filled their ice houses with ice of good quality, though not so thick as usual.

The stones on the corners of the Exchange, in Boston, are larger than any single stone in Cleopatra's Needle; and those now in erection on the United States Treasury building at Washington are much heavier than any stone of Pompey's Pillar or the Pyramids of Egypt.

Three locomotives built for the Government were sent off from Taunton on the 16th ult. Two of them were named, viz: "Gen Burnsides" and "Gen. Sickles." The other is named "W. A. Morley."

The amount of money taken from letters at the "Dead Letter Office" will, it is estimated amount to $80 000 for the present year, being some $30 000 more than the average for past years. This increase is owing chiefly to the large sums of money being constantly sent home by the soldiers. An additional force of 25 or 30 clerks is employed.

There are 59,000 branches of holly and 56,500 of mistletoe sold yearly at Christmas in London.

The Detroit Tribune says quite a number of oil wells in Canada have "suspended issue" and dried up.

An army correspondent of the New York Herald has been arrested by order of Gen. Hooker, and confined on board the prison ship at Aquia Creek, for publishing information tending to benefit the enemy.

The St. Louis Republican is advised that the people of Mississippi county are preparing to plant two thousand acres of their rich soil with cotton. Of its success in that region no doubt is entertained.

The amount of receipts of internal revenue has not yet come up to the estimate of Commissioner Boutwell, in his report to Congress, but it is calculated that they will soon equal if not exceed it.

THE PAPER DUTY. The Washington Star of the 3d says that the Bill reducing the duty on printing paper to twenty per cent. was only assented to by the friends of the paper monopoly when they found that, if the concession was not granted, a total repeal would be the consequence. The Star also says:

"The bitterest opponents of the newspapers have been Stevens of Pennsylvania, Morrill of Vermont, Horton of Ohio and Spaulding, in the committee, and Dawes of Massachusetts on the floor. Secretary Chase has been throughout warmly in favor of a reduction to about ten per cent, which would be satisfactory to the press. He considers it both politic and generous for the Government to help to sustain the loyal press by removing some of the burthens from it, even if it does not meet the approval of a sordid combination."

COST OF WAR. From 1683 to 1816, England was more than half the time—sixty seven years—engaged in war. The war of the Spanish succession cost over $300,000 000 in eleven years; the seven years war cost $500.000 000; our Revolutionary war cost England $380 000,000, and that of the French Revolution $2.520 000. When at war with Napoleon, from 1803 to 1816, England raised by taxes the enormous sum of $3,655 000.000, and by loans the further sum of $1.940 000,—an average of over $1,322,000 per day. It has been said that for ninety days previous to the battle of Waterloo, she spent an average of over five million dollars per day.

LUNCH. There will be a free lunch at the Mariposa Saloon this evening.

Marriages.

In Milton, on the 14th inst., by Rev. John H. Morrison, Sergent Samuel G. Thayer, of Milton, Co. E. 35 Mass. Regiment, to Miss Abby H. Gay of Quincy.

In East Weymouth, on the 15th inst., by Rev. J. P. Lane, Mr. Asa Burrill, Jr., to Miss Sarah Louisa Pratt.

Deaths.

In Worcester, on the 7th inst., Helen F. daughter of Mr. Joseph and the late Louisa P. Jewett, aged 2 years 6 months and 26 days.

There came a low toned whisper, from the far off spirit land,
"Mother's waiting darling Nellie! come and join the angel band;"
Many storms will gather o'er thee, for the world is full of woe,
And the fond hearts watching o'er thee, cannot shield thee from a blow.

Then the little heart beat wildly, and the fluttering pulses stir'd,
As she struggled to mount upward, obedient to the word;
With patient sweet endurance, calmly waiting day by day,
For the final thrilling whisper, "darling Nellie come away!

Many hearts were aching sadly for another fond tie riven,
Yet the silver chord thus loosen'd binds them nearer unto heaven;
And gentle little Hattie; though the birdling in its flight,
Leaves a shadow on thy path, on thy home deaths chilling blight.

Leaving thee to cling more closely to thy sorrowing fathers side
Now the nearest and the dearest in all this world so wide;
Strive to bear like little Nellie, with patience all His will,
Who alone can soothe the stricken heart, or bid thy grief "be still."

CAROLINE A. HAYDEN.

In this town, on the 15th ult, of Membranous Croup, Sarah Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. Francis and Mrs Mary Jane Walsh, aged 3 years and 3 months.

Child of our heart, we have laid thee to rest,
Dimpled hands folded, and flowers on the breast,
Golden hair floating above the blue eyes,
That never shall ope to the light of our skies!

Though we have wept in our love and our pride,
We would not call thee again to our side;
Sleep with thy sister beneath the green sod
And wake with her safe in the bosom of God.

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES.

Doctor Cheeseman's Pills.

The combination of ingredients in these Pills are the result of a long and extensive practice. They are mild in their operation, and certain in correcting all irregularities, Painful Menstruations, removing all obstructions whether from cold or otherwise, headache, pain in the side, palpitation of the heart, whites, all nervous affections, hysterics, fatigue, pain in the back and limbs, &c., disturbed sleep, which arise from an obstruction of nature.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS were the commencement of a new era in the treatment of those irregularities and obstructions which have consigned so many to a premature GRAVE. No female can enjoy good health unless she is regular, and whenever an obstruction takes place the general health begins to decline.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS are the most effectual remedy ever known to the complaints peculiar to Females. To all of whom they are invaluable, inducing, with certainty, a radical regularity. They are known to thousands who have used them at different periods, throughout the country, having the sanction of some of the most eminent Physicians in America.

Explicit directions, stating when they should be used, with each Box—the Price One Dollar a Box, containing from 50 to 60 Pills.

DR. SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LINIMENT is prepared from the recipe of Dr. Stephen Sweet, of Conn., the great bone setter, and has been used in his practice for the last twenty years with the most astonishing success. As an external remedy it is without a rival, and will alleviate pain more speedily that any other preparation. For all Rheumatic and Nervous Disorders it is truly infallible, and as a curative for Sores, Wounds, Sprains, Bruises, &c., its soothing, healing and powerful strengthening properties, excite the just wonder and astonishment of all who have given it a trial. Over four hundred certificates of remarkable cures, performed by it within the last two years, attest this fact.

For sale by MRS. E. HAYDEN.

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES.

Doctor Cheeseman's Pills.

The combination of ingredients in these Pills are the result of a long and extensive practice. They are mild in their operation, and certain in correcting all irregularities, Painful Menstruations, removing all obstructions whether from cold or otherwise, headache, pain in the side, palpitation of the heart, whites, all nervous affections, hysterics, fatigue, pain in the back and limbs, &c., disturbed sleep, which arise from interruption of nature.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS

was the commencement of a new era in the treatment of those irregularities and obstructions which have consigned so many to a PREMATURE GRAVE. No female can enjoy good health unless she is regular, and whenever an obstruction takes place the general health begins to decline.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS.

are the most effectual remedy ever known for all complaints peculiar to Females. To all classes they are invaluable, inducing, with certainty, periodical regularity. They are known to thousands, who have used them at different periods, throughout the country, having the sanction of some of the most eminent Physicians in America.

Explicit directions, stating when they should not be used, with each Box—the Price One Dollar per Box, containing from 50 to 60 Pills.

Pills sent by mail, promptly, by remitting to the Proprietor. Sold by Druggists generally.

Ayer's SARSAPARILLA

THE WORLD'S GREAT REMEDY FOR

SCROFULA AND SCROFULOUS DISEASES.

From Emery Eves, a well-known merchant of Oxford, Maine.

"I have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, but never yet one bottle which in or out of the desired effect and full satisfaction to those who took it. As fast as our people try it, they agree there has been no medicine like it before in our community."

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Pustules, Ulcers, Sores, and all Diseases of the Skin.

From Rev. Robt. Strutton, Bristol, England.

"I only do my duty to you and the public, when I add my testimony to that you publish of the medicinal virtues of your SARSAPARILLA. My daughter, aged ten, had an affecting humor in her ears, eyes, and hair for years, which we were unable to cure until we tried your SARSAPARILLA. She has been well for some months."

From Mrs. Jane E. Rice, a well known and much-esteemed lady of Dennisville, Cape May Co., N. J.

"My daughter has suffered for a year past with a scrofulous eruption, which was very troublesome. Nothing afforded my relief until we tried your SARSAPARILLA, which soon completely cured her."

From Charles P. Gage, Esq., of the widely-known firm of Gage, Murray & Co., manufacturers of enamelled papers in Nashua, N. H.

"I had for several years a very troublesome humor in my face, which grew constantly worse until it disfigured my features and became an intolerable affliction. I tried almost everything a man could of both advice and medicine, but without any relief whatever, until I took your SARSAPARILLA. It immediately made my face worse, as you told me it might for a time; but in a few weeks the new skin began to form under the blotches, and continued until my face is as smooth as anybody's, and I am without any symptoms of the disease that I know of. I enjoy perfect health, and without a doubt owe it to your SARSAPARILLA."

Erysipelas—General Debility—Purify the Blood.

From Dr. Robt. Sawin, Houston St., N. Y.

DR. AYER: I seldom fail to remove Eruptions and Scrofulous Sores by the persevering use of your SARSAPARILLA, and I have just now cured an attack of Malignant Erysipelas with it. No alterative we possess equals the SARSAPARILLA you have supplied to the profession as well as to the people."

From A. E. Johnston, Esq., Wakeman, Ohio.

"For twelve years I had the vilest Erysipelas on my right arm, during which time I tried all the celebrated physicians I could reach, and took hundreds of dollars' worth of medicines. The ulcers were so bad that the cords became visible, and the doctors decided that my arm must be amputated. I began using your SARSAPARILLA. I took two bottles, and one of your PILLS. Together they have cured me. I am now as well and sound as any body. Being in a public place, my case is known to every body in this community, and excites the wonder of all."

From Hon. Henry Monro, M. P. P., of Newcastle, C. W., a leading member of the Canadian Parliament.

"I have used your SARSAPARILLA in my family, for general debility, and for purifying the blood, with very beneficial results, and feel confidence in commending it to the afflicted."

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Sore Eyes.

From Harvey Sickler, Esq., the able editor of the Tunckhannock Democrat, Pennsylvania.

"Our only child, about three years of age, was attacked by pimples on his forehead. They rapidly spread until they formed a loathsome and virulent sore, which covered his face, and actually blinded his eyes for some days. A skilful physician applied nitrate of silver and other remedies, without any apparent effect. For fifteen days we guarded his hands, lest with them he should tear open the festering and corrupt wound which covered his whole face. Having tried every thing else we had any hope from, we began giving your SARSAPARILLA, and applying the iodide of potash lotion, as you direct. The sore began to heal when we had given the first bottle, and was well when we had finished the second. The child's eyelashes, which had come out, grew again, and he is now as healthy and fair as any other. The whole neighborhood predicted that the child must die."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

From Dr. Hiram Stout, of St. Louis, Missouri.

"I find your SARSAPARILLA a more effectual remedy for the secondary symptoms of Syphilis, and for syphilitic disease than any other we possess. The profession are indebted to you for some of the best medicines we have."

From A. J. French, M. D., an eminent physician of Lawrence, Mass., who is a prominent member of the Legislature of Massachusetts.

"DR. AYER—My dear Sir: I have found your SARSAPARILLA an excellent remedy for Syphilis, both in the primary and secondary type, and effectual in some cases that were too obstinate to yield to other remedies. I do not know what we can employ with more certainty of success, where a powerful alterative is required."

Mr. Chas. S. Van Lieu, of New Brunswick, N. J., had dreadful ulcers on his legs, caused by the abuse of mercury, or mercurial diseases, which grew more and more aggravated for years, in spite of every remedy of treatment that could be applied, until the persevering use of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA relieved him. Few cases can be found more inveterate and distressing than this, and it took several dozen bottles to cure him.

Leucorrhœa, Whites, Female Weakness,

are generally produced by internal Scrofulous Ulceration, and are very often cured by the alterative effect of this SARSAPARILLA. Some cases require, however, in aid of the SARSAPARILLA, the skilful application of local remedies.

From the well-known and widely-celebrated Dr. Jacob Morrill, of Cincinnati.

"I have found your SARSAPARILLA an excellent alterative in diseases of females. Many cases of irregularity, Leucorrhœa, Internal Ulceration, and local debility, arising from the scrofulous diathesis, have yielded to it, and there are few that do not, when its effect is properly aided by local treatment."

A lady, unwilling to allow the publication of her name, writes:

"My daughter and myself have been cured of a very debilitating Leucorrhœa of long standing, by two bottles of your SARSAPARILLA."

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia Heart Disease, Neuralgia, when caused by Scrofula in the system, are rapidly cured by this EXT SARSAPARILLA.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS

possess so many advantages over the other purgatives in the market, and their superior virtues are so universally known, that we need not do more than to assure the public their quality is maintained equal to the best it ever has been, and that they may be depended on to do all that they have ever done.

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN!

Just Published in a Sealed Envelope.

Price, - - Six Cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical Cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Emissions, Sexual Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally, Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c.—By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This Lecture will prove a book to thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on the receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps, by addressing,

CHAS. J. C. KLINE & CO.,

Poetry.

Our Country's Flag.

Come all ye Sons of Liberty and join us in our song,
And to our Country let us sing,—our Country, right or wrong.
When treason rears her hideous form, let patriots all unite,
And battle for our Country's flag, for liberty and right.
Hurrah! hurrah! for liberty, hurrah!
Hurrah for our Country's flag, with all its stripes and stars.

The union that our Fathers made in hallowed days of yore,
Foul treason strives to sever now, in falsehood, blood and war;
Our patriot sires have gone to rest—a legacy they gave,
And let us now united be, the sacred trust to save.
Hurrah! hurrah for our Fathers' flag, hurrah!
Hurrah for the red, the white, the blue, with every radiant star.

Our Country's flag, the patriot's pride—the symbol of the free!
Oh, may it wave till time shall end, o'er every land and sea;
May tyrants gaze upon its folds, with trembling fear dismayed,
Till the oppressed of every clime are gathered 'neath its shade.
Hurrah! Hurrah! for liberty and right,
Hurrah for Freedom's glorious stripes and shining stars so bright.

'Twas borne aloft by Washington in days of "Seventy-Six,"
And Jackson brave, at New Orleans, new honors did affix,
In Mexico the gallant Scott fresh laurels did entwine—
The glorious flag of Spangled stars: Oh! may thee ever shine.
Hurrah! hurrah! for the dear old flag, hurrah!
'Twas fashioned by the sainted dead—we'll not betray it now.

'Twas consecrated by the blood of countless heroes, slain—
Let us preserve its sacred folds free from dishonor's stain.
May curses seize the traitor knave who would its beauty mar,
Or strike from out its azure field a single precious star.
Hurrah! hurrah! for the union flag, hurrah!
Red, blue and white, its stripes so bright, and its galaxy of stars.

Then may it wave o'er Freedom's home, its stripes of red and white,
A thousand glorious years to come—the patriot's delights;
Until, emblazoned on its blue a hundred orbs shall shine,
And in one holy brotherhood, a hundred stars combine.
Hurrah! hurrah! for our Country's flag, hurrah!
That banner bright our hearts' delight begemmed with many a star.

Winter.

The winter hours are gliding fast,
The spring will soon be here;
The groves with music will resound,
The waters sparkle clear.

O, sweet, indeed, the gentle spring,
When earth is robed in flowers;
And beautiful the summer day,
With all its leafy bowers.

But winter has a charm for me,
With robe of dazzling white,
Glittering beneath each quiet ray
Of the moon's soft, silver light.

Then tell me not of summer hours,
Though sweet the season be;
For, though I love the birds, and flowers,
The winter is for me.

Anecdotes.

Mr. Jenkins remarked to his wife that in her he possessed four fulls.

Name them, my love.

You are beautiful, dutiful, youthful and armful.

You have the advantage of me, my dear.

How so, my precious?

I have but one fool.

Mr. Jenkins made no further inquiries.

Good morning, Mr. Henpeck, have you any daughters that would make good type-setters?

Not exactly, but I have a wife that would make a first-rate devil!

The son of a fond father, when going to war, promised to bring home the head of one of the enemy. His parent replied:

I should be glad to see you come home without a head provided you come safe.

Here, you bog-trotter, said a dandy to an Irish laborer, come, tell me the biggest lie you ever told in your life and I'll treat you to a whiskey punch.

An' be me sowl, quickly replied Pat, yer honor is a gintleman.

A peddar being asked by a spindle shank if he had any overalls, replied.

No, but I have a pair of candle moulds that would just fit you.

Say Sammy, why don't your mother mend that rip in your breeches?

O, she's away to the sewing circle to make clothes for poor children.

THE ALL SUFFICIENT THREE
The Great "American Remedies,"
Known as "Helmbold's"
GENUINE PREPARATIONS, VIZ.:
HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT "BUCHU,"
" " SARSAPARILLA,
" IMPROVED ROSE WASH.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATION,
"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND
Fluid Extract Buchu,
A Positive and Specific Remedy
For Diseases of the
Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATERY OR CALCEROUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU
FOR WEAKNESSES
Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Dryness of the Skin,
Horror of Disease,	Trembling,
Dimness of Vision,	Wakefulness,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Pain in the Back,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
	Eruption of the Face,
	Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases,"

Insanity and Consumption.

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess. The records of the insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Females,

Old or young, single, married, or contemplating Marriage—in many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhea, or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the Decline or Change of Life.

No family should be without it.

Take no Balsom, Mercury, or Unpleasant Medicine for Unpleasant and Dangerous Diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU
CURES SECRET DISEASES

In all their stages; at little expense; little or no change of diet; no inconvenience, and no Exposure. It causes frequent desire, and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying pain and inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling POISONOUS, DISEASED, AND WORN OUT MATTER.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the victim of Quacks, and who have paid Heavy Fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the Poison has, by the use of Powerful Astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage.

Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu

For all Affections and Diseases of
THE URINARY ORGANS,
Whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing.

BLOOD! BLOOD! BLOOD!
Helmbold's Highly Concentrated Compound
Fluid Extract Sarsaparilla Syphilis

This is an affection of the Blood, and attacks the Sexual Organs, Linings of the Nose, Ears, Throat, Windpipe, and other Mucus Surfaces, making its appearance in the form of Ulcers Helmbold's Extract Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and removes all Scaly Eruptions of the Skin, giving to the Complexion a Clear and Healthy color. It being prepared expressly for this class of complaints, its Blood-Purifying Properties are preserved to a greater extent than any other preparation of Sarsaparilla.

Helmbold's Rose Wash.

An excellent Lotion for Diseases of a Syphilitic Nature, and as an injection in Diseases of the Urinary Organs, arising from habits of dissipation, used in connection with the Extracts Buchu and Sarsaparilla, in such diseases as recommended

Evidence of the most responsible and reliable character will accompany the medicines.

Ladies who wish for medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. De Laney's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box,) though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.

Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.

TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.

THE "ELECTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.

Spring Days.

As the blustering winds of robust March
Come rollicking o'er the hills,
Whistling loud through the forest arch,
Where sleep the ice-bound rills,
I seem to hear in their tuneful lays,
A promise fair of bright Spring days.

The pattering on the window pane
Makes music to my ear;
And I seem to hear in the lulling rain
A token that Spring is here;
And the winds sigh by with a hollow moan
Tolling the dirge of Winter gone.

This morning a robin, the first of the year
Fluttered close to my window pane,
'Lighted there as if careless of fear,
Then in a moment was gone again;
But the notes I caught of his joyous lays,
Told of the beautiful bright Spring days.

To Him Who for Six Days

To him who for six days a week
Can rarely call an hour his own,
How sweet to watch the Sabbath break,
And bless the light that heaven hath lent
Oh! welcome, more than tongue can name
The dearest morn that greets our soil,
Is that the Sabbath bells proclaim,
Which shuts the busy world of toil.

From morn to eve—from morn to eve—
Still wakening but for work alone;
Oh! heaven, it is a blest reprieve
To have one day to call our own;
One day to breathe a wider span,
Unfettered by the bonds of trade,
To leave the plodding world of man,
And view the world which God hath made.

Life without love is worse than death—a world without a sun.

Somebody, who writes more truthfully than poetically, says: "An angel without money is not thought so much of now-a days as a d—l with a bag full of guineas."

A city editor, about closing up his form for the week, remarked with gravity, "I have several little articles in my head which I must get out, "meaning some small paragraphs for the paper Quickly responded his juvenile apprentice—"better let me run and buy a fine tooth comb."

Genius may co-exist with wildness, idleness, folly, even with crime; but not long with selfishness and the indulgence of an envious disposition.

God has not made this life altogether lovely, for then it would be too short and hard to leave; nor yet altogether painful, for then it would be too long and hard to bear.

In dreams our grosser memories have then so little hold of our abstracted understandings, that they forget the story, and can only relate to our awakened souls a confused and broken tale of what has passed.

Miscellaneous.

The Better Gift.

Papa, you remember, don't you? Now, father, don't forget! Say, pa, have you got your purse? cried Mr. Bancroft's children, big and little, as he put on his coat to go out, the evening before New Year's.

Well, what is it I am to remember, and by no means to forget? he enquired, turning toward the noisy group, and affecting a profound ignorance of the cause of their clamorous appeals.

Why, that to-morrow is New Year's, and if the things ain't all bought—I mean if you expect to get us any presents, and—and havn't got them yet, why—

There's time enough still is there not? Well, my purse isn't very deep this year. Some little folks' winter clothes have made quite a large hole in it, but I'll see what I can do. There, let go. Be asleep when I come back, like good children.

The little ones were not asleep when he returned, although they had consented to be put to bed, which they considered obeying the spirit of the injunction. Mr. Bancroft undid the papers, and displayed to his wife the gifts he had purchased. Picture books, toys, candies. There seemed no indications of a short purse here. What parent has not stood bewildered on a New Year's eve, before the glittering shelves of a toy-shop, unable to make a choice, and finally carrying away three times as much as was his original intention.

When Mrs. Bancroft went up stairs that night, a mysterious looking parcel lay on the hall table, to which she wisely paid no attention. But the next day after the children had exhausted all their expletives of delight over the gifts, Mr. Bancroft went into the hall, and returned with an elegant fur cape, which he carefully adjusted upon his wife's shoulders.

Now, Charles, what made you? This is too expensive, was her first surprised exclamation.

Well, I'll tell you, Mary. You are pretty tall and one of those victorines wouldn't look well on you; would look stingy, in fact. Burton spoke of it first. He took the mate to this for his wife. It was only fifty dollars.

Tears of affection gushed to his wife's eyes, at this rather bungling attempt on her husband's part to disguise, under considerations of feet and inches, the fact that he would not let his wife wear a cape inferior to Mrs. Burton.

She thanked him, praised the cape with all the enthusiasm he could desire; yet as she continued to stand, smoothing down the glossy sable with her hands, it was evident some unspoken thought was on her mind.

It's just what I need these cold days, she said at last; but I was rather hoping you wouldn't get me anything this year in the way of dress. I didn't mean to ask you, because there is something I want so much more, and which I fear you will not feel willing to grant.

Something you wanted more than the furs? inquired the husband in a disappointed tone.

Something very different, indeed, she answered, smiling in his sober face.

Tell me what it is, then. Is it anything very expensive?

Oh, no. And besides I do not wish it all at once, but will take it in instalments.

Oh, you want to subscribe to something. I've guessed it.

No.

Life insurance?

No, no! with a hearty laugh. You'll never guess it; but if you will stay at home with me this evening, I'll tell you all about it. Not before, positively.

Well, I'll be on hand. Do you want a team at M. Papillon's Academie?

How absurb! Go about your business now, for the gentlemen will commence calling soon, and laughing, she drove her husband down the steps.

Mr. Bancroft kept his promise that evening, and the children had no words to express their delight at the unusual spectacle of their father sitting opposite their mother at the little table before the fire, with the bright lamp between them, mamma's fingers flying at their sewing, and papa's foot on the cradle. How glad they were! How proudly Charlie exhibited his copy-book, and rehearsed the piece he was to speak next Friday in school! How obligingly Julia played piece after piece,—even the hackneyed Sleigh-Ride-Gallop, which she had practised till she "couldn't bear the sight of it!" and how surprised her father was that she had become so proficient! It was a happy New Year, indeed.

Several times during the evening, Mr. Bancroft reminded his wife of her promise to disclose the object of her aspirations; but she had put him off with "Wait until the children are in bed." As soon as they were gone, he renewed the enquiry.

Well, Charles, it is something very precious indeed. I know it well, for you have just given me the first instalment.

What do you mean, Mary?

My dear husband, I want you to give me your evenings. I have just had one, and oh, how delightful it has been! It has compensated for many lonely hours that are gone with the old year. The quivering of her voice warned her to stop here.

Why, Mary, have you been very lonely in my absence? I'm not gone every evening, I'm sure.

How many evenings do you think you have spent at home in the last two months?

Oh, I don't know. Average two a week, perhaps.

It has averaged just two a month, with the exception of Sundays.

Oh, you're mistaken, Mary.

I can convince you; and she did so.

Now Charles it is not for my own sake that I have made this request, but for our children's, and perhaps a little for your own. Charlie is such a social, demonstrative little fellow! Sometimes he feels that he is hardly used because he is required to spend his evenings moped up at home with only women folks. His school-mates taught him that—those who pass half their nights in the streets, and in haunts which to see your boy enter would make you shudder. He talks to me, and asks questions constantly, so that I grow fatigued, and am glad when he choses to go to bed in advance of his time. Often, too, the children need assistance in their lessons, which I am not competent to give. Many an example in arithmetic is passed over, because little heads cannot puzzle it out themselves; mother too ignorant to help, father not at home, and the school teacher too busy to give more than general directions. Then it has grieved me much to think that your club room, and other resorts perhaps more objectionable, could always win you from me, while I found it so difficult to win you from them. Have I asked an extravagant gift, Charley?

Not so extravagant, but that I am glad you asked it. I really did not consider that so much of my time was passed away from my family. Sometimes I have thought that I wasn't well enough acquainted with my children, but I knew your thorough ways, and trusted all to you. It has been a heavy burden, I know, and henceforth I will be more ready to share it with you. It hurts me to think you have felt loneliness so often. I suppose you have spent most of your time in reading?

No. Before the children's bed time there is no opportunity for any reading except juveniles; and after that I am usually very tired, and baby commonly waking for her nine o'clock frolic. But that reminds me of my little present for you; and from the table drawer she took the "Minister's Wooing," handsomely bound, and presented it to her husband.

Thank you. Have you read it? he asked.

Not a line.

Then to-morrow night I will commence reading it aloud to you.

Oh, Charley! this is better than fur capes. But I don't mean to be selfish. I will not claim all your evenings. The club will hate me if I should.

Clubs are not trumps, he returned gaily, than checking himself, but hearts are—such hearts as yours, Mary. If every woman were as true, half the club-rooms would be deserted, and saloons and gambling dens haunted only by the vilest of the vile.

There, that is all of compliment that I can appropriate at present, Charley. And so ended the first instalment of Mr. Bancroft's New Year's Gift.

For the Patriot

Our Country—Right or Wrong.

This is a pet phrase with many who attach no definite meaning to it. Like other ambiguous expressions, it is capable of different interpretations. The sentence is eliptical, and may be filled out in just such a manner as you please, making it a noble and patriotic truth, or a false and mischievous lie. "Vox populi, vox Dei"; "Liberte, Egalite, et Fraternite," and like high sounding and pretentious phrases have been often the watch words of political demagogues, and by them taught to a wild, jacobinic mob, who are ready to rush into all manner of excesses. "Our country right or wrong." If by this is meant that we are to be indifferent to the moral character of our national acts; that we are to follow blindly whithersoever popular phrenzy may for the hour direct, and wholly ignore the omnipresent claims of a Higher Law upon us, we do not hesitate to brand the motto as impious and wicked.

No emergencies can possibly arise, no danger can be so threatening to the individual or the state, as to release us from the eternal obligations of justice and truth. The path of rectitude is always the path of safety. Though it may appear to be that of death, our's should be the heroic resolve of the Persian queen, "If I perish, I perish!" But we are inclined to another version of the above quoted phrase. Our country—that is, our government,—may be right in its adopted policy, or that policy may be erroneous, in our judgment. While we are not called to abandon our convictions, or to silence their expression at proper times, we are to use our influence to support the authority of that government, and, in all legitimate ways, to seek to reform and correct mistaken principles. But whether following a wise or an unwise course, we still are bound to render to our country our love, fealty and obedience. If right, we rejoice in her success; but if wrong, we are not thereby released from our loyalty, but bound to use all lawful means in our power to bring about a better state of things. "For better or for worse," through good report and through evil report, whether in prosperity or adversity, we are to stand by her and say,

"With all her faults we love her still."

Report of the Committee.

The committee chosen by the Town of Quincy, in 1861, to investigate the deficit of taxes in 1858, 1859 and 1860, made their report at the annual meeting held on the 24 inst. As there were but few of our citizens present at the time, we have been requested to publish the REPORT.

The committee appointed at the last March meeting to investigate the state of affairs between the Town and the late Charles A. Cummings, have attended to that duty and the following is the result of their labors:

Due the Town from the estate of Mr. Cummings:

Deficit on tax of 1858,	$48 76
" " 1859,	89 74
" " 1860,	2,619 43
Total,	$2,757 93

But although these figures show the deficit on the second year's tax, to be but $89 74, we have evidence that the amount unpaid at the close of that year was actually much larger. Mr. George H. Cummings, who has kindly furnished your committee with all the information in his possession relative to this affair, states that his father believed on the 1st of February, 1860, that he was behind about eight hundred dollars; but Mr. Cummings had no books that would show him his actual condition, and we are of the opinion from other evidence, that we have found that the deficit at that time was one thousand dollars. This deficit was not discovered by those whose duty it was to examine his accounts at the close of the year, and was, we have no doubt, with the exception of the small balance, made up from the proceeds of the next years' tax. Yet after a careful examination of the whole case, we are of the opinion that Mr. Cummings had no intention of defrauding the Town. He was at that time investing money in horticultural improvements which he no doubt expected would soon be a source of considerable income to him; he kept no cash book or other account by which he could tell at once the amount of money in his possession belonging to the Town; and he no doubt at first heedlessly paid out any money he had in his hand, trusting that he should be able, at the close of the year to balance the account. At the settlement in February, he found himself much more in debt than he had anticipated, and was obliged to bid off the tax for another year, tho' at a ruinously low rate—to prevent exposure; but his affairs were no better managed in the third year than in the two preceeding, and at the close he found himself in a much worse condition than at the beginning. On examining Mr Cummings' books, there were found on the tax list many taxes that had been paid but were uncancelled; a part of these were marked with one or more interrogation points, showing a doubt in his mind whether they had not been paid; this we think is conclusive evidence that the omission was the result of inexcusable carelessness, and should not be attributed to dishonesty.

The statutes of our Commonwealth require Collectors to exhibit to the Selectmen as often as once in two months if required, a true statement of all moneys collected, with the Treasurer's receipts for the same. We think, if this examination was thoroughly made occasionally, it would be advantageous to all concerned. No man is too honest to be looked after in such a situation, and the absence of temptation, is the surest guarantee of fidelity.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Quincy, March, 1862.

Governor's Proclamation for Fast.

By and with the advice and consent of the Council, I do hereby appoint THURSDAY, the second day of April next, to be kept and observed by the people of Massachusetts as a day of public Fasting, Humilation and Prayer.

The venerable example of our fathers, by whom this annual religious observance was established in our Commonwealth, invites us to maintain this fit solemnity. But much more does a due sense of human dependence, unworthiness and shortcoming, summon us as a people not less than as individuals, in a spirit of humility, selfdenial, and supplication, to bow before the Infinite Ruler of all the Earth. Recalling our minds from every vain pursuit, from the desires of ambition and gain, from the contemplation of ourselves and all private and personal objects or ends, let the occasion be consecrated by penitential confession, by the purification of our hearts, and by the renewal and enlivening of our trust in God, who is the source of all life and help and salvation.

Let our Fast be made acceptable before Him, by seeking to follow the great humility of Our Lord, whose Cross and Passion are especially commemorated by so many believers at this season of the revolving year; and by the fervent purposes of sincere hearts to conform the laws and the practices of our country, and to conform our life and conduct as a people, to the Gospel He taught and the spirit of His example upon earth.

Let us make a common supplication for all needful blessings upon the work of honorable industry, upon the seed time and the harvest; that we may be made plenteous in every work of our hands, in the fruit of our cattle, and in the fruit of our land, for good; that the sea may yield up to us its hidden treasures, and the springs of the earth may not dry; that the poor may be saved from want, and the rich fulfil the duties of their stewardship; that the hand of labor may not be idle, nor the widow and the fatherless be neglected; that all the means of useful learning may be continued and enlarged, and that all tender and kindly influences "may drop, as the rain into all hearts, distilling as the dew, as the small rain upon the herb, and as the showers upon the grass;" that God would comfort the sorrowing, strengthen the weak, encourage all who falter in the work of Duty, soften the griefs and bereavements of War, make clear the dim vision of all our unbelief, purify our Nation; that He would give Victory to our arms. Peace to our country, and Liberty to all the people, leading us in the way which is hewn out for the ransomed to walk in, where the vulture's eye never saw, and the lion's whelp never trod.

JOHN A. ANDREW.

I Love Her.

A pretty sinner may chance to be more attractive than an ugly saint, and parsons sometimes find it out. A good story is told of a Yankee divine of advanced age who married for his second wife a damsel young and handsome. When the elders of the church came to him to inquire if the lady was a suitable person to make a useful figure as a parson's wife, he answered frankly that he didn't think she was. "But," added the irrepressible doctor," though I don't pretend she is a saint, she is a very pretty little sinner, and I love her." The twain became one flesh.

A Good Name.

Be wondrous wary of your first comportments; get a good name, and be very tender of it afterwards, for 'tis like the Venice glass, quick cracked never to be mended, though patched it may be. To this purpose take along with you this fable:

It happened that Fire, Water and Fame went to travel together; they consulted, that if they lost one another, how they might be retrieved and meet again. Fire said: "Where you see smoke, there you shall find me."—Water said: "Where you see marsh and moorish low ground, there you shall find me."

But Fame said: "Take heed how you lose me; for if you do, you will run a great hazard never to meet me again; there's no retrieving of me."

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, March, 28th 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

For Sixty Days. George H. Lingham, a returned wounded soldier of this town, was arrested on Monday evening last, for an assault on his wife's sister—Mrs. Barton Derry, by Deputy Sheriff French, after a hard chase, which lasted nearly all day through the woods in the west part of the town. From reports it seems he entered her dwelling and demanded supper, which she refused, for reasons given in Court, whereupon he turned, and knocked her down several times—leaving marks upon her face from the blows received. He was tried on Wednesday last before Justice Adams and sentenced to sixty days at the House of Correction at Dedham.

Accident to Doctor Faxon. On Tuesday, 17th instant, St. Patrick's day, the 9th Massachusetts (Irish) Regiment gave a great celebration; such as climbing greased poles, chasing greased pigs, and other homely sports; as well as horse racing, in which most of the officers participated. The course was out from Camp less than half a mile, and return over the same track. While the Doctor was coming in from the third race with Col. Stephenson, on the home stretch, five horses were imprudently started out on a race in the opposite direction, and the result was that the Doctor's horse and Quarter-Master Mooney's came into collison while at full speed! The horses struck each other fairly and were both instantly killed. Both men were thrown high in air. The Doctor was taken up insensible, but soon recovered sufficiently to walk to his tent; and is now, thanks to a vigorous bodily organization without a bone being broken, almost entirely well. Quarter-Master Mooney's hurts were much more serious.

The Doctor has lost two valuable horses since he has been in service! A day or two after the accident a superb horse was presented to him by his friends in the Regiment.

Fatal Railroad Accident.—Mr. Hathaway Briggs, of Berkley, was run over by the steamboat train on the Old Colony railroad on Monday evening, between Middleboro' and Myrick's, and injured so that he died in the course of a few hours. He was about 60 years of age, and went down on the Fall River train to Myrick's, from which station he had started to walk home, but mistook the road.

Col. Walker's Regiment. The February report of the 4th Mass. Regiment, at Camp Mansfield, Carrolton, (La.,) shows 795 enlisted men and 38 officers present on duty, and 92 men and 1 officer present, sick; absent sick, 19; discharged for disability, 2. The following deaths have occurred: Walter S. Riddle, Co. B, drowned Dec. 27; Zaccheus Macomber, Co. F, Jan. 24; Wm. B. Pratt, Co. G, Jan. 9; Charles O. Fuller, Co. A, Jan. 28; Corp. Derrick W. Cobb, Co. F, Jan. 21; Henry O. Titus, Co. F., Feb. 17.

The Quincy Brass Band have issued their card, calling the attention of the public to a musical entertainment and ball, advertised to come off at the Town Hall on Fast Day evening. On this occasion, the Band will appear in their new uniform, and in honor of the day, and to commemorate the event, will discourse some of their sweetest melody. The uniform, a dark Gray, appropriately trimmed, is a neat affair. Those who would enjoy a rich, musical treat, and a trip to the mystic influence of the mazy dance, should not fail to be present. The attractions are most inviting, the time opportune, and the object most worthy. Let them have a bumper. Their card appears in another part of our paper to-day.

Sword presentation. During the evening a sword will be presented to Lieut. Horace A. Derry, of Company D, 20th Mass. Regiment, who at present is at home on a furlough, in consequence of wounds received at the late battle of Bull Run. The honor is merited—and could not have fallen on a worthier head—Lieutenant Derry is a self-made soldier; he entered the army as a private, and by eminent services and indomitable courage, rose to the distinguished rank he now enjoys. There have been but few battles of the Army of the Potomac in which he has not taken an active part.

The Change. We again tread the solid earth. The snow, which a few days since lay in piles of a foot or more in depth, under the dissolving influence of a warm rain, has entirely disappeared. The spring-time of year is at hand. Nature is wakening from her long sleep. The early warblers have already returned to their old haunts,—and make the opening day musical with their carols. 'April showers, will bring forth May flowers.'

☞ Abbott's continues his sale of Dry and Fancy Goods each afternoon next week. For particulars see advertisement.

New Bedford Manufactories. The New Bedford Massachusetts Cordage Company have made a Manilla-hemp hawser, 14 inches in girth, 960 feet in length and weighing 5,600 pounds, to be used for hauling off the steamer Caledonia which lately went ashore on Cape Cod.

The Conscription Law. It is stated that the representatives of foreign nations are communicating with their governments relative to the drafting of foreigners who have declared their intentions to become citizens, having taken out their "first papers." The law renders them liable to conscription, but they do not like the idea.

The Law on Bounties. By the late act of Congress the one hundred dollar United States bounty is only given to soldiers discharged from the army by reason of wounds received in battle. The law is generally misunderstood, so that soldiers discharged previous to the expiration of their term of enlistment for disability and other causes, except wounds in battle, suppose themselves entitled to the bounty, which is not the case.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, March 26, 1863.

FINANCIAL.

Government is now receiving, says the New York Herald, at a very low rate of interest, more money than is required for the payment of the entire expenses of the war. On Friday and Saturday the receipts at this point alone of money on deposit at five per cent. on call, exceeded a million per day, which supposes at least, a million and a quarter at all the sub-Treasuries. The receipts for conversion for the past day or two have averaged $750,000 per day, and it may be fairly assumed that the average will not fall below $500,000 from this out, so long as the money market is undisturbed. Add to this $300,000 a day from internal taxes—a very low average, and we have an aggregate revenue of two million three hundred thousand dollars a day—more than the total war expenditure. Besides this, the Government is receiving of $300,000 each working day in gold from the customs, and the Bank-note companies are printing $1,250,000 a day of paper money. It would appear that the resources of the Government are ample to meet its daily wants. Notwithstanding the great expansion of paper money, prices have been more satisfactory with many articles to buyers than sellers, and the wonderful downfall of gold has produced quite a consternation in the speculative community.

LOCAL MATTERS.

The weather has been cheerless and unpleasant for some days past. There is much sickness at the present moment in Boston, mostly lung affections. The mortality reaching one hundred and two deaths, and being quite on the increase over last week. About every third person we meet complains of a cough, sore throat or bad cold in some form. Down went the National Theatre by fire on Monday night last, or rather early on Tuesday morning; origin of the fire supposed to be the ignition of gas. This stately structure was owned by William Sohier, Esq., and was erected about ten years ago at a cost of forty-five thousand dollars. The old National Theatre, on the same site, was destroyed by fire in April, 1852.

THE NEWS.

Foreign intervention in American affairs by European powers is still at a magnificent distance. The French army trying to quarter in the Halls of the Montezumas in Mexico—no go. Our war prospects are very flattering this week. Accounts are cheering from all quarters, that the Federal arms are destined to victory most triumphant, and the rebellion will be put down within six months from date. X.

For the Patriot

Army Correspondence.

FORT MACON, BEAUFORT HARBOR, N. C.
March 15th, 1863.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

I thought as I had a few moments to spare that I would write a few lines and let your readers know how the Boys in Company G, 45th Massachusetts Regiment are getting along. Fort Macon is at the entrance of the harbor of Beaufort and Morehead cities, and is the most healthy in the State. It is in command of Major Giles, of the 3d New York Artillery, and he is a good officer. It is garrisoned by Companies I and G, of the 45th Mass Regiment, and a part of the 3d United States Artillery. We have been stationed here since the second of December, and like well. On Sunday last we heard a heavy cannonading, but being the anniversary of the battle of Newbern, little was thought of it, but as the cars did not get down to Morehead on time, it began to make a stir; it turned out to be an attack on our troops; about as near as we could find out there was from ten to fifteen thousand rebels, and the firing was from our gunboats shelling them out of the woods; they made their attack on the Neuse River, opposite the barracks of the 44th Mass. Regiment, and their barracks were riddled with shot. I have not heard how many were killed or wounded up to this time.

The Boys are all well and in fine spirits, and begin to talk about going home.

A QUINCY BOY.

Fast Day. Next Thursday is Fast Day. We would remind our correspondents and advertisers the importance of having their favors in early if they would have them attended to. The request of the Executive we intend to observe, and hope our readers will follow so Christian a duty, and be sure and go to the Concert in the evening.

A Heavy Blast. Seventy five kegs of powder were recently exploded in a cave at Point Lobos, near San Francisco, (Cal.) The blast was fired, and the magnificence of the explosion repaid those who waited to see it. Tons of rock were hurled into the air, and tongues of flame continued issuing up through the great fissures for several seconds after the explosion. The rock above the cave is said to be about sixty feet in thickness. It was shivered.

Gold. The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun states that the Treasury is provided with gold for all its expected demands, and will not be obliged to come into market as a purchaser.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

The sweet orange, fig, plum and peach trees were in full blossom at New Orleans, March 5th. Lettuce, beets, turnips and radishes are daily gathered for the markets.

The iron clad Nahant has arrived safely off Charleston Bar, in tow of the gunboat Florida.

The only currency now good in California is gold and silver. United States Legal Treasury Notes pass for only 60 and 65 cents.

The National Tax on the Boston Banks is estimated at $148,261 or 39-100 of one per cent. on the capital, and that on the country banks at $246,869 or 85-100 of one per cent. on the capital.

The whole of New England is now being scraped to get up one regiment of colored soldiers.

Gov. Buckingham, of Connecticut has appointed Friday the 3d of April for, fast day.

It is officially announced that the health of the Army of the Potomac was never better than it is at this time.

There are 800 monster guns at Pittsburg, Penn. intended for sea coast defence. They are to be shipped to Boston and New York.

The sum of $3,600 has been sent to the Sanitary Commission for the benefit of sick and wounded soldiers by Americans in Chili.

The 4th Mass. Regiment have gone up the Mississippi to take part in the attack on Port Hudson. They took five days' uncooked and three days' cooked rations.

The prices of carpeting have doubled during the past year, and are still increasing.

It was the gallant Capt. Worden, (who with the Monitor drove back the rebel Merrimac,) that destroyed the pirate Nashville with the iron-clad Montauk. These two brilliant deeds are enough to make a hero of him.

The success of five-twenty-government bonds is so great that the Secretary of the Treasury will not put a loan into the market at present.

The New York Times is importing 13,000 reams of news printing paper from Belgium. It will cost, with duty and exchange, about 15 cts. a pound, which it is believed will soon be the ruling price of our paper manufacturers.

Contraband goods on their way South worth about $33,000, were seized by the police a few days since, in Philadelphia.

250 officers of a negro brigade are, it is said, to leave for New Orleans, the privates to be obtained at the South.

The people of Texas are emigrating by colonies to Mexico, to escape starvation and conscription.

The Congressional Committee on the Conduct of the War have, it is understood, closed their testimony, and in about two weeks will make their report.

The Government has stopped issuing passports for Europe to persons liable to military duty.

A new step in telegraphy is about to be made in the port of Liverpool. The lightships which lie off the harbor are to be furnished with dials and wires to communicate with the shore. The new project will save an immense time in reporting vessels.

The rebels have so strongly fortified Galveston that our forces will not probably attack it for the present.

Turkey has just issued postage-stamps, having long been the only Power in Europe that has not used them. The stamps bear the signature of the Sultan; the Mahometan religion interdicting the representation of the face or person.

Those "coffee-mill" guns—one hundred or more in number, ordered by the President—we are told, have proved to be of no practical value to the army of the Potomac, and are now laid up in a store-house in Washington.

Some apprehension is felt in private circles for the safety of the U. S. frigate Colorado. She sailed from Boston some months since.

A gentleman in course of conversation with General Hooker last week remarked that he had a son in his army. "Before ninety days," replied 'Fighting Joe,' "you will be prouder of that fact than any other fact of your life.

The vote-yourself-a-library resolution,—adopted by Congress before its adjournment, will give to each member between three and four hundred dollars worth of books belonging to the government, many of which have been stored in New York for a long time. They embrace works of Jefferson, Adams and the other Fathers, statutes-at-large, reports of exploring expeditions, &c.

Four hundred colored men are now in camp at Readville.

An early opening of navigation on the Western lakes is anticipated.

A lady, eighty-one years of age, died in Concord, (N. H.) on the 9th instant, who commenced reading the Scriptures in course when she was but seven years old. Up to the time of her death she had read the Bible entirely through seventy-four times.

Jeff Davis has appointed a National (!) Fast for his rebel confederacy.

The People's Press, published at Fall River, has been mulcted to the tune of one dollar for uttering libellous remarks concerning Mr. Prince S. Borden, a resident of that city.

A Richmond paper estimates that the South has lost sixty thousand slaves in consequence of the war, estimated at twenty-four million of dollars.

It is reported that the sea serpent has been captured on the eastern coast of South America.

A Successful Financial Operation.—During the week, a new dodge in finance has come to light, which has bled our banks to the tune of several thousand dollars. It appears, that a new company for the emission of paper money, were in possession of a quantity of counterfeit notes on a Worcester bank, of the denomination of five hundred dollars, which they were anxious to exchange for a different currency. They accordingly marked out a wide field for operations; it covered New York and the New England States; their plan was to have agents in different localities, who were to move simultaneously, and with effect. The banks of Portland, we hear, suffered to the amount of several thousand dollars; one of these spurious emissions found its way into this place, and was presented at the counter of the Quincy Stone Bank. Mr. Randall, the cashier, negotiated it, and we are sorry to learn, that by the operation, he was victimized out of a cool five hundred. At Brighton, they were not so successful; suspicion was afloat there, and the operator for that district had to decamp in such hot haste, that he left his horse and buggy behind him.

The New Conscription Law. It is stated that the first call of the President under the conscription law will be for the deficiency of men under the last two calls. The State of New York is represented as requiring 29,139 men to complete its quota. Over 18,000 of this number is due from the city of New York alone.

Lunch. There will be a free lunch at the Mariposa Saloon this evening.

Public House and Farm.

(The Proprietor being out of health.)

THE well-known sea-shore resort known as the new Squantum House, and Farm belonging to the same, situated in Quincy, about 6 1-2 miles by land, and 2 1-2 by water, from Boston. The Farm is in a high state of cultivation, having about 125 fruit trees in bearing order. The House, Stable, Bowling Alleys, Ice House, Bathing House and fence are in repair. Ice in abundance a few feet from the ice house. The whole was built for, and under the superintendence of the present owner and proprietor, expressly for a Public House, and has a large run of custom. It is situated within three rods of the best Beach on the South Shore, in the vicinity of Boston, more than a quarter mile of beach belonging to the estate. This estate would make a beautiful Trotting Park, with but very little expense, the land being almost a perfect level. Clams in abundance on the beach, and Fish by going a few rods from shore.

HEALTH AND STRENGTH SECURED
BY THE USE OF THE GREAT
SPRING AND SUMMER MEDICINE
DR. LANGLEY'S
Root and Herb Bitters

Composed of Sarsaparilla, Wild Cherry, Dock, Prickly Ash, Thoroughwort, Rhubarb, Mandrake, Dandelion, &c., all of which are so combined as to act in concert, and assist Nature in eradicating Disease.

This medicine has been before the public over fourteen years, with constantly increasing success, and is now

The Standard Medicine of the Age.

Its effect upon the system is most wonderful, acting directly upon the seat of disease, clearing the bowels, removing all obstructions from the internal organs, stimulating them into healthy action, purifying the blood, correcting all disordered humors, building up the weakened system, and thus restoring the invalid to health and soundness. They cure and eradicate from the system, Dyspepsia, Complaint, that monster of so many human ills, Jaundice in its worst forms, all Bilious Diseases, Sick and Foul Stomach, Dyspepsia, Costiveness, all manner of kinds of Humors, Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Piles, Heartburn, Weakness, Pains in the Side and Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Fever and Ague and a Torpid or Diseased Liver, a Blotched Face, Foul Stomach, or Bad Blood, to which all are more or less subject in Spring and Summer.

It is highly recommended by Physicians everywhere. Try it, and you will never regret it. No medicine can be like it in its salutary effects. Before inquire for LANGLEY'S BITTERS, and take no other.

Only 37 and 50 cents per Bottle. Sold by Dealers in Medicine everywhere. Orders addressed to

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

THE peculiar taint or infection which we call SCROFULA lurks in the constitutions of multitudes of men. It either produces or is produced by an enfeebled, vitiated state of the blood, wherein that fluid becomes incompetent to sustain the vital forces in their vigorous action, and leaves the system to fall into disorder and decay. The scrofulous contamination is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered digestion from unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending "from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation;" indeed, it seems to be the curse of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children." The diseases which it originates take various names, according to the organs it attacks. In the lungs Scrofula produces tubercles, and finally Consumption; in the glands, swellings which suppurate and become ulcerous sores; in the stomach and bowels, derangements which produce indigestion, dyspepsia, and liver complaints; on the skin, eruptive and cutaneous affections. These all having the same origin, require the same remedy, viz. purification and invigoration of the blood. Purify the blood, and these dangerous distempers leave you. With feeble, foul, or corrupted blood, you cannot have health; with that "life of the flesh" healthy, you cannot have scrofulous disease.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

is compounded from the most effectual antidote that medical science has discovered for this fearful distemper, and for the cure of the disorders it entails. That it is far superior to another remedy yet devised, is known by all who have given it a trial. That it does combine virtues truly extraordinary in their effect upon this class of complaints, is indisputably proven by the great multitude of publicly known and remarkable cures it has made of the following diseases: King's Evil or Glandular Swellings, Tumors, Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches and Sores, Erysipelas, Rose or St. Anthony's Fire, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Coughs from tubulous deposits in the lungs, White Swellings, Debility, Dropsy, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Syphilis and Syphilitic Infections, Mercurial Diseases, Female Weaknesses, and, indeed, the whole series of complaints that arise from impurity of the blood. Minute reports of individual cases may be found in AYER'S AMERICAN ALMANAC, which is furnished to the druggists for gratuitous distribution, wherein may be found the directions for its use, and some of the remarkable cures which it has made when all other remedies had failed to afford relief. These cases are purposely taken from all sections of the country, in order that every reader may have access to some one who can speak to him of its benefits from personal experience. Scrofula depresses the vital energies, and thus gives its victims far more subject to disease and its fatal results than are healthy constitutions. Hence it tends to shorten, and does really shorten, the average duration of human life. The vast importance of these considerations has led us to spend years in perfecting a remedy which is adequate to its cure. This we now offer to the public under the name of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, although it is compounded of ingredients, some of which exceed the cost of Sarsaparilla in alterative power. By this aid you may protect yourself from the suffering and danger of these disorders. Purge out the foul corruptions that rot and fester in the blood; purge out the causes of disease, and glorious health will follow. By its peculiar virtues this remedy stimulates the vital functions, and thus expels the distempers which sicken within the system or burst out on any part of it.

We know the public have been deceived by many compounds of Sarsaparilla, that promised much and did nothing; but they will neither be deceived nor disappointed in this. Its virtues have been proven by abundant trial, and there remains no question of its surpassing excellence in the cure of the afflicting diseases it is intended to reach. Although under the same name, it is a very different medicine from any other which has been before the people, and is now more effectual than any other which has ever been available to them.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL,

World's Great Remedy for

Coughs, Colds, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

This has been so long used and so universally known, that we need do no more than assure the public that its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do all it has ever done.

To Horse Owners.

DR. SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LINIMENT for Horses is unrivaled by any, in and all cases of Lameness, arising from Sprains, Bruises or Wrenching, its effect is magical and certain. Harness or Saddle Galls, Scratches, Mange, &c., it will also cure speedily. Spavin and Ringbone may be easily prevented and cured in their incipient stages, but confirmed cases are beyond the possibility of a radical cure. No case of the kind, however, is so desperate or hopeless but it may be alleviated by this Liniment, and its faithful application will always remove the Lameness, and enable the horse to travel with comparative ease.

Every horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for its timely use at the first appearance of Lameness will effectually prevent those formidable diseases mentioned, to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses nearly worthless.

Poetry.

The Negro on the Fence.

Harken to what I now relate,
And on its moral meditate.

A wagoner, with grist for mill,
Was stalled at bottom of a hill.
A brawny negro passed that way,
So stout he might a lion slay.
"I'll put my shoulder to the wheels
If you'll bestir your horses' heels!"
So said the African, and made
As if to render timely aid.
"No," cried the wagoner, "Stand back!
I'll take no help from one that's black;"
And to the negro's great surprise,
Flourished his whip before his eyes
Our "darkey" quick "skedaddled" thence,
And sat upon the wayside fence.
Then went the wagoner to work,
And lashed his horses to a jerk;
But all his efforts were in vain,
With shout and oath, and whip and rein.
The wheels budged not a single inch,
And tighter grew the wagoner's pinch.
Directly by there came a child
With toiling step and vision wild.
"Father," said she, with hunger dread,
"We famish for the want of bread."
Then spake the negro, "If you will,
I'll help your horses to the mill.
The wagoner, in grievous plight,
Now swore and raved with all his might,
Because the negro wasn't white;
And plainly ordered him to go
To a certain place that's down below.
Then rushing came the wagoner's wife,
To save her own and infant's life.
By robbers was their homestead sacked,
And smoke and blood their pillage tracked.
Here stops our tale. When last observsed,
The wagoner was still "conserved"
In mud at bottom of the hill,
But bent on getting to the mill.
While hard by, not a rod from thence,
The negro sat upon the fence.

A Kingdom by the Fireside.

I am a king in my own domain,
And my little wife is queen;
And jointly over our realms we reign—
A royal couple I ween.

Beauty and grace are the robes that flow
From her lily shoulders down;
The gems of truth on her bosom glow,
And love is her golden crown.

Her dainty hands are brown with toil,
Her cheeks with the breezes kiss,
And she works for a tiller of the soil,
As if work for him was bliss.

I am the king and the tiller, too—
My farm is my proud domain;
And the will to dare, and the strength to do,
Are the sceptres of my reign.

At my touch the teeming earth yields up
Her wealth for my feast and store;
The nectar of health brims high my cup,
My measure of bliss runs o'er.

Oh! ne'er was a happier realm I ween,
Than ours 'neath the arching sky;
And never a happier king and queen
Than my little wife and I.

Choice.

From the heart of blossoming trees,
With swift gladness, leaving boughs
Stirring with the humming bees,
To the quaintly gabled house,
Whose bare roof took all the sun,
Took the rain and summer dew,
Steep and peaked, old and dun,
Gay the little warbler flew—
Left the fragrant blossom-throng,
Left the shadows, sunlight proof,
With a heart o'errun with song,
For his love upon the roof.

Anecdotes.

A son of the Emerald Isle meeting a countryman whose face was not perfectly remembered, after saluting most cordially, inquired his name.

Walsh, was the answer.

Walsh! Walsh! responded Paddy, are you not from Dublin? I knew two old maids there of that name—was either of them yer mother?

A negro woman was relating her experience to a gaping congregation of her own color, and among other things she said she had been to Heaven. One of the brothers then asked her:

Well, sister, did you see any black folks in heaven?

She replied; Oh, you git out—s'pose I went into the kitchen when I was dar?

Said a wag to a colored divine; Why Charley, you can't tell even who made the monkey,

Oh yes, I can massa.

Well, who made the monkey?

Well, massa, the same one made the monkey that made you.

I'd have you to know, Mrs. Stocker, that my uncle was a bannister of the law. A fig for your bannister, retorted Mrs. Grumley, turning up her nose, haven't I a cousin se is a corrider in the navy?

A young officer of the British House of Commons wore a tremendous pair of moustaches, on which one of the members said:

My dear fellow, now the war is over, why don't you put your moustaches on the peace establishment?

Had you not better put your tongue on the civil list? was the prompt and happy retort.

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Dryness of the Skin,
Horror of Disease,	Trembling,
Dimness of Vision,	Wakefulness,
Universal Lassitude of	Pain in the Back,
the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruption of the Face,
	Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases,"

Insanity and Consumption.

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess. The records of the insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Females,

Old or young, single, married, or contemplating Marriage—in many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhea, or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the Decline or Change of Life.

No family should be without it.

Take no Balsam, Mercury, or Unpleasant Medicine for Unpleasant and Dangerous Diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

CURES SECRET DISEASES

In all their stages; at little expense; little or no change of diet; no inconvenience, and no Exposure. It causes frequent desire, and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying pain and inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling POISONOUS, DISEASED, AND WORN-OUT MATTER.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the victim of Quacks, and who have paid Heavy Fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the Poison has, by the use of Powerful Astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage.

Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu

For all Affections and Diseases of

THE URINARY ORGANS,

Whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing.

BLOOD! BLOOD! BLOOD!

Helmbold's Highly Concentrated Compound

Fluid Extract Sarsaparilla Syphilis

This is an affection of the Blood, and attacks the Sexual Organs, Linings of the Nose, Ears, Throat, Windpipe, and other Mucus Surfaces, making its appearance in the form of Ulcers. Helmbold's Extract Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and removes all Scaly Eruptions of the Skin, giving to the Complexion a Clear and Healthy color. It being prepared expressly for this class of complaints, its Blood-Purifying Properties are preserved to a greater extent than any other preparation of Sarsaparilla.

Helmbold's Rose Wash.

An excellent Lotion for Diseases of a Syphilitic Nature, and as an injection in Diseases of the Urinary Organs, arising from habits of dissipation, used in connection with the Extracts Buchu and Sarsaparilla, in such diseases as recommended

Evidence of the most responsible and reliable character will accompany the medicines.

DR. LA CROIX'S

PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES

— ON THE —

Physiological View of Marriage.

250 PAGES AND 130 ENGRAVINGS. Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the infirmities of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret follies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, palpitation of the heart, suicidal imaginings, involuntary emissions, blushings, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a Boarding School Miss, a College Student, and a Young Married Lady, &c, &c. It is a truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.

YOUNG MEN who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy, may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATMENT.

We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled hpysicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under our care will now have the full benefit of the many NEW AND EEFICACIOUS REMIDIES which we are enabled to introduce into our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us heretofore as a Physician in our PECULIAR department of professional Practice, for the past twenty-five years.

FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results will use none but Dr. De Laney's Female Periodical Pills. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box,) though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.

Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.

TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to which their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.

THE "ELECTRO-GALVANIC PROTECTIVE." For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last 20 years. Price reduced to $10.

The SECRETS of YOUTH UNVEIL'D

A Treatise on the Cause of Premature Decay—A solemn warning. Just published, a book showing the insiduous progress and prevalence among schools, (both male and female,) of this fatal habit, pointing out the fatality that invariably attends its victims, and developing the whole progress of the disease, from the beginning to the end.

It will be sent by Mail on receipt of two [3] cent Stamps.

☞ Attendance daily from 8 in the morning till 9 at night, and on Sundays from 2 till 5 P. M.

Medicines with full directions sent to any part of the United States or Canada, by patients communicating their symptoms by letter. Business correspondence strictly confidential.

U. S. MARSHAL'S OFFICE,
New York, Nov. 6, 1861.

WM. GRAY, Esq.: DEAR SIR—Two months ago, my head was almost bald, and the little hair I had was all grey, and falling out very fast, until I feared I should lose all. I commenced using your Hair Restorative, and it immediately stopped the hair falling off, and soon restored the color, and after using two bottles my head is completely covered with a healthy growth of hair, and of the same color it was in early manhood. I take great pleasure in recommending your excellent Hair Restorative, and you also may refer any doubting person to me.
